A Note From the East

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt, Secretary of State Hull and the Japanese Ambassador, in a momentous effort to decide the question of peace or war in the Pacific, sat down together around a White House table yesterday to see if America and Japan could solve their explosive differences without shooting.

A personal message from Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye to President Roosevelt, delivered by Ambassador Kichisaburo Nomura, led to the conference, which is likely to affect deeply the future of every nation with a stake in East Asia.

The meeting, called as war clouds were gathering in the Orient, was unique in the tempestuous history of the American-Japanese relations. It arose from a set of circumstances which had brought the two countries to a crisis over American determination to continue sending war aid to China and to Soviet Russia, in spite of Japan's announced determination to create a "new order" in the Far East.

Other Meetings Ahead

Secretary Hull told reporters after the meeting that it would be followed by another, and perhaps several others.

The two nations, he said, are engaged in an effort to work out in what he termed an intimate and personal way the problems and questions between them.

Hull would not say whether the purpose of the conferences was to reach some written agreement—such as a neutrality pact—or merely a verbal arrangement.

The nature of the message from the Japanese Premier to the President was a guarded secret, but it was apparent that it was instrumental in bringing about the three-man talk in the President's office.

Hull said at a press conference after the morning meeting—which lasted 45 minutes—that there had

Army Weeds Out Reserve Officers

New War Department orders will relieve most Reserve officers now on extended active duty, and give most Regular Army line officers promotions.

The Post also learned last night that provisions affecting the Reserve officers will be applied to National Guard officers.

At least 25,000 officers are expected to be affected by the orders.

Guns for Soldiers

Gen. Lear Calls for Team Play To Put the Army at Its Peak

The Post today incorporates in its series "Guns For Soldiers" the address of Lieut. Gen. Ben Lear, commanding the Second Army, to his 100,000 officers and men, at the opening of maneuvers yesterday near Hope, Ark.

This address was made by a fine soldier to a fine young army.

It expresses better than any recent pronouncement the spirit that has made America great.

It should be required reading for every defense worker in Washington—for every citizen in this country.

When Gen. Lear says "By perseverance, by work, by correction of mistakes, by learning team play, we will make progress" he expresses exactly what The Post is asking for in "Guns For Soldiers."

By Lieut. Gen. Ben Lear

THE Army phase of maneuvers is about to begin. There will be plenty of work for everybody in this command. By perseverance, by work, by correction of mistakes, by learning team play, we will make progress.

After that phase is completed, we will enter the maneuvers between the Second Army and the Third Army. This will be the biggest and most important Army undertaking in our peacetime history. It will be a test of our training up to this point. Again every man will do his best, learn by his mistakes one day so that he may do better the next. That is what we are here for. That is why in rain or in heat, under forced marches and long nights on the road, every man will put out his best effort. Remember, each soldier is important, each squad is important. The individual contribution of the soldier, the collective contribution of squads, platoons, companies, regiments and divisions, will make this Army more fit to fight, more fit to serve the Republic. To do less than that would be to deny our country our best services.

I am confident that you will do well—each and every one of you. I am confident that you will answer those critics who have belittled the American Army.

Denies That U. S. Soldiers Are Quitters

JUST like you, I read the newspapers and magazines and take note of what they say about the Army. Like you, I read and discuss with my associates articles that are critical. There have been some I haven't liked at all. I don't like it when it is said or inferred that the American soldier is afraid of his weapons, that he is a potential quitter, that he is too selfish to give his time and efforts ungrudgingly to his country when his national leaders tell him solemnly and gravely that the Nation faces a crisis.

We aren't that kind of men. We are not represented by the disgusting quotations that reflect on the spirit, the manhood, the character, and the patriotism of the young American. We are not the kind of men that any foreign dictator would prefer to have as enemy troops. I resent all such inferences and allusions. I am confident that you join me in that resentment.

I am being very frank with you. We are all on the same team. A general officer's job is a combination job of player and coach. But we are all equal in playing the game—the most honorable game in life: Service to our country. That calls on us to put out—unstintingly.

WE will never get paid for that service what it is worth. We will make sacrifices and have hardships that others will not share. We will know labor and sweat and fatigue at a time when we know there are plenty of others who are taking it easy.

Second Army Can Take It, He Asserts

But that's the soldier's life in a time of emergency. And if war is brought to this Nation, you will suffer hardships and deprivations that will make your period of training and of field work look like child's play. And that, too, is the life of the soldier when his country is threatened. It is a real man's life.

Well, young men of the Second Army, can you take it?

I'll answer for you, from my most profound conviction: YOU CAN; and if called upon on the battlefield, YOU WILL.

That's what I think.

Now I don't feel a bit sorry for the American soldier.

He is treated as no other soldier in the world is treated. He eats the best and most nourishing food. He wears the best clothes. He is given the best medical attention. And while his pay is small by some standards, it is the biggest pay received by any soldier under the sun. And the hospitality of America towards the soldier is unrivaled anywhere.

I AM not sorry for you, either, because you are giving your time for the period of the emergency to your country—even this additional time about which there has been so much talk. I know that most of you have left jobs. I know most of you would be home earning high wages if you were not in the Army. I know you would like to be back in the affectionate atmosphere of your family, in the company of

Gas Rationing Not Yet in Sight, Davies Tells Senate Probers

A special Senate investigating committee, told yesterday that no legal authority existed for compulsory rationing of gasoline, will hear testimony today by the Maritime Commission's chairman, Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, on the muddled petroleum situation.

Principal witness yesterday, as the Capitol Hill inquiry opened under chairmanship of Senator Maloney (Democrat), of Connecticut, was Ralph K. Davies, acting petroleum coordinator for national defense.

It was, however the petroleum unit's council, J. Howard Marshall, who informed the investigators of the lack of authority to impose rationing upon gasoline consumers. His opinion was in response to a question by Maloney.

Davies, who earlier had read a 51-page statement to the committee, told the members that rationing is not yet on the horizon. He added, however, that September deliveries to filling stations will have to be reduced 15 per cent below July. At present the curtailment is 10 per cent.

Police Sure Capital Man Tells Truth

Suspect Also Admits Slaying of Seventh Woman in N. Y. and Attacking Six Here

By Alfred E. Lewis
Post Staff Writer

Acting Police Superintendent Edward J. Kelly announced early today that a 38-year-old man had confessed to the rape-murders of Miss Jessie Elizabeth Strieff and Mrs. Rose Abramowitz.

Kelly declared that the suspect, formerly an undertaker's assistant here, also admitted the sex-slayings of a New York waitress and four Negro women in Washington.

Further, Kelly said, the man admitted he raped four Negro women here and attempted to rape two others.

Kelly told reporters:

"I am positively convinced that the suspects confession to the sex crimes is true."

The police chief identified the confessed killer as Jarvis Roosevelt Catoe, a Negro, of 1700 block Swann Street Northwest.

Murder Victims

The following sex slayings were announced as solved as a result of the confession:

Jessie Elizabeth Strieff, 23-year-old War Department clerk, last June 15.

Mrs. Rose Simons Abramowitz, 25-year-old bride of 30 days, last March 8.

Miss Evelyn D. Anderson, 26-year-old New York waitress, August 24, in The Bronx, New York City.

Ada Fuller, Negro, 1332 Corcoran Street Northwest, last January 22.

Mattie Steward, Negro, 48, 1423 Swann Street Northwest, November 28, 1940.

Josephine Robinson, Negro, 34, Blagden Court Northwest, December 1, 1939.

After Day of Questioning

Kelly's spectacular announcement came after day-long and continual questioning of the suspect by Washington and New York police.

The acting police chief, who was sworn in only yesterday as major and assistant superintendent pending the forthcoming retirement of Supt. Ernest W. Brown, walked into the police headquarters press room shortly after 12:30 a. m. and declared:

"I have an important announcement."

To The Post reporter, who was talking on the telephone, he said, "Hang up the phone."

Then he announced the "solution" of the unsolved cases, which cumula-

She Thought She Hailed Cab

Confession Reveals Attack, Slaying Took Place in ½ Hour

Police Supt. Kelly early this morning released an abbreviated version of Jarvis R. Catoe's confession to the rape-murder of Jessie Strieff, as follows:

"I was going west on Florida Avenue in my own auto during the height of the storm (Sunday afternoon, June 15). The girl was standing at the corner of Nineteenth Street and she stuck up her hand and hailed me.

"'I beg your pardon,' she said. 'I thought you were a cab.'

"'No, this is not a cab,' I answered, and I offered her a ride. I opened the door and she got in.

"I took her to an empty garage and attacked her.

"I used the belt of her playsuit to tie her up and then I strangled her with it.

"I then drove to the garage in the alley (behind 1717 Q Street Northwest) and dumped her body there.

"It all happened in a half an hour."

Chief Kelly said that the killer described in detail the layout of the garage, in which Miss Strieff's body was found the following morning.

Russians Admit Dam Blown Up as Part of Program Of Destruction

(Detailed Accounts, Page 4 and 5.)

By the Associated Press

The Russians officially announced last night that in the most spectacular application yet made of Stalin's vow to leave the invading Germans nothing but a wasted land they had blown up the 110-million-dollar Dnieper River dam below Dnieneropetrovsk.

This spectacular act of destruction, which flooded thousands of square miles of the lower Ukraine, established beyond question that the defenders were in the gravest difficulties in the south, and was accompanied by German claims that their troops had smashed to within 30 miles of the northwestern metropolis of Leningrad. Which one of the four German and Finnish allied offensives had made this advance and precisely where was not stated by the Nazis.

Dnieperopetrovsk Admitted Lost

Moreover, the Russian command officially admitted late last night the forced evacuation of Dnieperopetrovsk itself, a great industrial city which the Germans had claimed some days ago.

The night Moscow communique, issued considerably earlier than usual, had little to add to this acknowledgment save the customary report of continued heavy fighting everywhere.

Capture of Viipuri, most important city lost to Russia in the former Russo-Finnish war, was forecast soon in a dispatch from Helsinki. The same dispatch indicated that with this advance the Finns might seek an armistice with Russia, even though a separate peace could not be signed until the conclusion of Nazi-Soviet hostilities.

[Similar rumors, apparently with some background of authenticity, were reported in Stockholm dispatches to the New York Times.]

But while it thus appeared that the Red flanks were swaying in both north and south, even the Germans conceded that not all the initiative had passed to their arms.

For Russian counterattacks at the center, apparently somewhere in the vicinity of Gomel, and in the Ukraine, were acknowledged in Berlin, although it was claimed that in both theaters they had been bloodily broken.

As to the Russian center, yesterday's dispatches indicated that the action was of the greatest violence. It was in the Ukraine itself where the Russians threw themselves at the Dnieper in an effort to cross back to the west.

Iran Ceases Resistance To Occupation

By Edward W. Beattie, Jr.
United Press Staff Correspondent.

London, Aug. 28.—A vital route for the flow of United States and British war materials to Russia was opened up today when a new "peace government" in Teheran capitulated to the British-Soviet invasion after four days of armed resistance.

Following the Iranian government's "cease fire" orders to its troops, British and Soviet armies already deep into the desert kingdown swept on in a peaceful occupation of oil centers, ports and railroads.

Iran's new premier, Ali Furughi, placed in office Wednesday night by Shah Riza Khan Pahevi, ordered the capitulation with full approval of the Iranian parliament "to avoid bloodshed and internal disorder," it was announced in Teheran.

The new government promised to maintain friendly international relations "especially with Iran's neighbors," meaning British India and Afghanistan on the east, Russia on the north, Turkey on the north-

21 Americas To Seize Idle Foreign Ships

100 More Vessels Expected to Bolster Hemisphere Defense

The 21 American republics agreed yesterday to place in operation all foreign vessels driven into Western Hemisphere ports by the European war.

The action was announced by the Inter-American Financial and Economic Advisory Committee which has been working on the problem for the past seven months in an effort to alleviate a shipping shortage resulting in American waters because of diversion of vessels to take supplies to Britain and the Near East.

Compensation Promised

Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State and chairman of the committee, said he believed the action "is the most important, concrete step ever taken by the Inter-American Committee." He added that it was "signal proof of what united efforts, instead of individual efforts, can do."

While the exact number of foreign ships idle in Western Hemisphere ports was not officially stated, best estimates put the total at around 100.

The committee announced that "just and adequate compensation" would be made to the countries whose vessels are affected.

It said the action was taken "to promote the defense of the economies of the American republics as

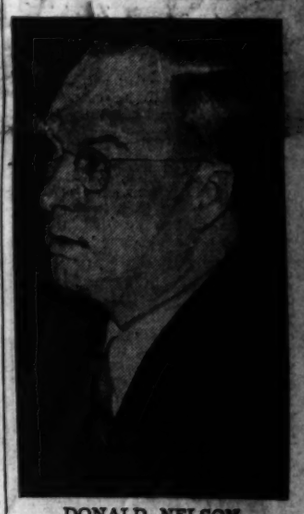
Nelson Executive Director, Wallace Chairman of New Planning Council

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt last night ordered a wholesale reorganization of the entire defense administration, creating for the first time, through the medium of a seven-man priorities and allocations board, a central planning agency to appraise military and domestic civilian needs.

The reorganization, put into effect by executive order, appoints Donald M. Nelson, hitherto director of OPM purchases, to the key post of executive director of the new body, known as the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board.

Vice President Henry A. Wallace was named chairman of the board.



DONALD NELSON

Other members include the present OPM Board (consisting of Codirectors William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, War Secretary Stimson and Navy Secretary Knox), Price Administrator Leon Henderson and Special Presidential Assistant on the lease-lend program Harry Hopkins.

Biggers Going to Britain

At the same time, the White House announced other drastic personnel changes in the defense administration. The most important:

Transfer of John D. Biggers from head of the OPM purchasing division to the post of Minister to England to facilitate British military aid.

Transfer of Edward R. Stettinius, jr., from his position as director of OPM priorities to a newly created post of lease-lend administrator, to work under the supervision of Hopkins.

Nelson was also named director of the OPM priorities division, replacing Stettinius. It was expected that Nelson's former job would be assumed by the present deputy director of purchases, Douglas MacKeachie, and that Deputy Produc-

Senate Committee Approves Nondefense Economy Group

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

Creation of a special "nondefense economy" committee, representing the spending and taxing committees of the House and Senate, was voted yesterday by the Senate Finance Committee, now nearing the end of its work on the Nation's biggest revenue bill.

The committee approved the proposal for investigating ways to reduce civil expenditures in the Federal budget in the form of an amendment to the 1941 tax bill, offered by Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia.

Simultaneously the committee approved a resolution offered by Byrd, not as a part of the tax bill, instructing the Budget Bureau to submit by September 15 alternative sets of estimates for reducing nondefense expenditures by one billion dollars, 1½ billion or two billion. The resolution requires presentation of detailed schedules, agency by agency.

The special Congressional committee, which the Byrd amendment would set up, would consist of the Text of Order By Roosevelt For SPAB

Text of President Roosevelt's executive order issued yesterday creating a centralized priorities and allocations board:

Executive Order

Delegation and Coordination of Priority Authority

By virtue of the authority vested in me by the Constitution and statutes of the United States, and in order to define further the functions and duties of the Office for Emergency Management with respect to the unlimited national emergency as declared by the President on May 27, 1941, and for the purpose of assuring effective coordination of the priority powers and supply allocation activities of the Federal Government in furtherance of and in conformity with the basic defense policies of the President, it is hereby ordered as follows:

1. The Office of Production Management, in addition to the responsibilities and duties described in paragraph 2, of Executive Order No. 8629, of January 7, 1941, is authorized and directed to discharge and perform the following responsibilities and duties, subject to such policies or regulations as the Supply and Allocations Board, hereinafter described, may from time to time determine:

(a) Serve as the coordinating center for the execution of the powers and activities of the several departments and agencies relating to priorities; in this connection, review, clear, and approve for execution all requests or proposals originating from other Federal agencies, private industry, or other sources for priority action with respect to the procurement, production, transmission, or transportation of materials, articles, power, fuel and other commodities; issue or provide for the issuance of all priority orders, warrants, certificates, or ratings with respect to the supply, production, transmission or transportation of materials, articles, power, fuel and other commodities, and, with reference to specific priority authorities vested by law in established departments and agencies of the Government, certify to such departments and agencies, when the Office of Production Management deems such action necessary to national defense, that preferential treatment is essential for certain materials, commodities, facilities or services.

(b) Perform the functions and exercise all the power, authority, and discretion conferred upon the President by Public No. 89, Seventy-seventh Congress, first session, entitled "An act to amend the act approved June 28, 1940, entitled 'An act to expedite the national defense, and for other purposes,' in order to extend the power to establish priorities and allocate material," approved May 31, 1941.

(c) In consultation with the United States Maritime Commission, determine when, to what extent, and in what manner priorities shall be accorded to deliveries of material as provided in section 2 (a) (3) of Public No. 46, Seventy-seventh Congress, first session, an act entitled "To make emergency provision for certain activities of the United States Maritime Commission, and for other purposes," approved May 2, 1941. Deliveries of material shall take priority as provided in said act in accordance with such determinations and the orders issued in pursuance thereof by the Office of Production Management.

(d) Continue to perform the functions and exercise all the power, authority, and discretion conferred on the President by section 2 (a) of the Act entitled "An Act to expedite national defense and for other purposes," approved June 28, 1940.

2. The Office of Production Management may exercise the powers, authorities, or discretion conferred upon it by this order through such officials and in such manner as it may determine, subject to such policies or regulations as the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board may from time to time determine.

3. In order to assure unity of policy and coordinated consideration of all relevant factors involved in the supply and allocation of materials and commodities among the various phases of the defense program and competing civilian demands, there is hereby established within the Office for Emergency Management a Supply Priorities and Allocations Board. The board shall consist of the Director General and Associate Director General of the Office of Production Management, the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, the Special Assistant to the President supervising the defense aid program, the Administrator of the Office of Price Administration, and the Chairman of the Economic Defense Board. The Chairman of the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board shall be designated by the President from among the members of the board. The President shall also appoint an Executive Director of the Board, who will preside in the absence of the chairman.

4. The Office of Production Management shall make available to the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board, upon request, such staff, statistical, informational, fiscal, personnel, and other services and facilities as may, from time to time, be required by the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board to perform its duties hereunder.

5. Consistent with the basic defense policies of the President, the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board shall:

(a) Determine the total requirements of materials and commodities needed respectively for defense, civilian, and all other purposes; establish policies for the fulfillment of such requirements, and, where necessary, make recommendations to the President relative thereto.

(b) Determine policies and make regulations governing allocations and priorities with respect to the procurement, production, transmission, or transportation of materials, articles, power, fuel, and other commodities among military, economic defense, defense aid, civilian, and other major demands of the total defense program.

6. The Office of Production Management through its division of priorities or any other of its divisions or subdivisions shall formulate general plans and programs providing for allocations and priorities with respect to the procurement, production, transmission, or transportation of materials, articles, power, fuel, and other commodities among military requirements, economic defense needs, total civilian demands, defense aid needs, and other major elements of the total defense program. Such general plans and programs shall be submitted to the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board for approval or modification.

7. There shall be within the Office of Production Management a Division of Civilian Supply, to be in charge of a director appointed by the Office of Production Management, with the approval of the President. The Division of Civilian Supply shall represent civilian interests relating to the supply and priority activities of the Office of Production Management. It shall formulate plans and programs providing for the equitable distribution among competing civilian demands of the materials, articles, power, fuel and other commodities made available by the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board for civilian use. Such plans and programs shall be submitted through the Office of Production Management to the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board for approval or modification.

8. The title of the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply, established by Executive Order No. 8734, of April 11, 1941, is hereby changed to Office of Price Administration.

9. Nothing in this order shall be construed to include the power to determine the disposition or transfer of any defense articles to the Government of any country whose defense the President deems vital to the defense of the United States, as provided in Public No. 11, Seventy-seventh Congress, First Session, entitled "An act further to promote the defense of the United States and for other purposes," approved March 11, 1941.

10. The Priorities Board of the Office of Production Management described in paragraph 5 of Executive Order No. 8629, establishing such office, is hereby abolished.

11. Executive Orders No. 8629 of January 7, 1941, and No. 8734 of April 11, 1941, are hereby amended accordingly, and any conflicting provisions of these or other executive orders are hereby rescinded.

Rosenman's Study Resulted in SPAB Order

SAMUEL I. ROSENMAN, on his return to the Capital.

Yesterday's executive order, constituting the third revision of the Nation's defense administration, is the fruit of one of the most intensive "listening campaigns" in official Washington.

Author of the plan is New York Jurist Samuel I. Rosenman, an important Roosevelt adviser ever since the Chief Executive was Governor of New York.

Judge Rosenman—dubbed by the President as "Sammy the Rose"—was called on by the White House several weeks ago to solve a fierce "jurisdictional dispute" which had arisen between Priorities Director E. R. Stettinius, jr., and Price Administrator Leon Henderson, over rights and authorities to issue priorities and material allocations for indirect defense needs, such as railroad cars, pipe lines, power plants, tankers, etc.

Beginning his work shortly before the President's "vacation cruise" with British Prime Minister Churchill, Rosenman spent hour after hour with almost every key defense official in Washington, lending an ear to the advice and complaints of each. There followed conferences at which Rosenman's conclusions were "tried out" on various officials, and the ultimate drafting of various solutions from which the President could choose.

Before Rosenman was called in, various draft executive orders had been prepared to settle the priorities fight, none of which was acceptable. Rosenman concluded that the functions were indivisible and not subject to splitting between two or more agencies.

Rosenman, born in San Antonio, Tex., in 1896, graduated from Columbia Law School in 1919 and was a member of the New York Legislature from 1922 to 1926. From 1929 to 1932 he was counsel to the then Gov. Roosevelt. Next year he was appointed to the New York Supreme Court and was later elected to a 14-year term.

Rosenman has done several "behind the scenes" tasks for the President and has long been a confidential adviser on major Presidential speeches and declarations.

SPAB's Nelson Long Urged Central Control

Donald M. Nelson, key man in yesterday's drastic revamping of the defense planning agencies and executive officer of the new Supply and Allocations Board, is expected to lead the new body from an organization strictly concerned with priorities of scarce materials into the master defense planning agency which he has long advocated.

The soft-spoken, pipe-smoking former official of Sears, Roebuck & Co., who has hitherto headed the Office of Production Management, division of purchases, is known to favor an over-all "civilian planning board" which would pass on the competing requirements of all the various foreign and domestic military agencies, as well as domestic, nondefense industries.

He has urged that a centralized body be created where all requirements could be assembled and plans made to meet them. Lack of such a body, he has privately indicated, is responsible for the industrial dislocations now setting in among civilian factories not able to receive scarce raw materials, and for failure to meet all the raw material needs of the hitherto uncoordinated demands of Army, Navy, Britain and other foreign belligerents, indirect defense industries, Maritime Commission and many others.

Although the new Supply Priorities and Allocations Board is not directly charged with such functions, its gradual assumption of them is believed inevitable.

One White House official asked if yesterday's move was hte long overdue reorganization of the defense agencies which had been widely demanded, replied:

"This isn't the real McCoy yet, but it can be."

Nelson arrived in Washington last summer, with the beginning of the defense program. As Coordinator of Purchases under the National Defense Advisory Commission, Nelson was in startling contrast to many of his colleagues, in never complaining about lack of authority.

According to his subordinates, Nelson immediately sold himself to the Army Quartermaster Corps, ducking questions of authority by simply arguing that his way of doing business was more efficient and practical than the methods previously planned.

As a result, Nelson was responsible for many innovations in Army purchasing, such as buying during slack periods, for the double purpose of lower price and a maximum of industrial stability. A major triumph was the passage of a supplemental appropriation of 175 million dollars early this year in order to buy clothing and shoes for the new Army at the most seasonable and opportune time.

A remark of one official in the OPM production division has been repeated widely. It is:

"This may be less majeste, but I say that Don Nelson is doing the finest job in Washington."

Although Vice President Wallace is chairman of the new SPAB, Nelson is empowered to preside in Wallace's absence. It was freely predicted last night that because of Wallace's other duties as Vice President and chairman of the new Economic Defense Board—whose function, for the first time, was admitted yesterday in a White House statement as "economic warfare"—Nelson would be key official and prime mover of the new and potent agency.

Master Priorities Board Named in Defense Shake-up

To Be Master Planners

At OPM it was freely indicated that although the new board was specifically concerned with priorities and allocations of materials, it would probably grow into an overall planning agency the lack of which has been a major deficiency in the defense program.

It was understood that the board would study long-term requirements of materials and tools for all the various defense purposes, lay plans for stimulating supply and eliminating bottlenecks and, generally, become the master planning agency for defense production.

A White House statement accompanying the order pointedly remarked that "from time to time the board will sit with the President" and has power to make recommendations to him, presumably to direct other agencies in the Government to carry out defense supply policy.

Work of Rosenman

The reorganization was the fruit of work by Judge Samuel I. Rosenman, of the New York Supreme Court, and a long-time adviser of the President.

Other provisions, which shifted the civilian supply function of the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply to a new division in OPM and ended a split of priority powers between OPACS and OPM, have the effect of restoring to a single agency all defense allocation and priority authority.

Specifically, the order cut the name of the the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply back to the Office of Price Administration. Henderson, however, will still control civilian allocations as the director of the new OPM Civilian Allocation Division, ranking with the other four OPM divisions of production, purchasing, priorities and labor.

The new Supply Priorities and Allocations Board, immediately abbreviated to "SPAB," is charged with the duty not only of dividing up the available supply of materials between military needs, defense-aid needs (requirements of England, Russia, China and other victims of German aggression), and the total civilian needs of the people of the United States but also will equitably allocate the supply between the different civilian industries and users in the United States," the statement declared.

To Rule Economic War

The declaration added that the board "also will have the power to determine the amount to be allocated to the needs of economic defense recently assigned" to the new Economic Defense Board headed by Wallace.

As a member of the SPAB, Wallace will presumably be mainly concerned with the material requirements for economic warfare, such shipments of key machinery or metals to South American countries to forestall economic domination by Axis forces. As chairman, it was understood that Wallace for the most part will relinquish the duties to Nelson as executive director.

Henderson's chief concern on the board will be with allocations of materials among competing civilian needs in the United States, while Hopkins is expected to be mainly involved in mapping requirements of British, Russian, Chinese and other foreign belligerents.

Knudsen and Hillman's concern is expected to be with domestic production problems, while Stimson and Knox will represent priority and allocation demands of the Army and Navy.

The new agency will bring together for the first time around one table all the agencies in the Government having "a major responsibility in distributing the available supply of materials in the United States," the White House statement declared.

Hitherto, the division of authority among at least six agencies has resulted in confusion and increasingly bitter conflicts, particularly between OPACS and the OPM priority division.

Board to Set Policy

Execution of the important functions of priorities and allocations of materials will rest with the OPM, but subject to the policy determination of the new board.

Thus the board will decide, for example, that of given supplies of steel, a certain per cent will go to Army and Navy purposes and defense orders, another fraction to Britain, another part to a Latin-American country and the remainder to domestic American use. Of this remainder the board will also decide, in general terms, how much will be allocated among the competing demands of autos, construction, refrigerators, etc.

The necessary priority and allocation orders to carry out this policy will be executed by the two OPM divisions concerned.

The Presidential statement declared, however, that the board "will have no power to determine the distribution of finished materials—such as planes or guns or ships. Its jurisdiction will extend only to the materials, parts, machine tools, etc., required for their manufacture."

The President also declared that the board would act only "subject to the general policies enunciated by the President."

In vesting in the new board authority over every conceivable commodity subject to priority control, particularly electric power and fuel, the executive order apparently "scotched" Interior Secretary Ickes' desires to be energy coordinator. The SPAB presumably will plan and control the field of electric power over which a conflict between Ickes and the OPM had raged for several weeks.

Biggers Move a Surprise

Removal of Biggers from the post of production chief, which has been, in the early stages of the defense program, the key position under Knudsen and Hillman in the OPM, came as a surprise. A former Toledo, Ohio, glass manufacturer, Biggers made a Washington reputation when he conducted the unemployment census in 1937. As production chief of OPM, however, he has been the target of widespread attacks from New Dealers who have accused him of adhering too long to a "business as usual" philosophy, and of failing to provide the expansion of raw materials in amounts necessary for the defense effort.

The transfer of Stettinius, former chairman of the board of United States Steel, was also unexpected. In recent weeks he is said to have indicated that he believed he could be more useful in a post other than director of priorities.

Yesterday's sweeping shakeup had the effect of leaving Henderson in three jobs—as price administrator, responsible solely for this function and reporting only to the President; as member of the SPAB, where he will probably find himself and his views in the majority "New Deal" group of Hillman, Hopkins and Wallace; and as director of the OPM civilian allocation division, responsible to Knudsen and Hillman, and ultimately to the SPAB.

The White House statement emphasized what will probably be a major headache of the board—the problem of "priority unemployment" resulting when factories are forced to shut down through scarcity of raw materials.

The SPAB is expected to work with the OPM toward the objective of promoting subcontracting of defense orders to factories and communities affected, and of aiding the conversion of the plant's facilities so they can handle defense contracts.

Tokyo Press Rails at U. S. Aid to China

By the Associated Press

Tokyo (Friday), Aug. 29.—Japanese representations to Soviet Russia and the United States over the shipment of American gasoline to the Russian port of Vladivostok were made solely "from a Japanese point of view, but that is not to say we do not consider Axis interests as well," a government spokesman said today.

Iichi Kishi, speaking in place of the regular cabinet information bureau spokesman, Koh Ishii, made the statement in response to queries at a press conference.

(There have been suggestions that the Japanese representations were inspired by Germany).

Dispatch of the gasoline to warring Russia, and United States plans to send a military mission to China have aroused concern and bitter complaints here.

Nothing was known here, however, of the nature of a personal message from Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye to President Roosevelt, delivered by the Japanese Ambassador to Washington.

The Japan Times and Advertiser, controlled by the foreign office, said the military mission constituted virtual American participation in the war against Japan, while the influential Nichi Nichi called the oil shipments "a tremendous problem which means the success or failure of our international diplomacy."

The Times and Advertiser said the mission belied any American intention of seeking a fair and amicable settlement with this country as propounded by Britain's Prime Minister Churchill.

The Roosevelt explanation that the mission will study China's material needs is only a blind for putting United States experts on the Chinese general staff, it insisted.

"The full truth is that the mission is out to give all expert help possible that will improve the military ability of Chiang's army in fighting Japan," it said. "For all anybody knows there are confidential instructions more far reaching in character than advice about shipments. . .

"This is another step of encirclement."

Nichi Nichi raised the possibility that Japan might choose to stake her Far Eastern "face" on the issue of United States gasoline for Russia, against which Japan has complained both to the Soviet Union and the United States.

Japan is denied aviation gasoline, and its shipment to Russian Vladivostok, so near to Japan, is humiliating, Nichi Nichi said. It described the Japanese representations to the United States as "almost too reasonable," but predicted that with the attention of Japan's entire population now focused on the matter, the government would carry out its determinations courageously and without hesitation.

Hope for Better Relations With U. S. Visible in Japan

By Max Hill
Associated Press Staff Writer

Tokyo, Aug. 27 (delayed)—Beneath the cloak of pessimism that covers Japanese-American relations, glimmers of hope are seen here that the tension of the Far East may be eased.

Japanese trade interests in the Americas are a factor weighed heavily by competent Far Eastern observers discussing the talks now being carried on by Japanese and American officials in Washington.

It is even predicted that Japan will receive new supplies of oil and gasoline from the United States or from the Netherlands East Indies.

It was the Japanese movement of troops into southern-most portions of French Indo-China—within striking distance of Malaya and the British naval base at Singapore—and American stoppage of imports of Jananese silk and exports of oil which created the present tension.

Since the war between Germany and Russia apparently has bogged down, it is explained, Europe may be eliminated for some time to come from the possible markets and raw materials sources on which outside nations can depend.

Therefore, it is argued, an amicable agreement on Far Eastern relations would benefit both Japan and the United States. Although Far Eastern problems are rooted in World affairs, a solution satisfactory to both nations is considered possible.

The man who holds the center of the stage in Japan is the blue-blooded premier, Prince Fumimaro Konoye, whose son recently returned from Princeton University.

It is doubted that Konoye would relish an open break with the United States. Indeed, some persons say that he would decline to take the responsibility for such action.

This means, it is assumed, that if such a policy were enforced, the popular Konoye would resign his premiership and retire—as he has several times before—from public life.

Grip Is Firm

Prince Konoye still holds a firm hand on the cabinet of Japan, despite individual differences of opinion within the government group.

The cabinet is considered one of stability. The chief of foreign affairs, Vice Admiral Toyoda, is described by friends of Ambassador Joseph C. Grew as the most level-headed foreign minister Japan has had during Grew's tour of duty in Tokyo.

Masatsuma Ogura, the finance minister, who had been expected to perform the production role of a Japanese Knudsen, is a businessman and president of the American Japan Society of Osaka.

And Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma, the vice premier and minister without portfolio, now is recovering rapidly from wounds inflicted by a mysterious gunman the day after his appointment to office.

These men are expected to work primarily for continuance of Japan's predominant position in the Orient.

Although the cabinet is weighted with officials who have been sympathetic in the past to the activist policies of the army, it is a group of men wholeheartedly devoted to the economic welfare of Japan.

That, say observers, is above all other considerations.

To such a group, it is argued, the present situation, which limits to special areas of the globe the trade of a nation built on mass-production and world-wide sales, is not a desired condition.

Canada to Fill TokyoMinistry, Vacant 3 Years

Ottawa, Aug. 28 (AP).—Appointment of Brig. W. W. Foster, district officer commanding Military District No 10 at Regina, as Canadian minister to Japan will be announced soon, it was learned tonight.

The Tokyo post has been vacant since December, 1938.

A reliable informant said the decision to send Foster had been reached following Prime Minister Mackenzie King's arrival last week in the United Kingdom.

The decision to send a new minister to Japan apparently was believed based on advice from the British government and speculation tonight was along two lines:

1. United Kingdom authorities may consider there is good ground for hope that the Pacific situation, brought about by Japan's expansionist moves, is about to become less critical; or

2. Britain may feel that the situation will become such that it will be advisable for her to break off diplomatic relations with Japan, in which case a Canadian minister perhaps would be left in Tokyo, providing a means of empire contact with Japan—along the lines of the contact now being maintained through Canada with the government of Vichy France.

The President's Day

By International News Service

PEACH FOR PRESIDENT: Into one of the President's most earth-shaking days walked pretty, brunette Peach Queen Margaret Emery with temptations for the President: (A) abasket of Michigan peaches; (b) an invitation to come out and spend the weekend in her home town, Romeo, Mich., and watch the Michigan peach festival reel off. Gen. "Pa" Watson took both the invotation and the peaches, explained that Mr. Roosevelt, unfortunately, had a prefious date at Hyde Park, accepted the peaches on his behalf with thanks.

"VERY INTERESTING:" The week's gem of understatement came out of the President's first conference. Promptly at 10:30 Secretary Hull arrived, caucused with the Boss. Fifteen minutes later Japanese Ambassador Kichisaburo Nomura took small, quick steps into the President's office; 45 minutes later Nomura exited, having given the President a personal letter from Japanese Prime Minister Prince Konoye, and only Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Hull know what else. Fifteen minutes after Nomura departed, Secretary Hull came out, said the talk had been an exchange of information and ideas on numerous matters before the United States and Japanese governments — which got a broad, unbelieving grin from the correspondents—described the powwow as "very interesting."

BUNDLES FROM BIGGERS: John Biggers, OPM's production chief, loaded to the gunwales with charts, saw the President, showed him the charts, gave him the glad tidings of the impending production skyrocket, heard first-hand something about the OPM shakeup.

OUT: After lunch the President slipped out of his office, into a waiting car and took advantage of the bright, cool day to ride around the countryside for an hour. Shortly after his return, Judge Rosenman's plan for reshuffling the national defense set-up began leaking out all around town; Spokesman Early worriedly called a conference, unveiled the plan.

U. S., Japan Open Series of Parleys

All indications were that the conversation was not limited to Japan's objections to shipments of American oil to Russia by way of Vladivostok, "under the very noses" of the Japanese. Japanese protests this week to Moscow and Washington over these shipments, which were met by a Russo-American warning to the Japanese to keep "hands off" their shipping, were the immediate cause of the crisis that the three statesmen began attempts to solve yesterday.

The Ambassador was asked yesterday whether the oil shipments were the principal question raised in the message, and he replied:

"I don't think so."

The President, said Hull, will undoubtedly reply to Konoye's message.

When he was asked if the talks would result in easing the Far Eastern situation Hull declined to predict their outcome.

There was no reason to believe that the United States would sacrifice any portion of its basic Far Eastern policy, which has rested on aid to nations resisting aggression, freedom of the seas and an open door for the trades of all countries.

How determined the Japanese would be to insist on their special rights in China and their self-asserted "Monroe Doctrine" for the Far East, could not be ascertained from any official pronouncements here yesterday.

In official American quarters there was ample evidence that the United States was in complete sincerity in taking part in the conversations and has entered them with a real hope of achieving a satisfactory agreement with Japan.

It was admitted, however, that there were major obstacles to be considered that include:

1. Japan's four-year investment of war in China, contrasted with increasingly important American measures to help China resist.

2. Japan's recent occupation of Indo-China and advance toward Thailand, contrasted with American, British and Dutch determination to stop Japan's southward drive.

3. Japan's complaint that the United States should not deny her oil and other war materials while shipping them to Russia almost under the muzzles of Japanese coast defense guns.

4. Japan's membership in the Axis, contrasted with the fact of American support of Russia in her struggle against Germany, the senior Axis partner.

In addition to these major phases of American-Japanese relations, there were a host of lesser questions that the conferees could consider. These included:

1. Japan's need to export silk, banned from the United States by an embargo.

2. Japan's desire for American supplies of oil, steel, machinery and similar supplies, from which she is cut off by American export control.

3. The problem of shipping between the two countries, which is now virtually nonexistent due to American freezing of Japanese assets and Japan's counterorder freezing United States assets in Japan.

4. The years-old question of freedom for Americans to trade and travel in the Japanese-occupied portions of China.

5. Difficulties besetting Americans in Japan and Japanese in the United States who want to return home.

The United States, by moves in recent weeks, has placed itself in a strong bargaining position for talks to settle differences with Japan.

Freezing of Japanese assets, coupled with export and shipping control, gave the United States control over all trade with Japan.

Japan Seeking Concessions From Thailand, Chinese Hear

Copyright by New York Times

Hongkong, Aug. 28.—A Chinese report alleges the receipt of information from Formosa that the Japanese are planning an early move involving securing a stronger position in Thailand, in pursuance of which they are presenting demands based on military, economic and political requirements.

The military requirements envisage Japan's delivery of large quantities of military supplies to Thailand and the dispatching of a military mission to Bangkok, as well as the use of bases in Thailand if Japan is attacked by a third power.

The economic demands allegedly require preferential Japanese purchasing of the Thailand rice crop, preferential importation into Thailand of Japanese goods, while Thailand must join the so-called co-prosperity sphere.

Politically Thailand will be pressed to discard her leanings towards the democracies and to accept Japanese tutelage. Meanwhile the Japanese Fifth Column is allegedly redoubling its activities in Thailand.

Thailand Adopts Wartime Bills

Bangkok, Thailand, Aug. 28 (AP).—Two urgent bills prepared by the government for possible wartime emergency were adopted by Thailand's National Assembly today.

One specifies "wartime duties for the Thai people" and the other amends the criminal code to include a penalty for participation in any rebel government which might be set up outside the kingdom.

Introducing the bills, the minister of justice declared they were necessitated by the current world uncertainty.

Leningrad's Sea Approaches All But Theirs, Nazis Say

Berlin Now Feels City May Be Starved Out, Not Stormed

By C. Brooks Peters.
Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Aug. 28.—German forces advancing on Leningrad from the south, southeast and west are in some sectors only 30 miles distant from that city, authoritative quarters in the Reich capital asserted tonight.

The hour of decision in this sector, the Germans add, is rapidly approaching. All of Estonia, they declare, excepting the beleaguered cities of Reval and Baltic Port (Paldiski) and the two former Estonian Baltic Islands of Dagoe and Oesel, are now in their hands.

When, in the near future, Reval and Baltic Port have been taken, the Germans assert, the control of the Finnish gulf, to all practical purposes, will be wholly in their hands. Viborg is encircled. So, in the German view, once Reval and Baltic Port have fallen the Soviets will be forced to abandon Hangoe and thus be left with Kronstadt and Leningrad.

The Russian navy, informed quarters here asserted, will then be deprived of all radius of operations both in the Baltic and the Finnish Gulf.

Not only have German land forces advancing northeast from Novgorod cut the Leningrad-Moscow railway, it was insisted here tonight, but they have also advanced "considerably" beyond that vital communications artery.

The objective of this drive is to join hands with allied Finnish forces on the "southern third" of the east bank of Lake Ladoga. There continued to be reason to believe, moreover, that German motorized units have already reached the southern bank of Lake Ladoga and that an iron ring has been closed around Leningrad.

Evident satisfaction is discernible in German quarters relative to the turn which military activities have taken in the past week, particularly in the northern and southern wings of the invasion.

The most important at the moment is undoubtedly whether the German forces will endeavor to storm Leningrad or, as informed quarters here have repeatedly suggested, march past it and starve it out. Leningrad, with the direct Moscow railway line cut and indirect lines running over Soltsy and Wolchowstroj at best subjected to heavy aerial bombardment, is unquestionably in a critical situation. The Finns, it was said here, moreover, have not only encircled Viborg, but also advanced beyond it to the south.

At dawn yesterday the Russians apparently endeavored to erect a bridgehead across the Dnieper River somewhere south of Kiev, the capital. German artillery, however, is reported by D. N. B., the official news agency, to have thwarted the enemy's operation and to have inflicted heavy casualties on the Soviet infantry.

German sappers and infantrymen are reported to have assaulted and captured a large unnamed island in the Dnieper.

Attempts of enemy river craft to shell German positions on the west bank of the Dnieper yesterday are said by D. N. B. to have been fruitless. One monitor and one tug, the German agency asserts, were set afire by German shore batteries.

The German air force is reported successfully to have bombed the Zaporozhe-Pavlograd Railway yesterday, to have destroyed lengthy stretches of track and five trains and to have set afire the station at Slavgorod. In the Black Sea, south of Ochakov, meanwhile, other German flying formations are credited by D. N. B. with having landed bombs on two Soviet auxiliary cruisers.

Reds Destroy Gigantic Dam

INDUSTRIAL PRIDE—Moscow announced officially last night that Russian forces have blown up the great Dnieper River dam, industrial pride of the Soviet revolution. This is a view of the dam.

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Aug. 28.—Russia announced tonight the deliberate destruction of her proudest industrial achievement, the great Dnieperopetrovsk Dam and all its works, in grim proof of the Soviet determination to leave for the invading Germans no single instrument of value.

It fell to S. A. Lozovsky, Soviet vice commissar of foreign affairs and official spokesman, to confirm the act which had been widely rumored for the past eight days.

"We blew up the dam," he said with a solemn nod of his head, "so as not to allow this first child of the Soviet five-year plans to fall into the hands of the Hitler bandits."

He did not disclose the date, but as if to leave no lingering doubt that this 110 million dollar keystone of the entire central Ukraine industrial system was shattered, he added:

"All measures were taken not to permit the Germans to make use of the dam and its machinery."

Thus came to an end after nine years of reality a project which had been a Russian dream since the days of Catherine the Great and which was completed in the fourth year of the first Soviet five-year plan by an American engineer, the late Col. Hugh L. Cooper.

The dam was situated near Zaporozhe, 50 miles south of the great industrial city of Dnieperopetrovsk in an area where the German forces now are entrenched. The Russians, incidentally, acknowledged the German claim of the capture of Dnieperopetrovsk. (The Germans also claim to be in Zaporozhe.)

Its great turbines, which first turned in May, 1932, had supplied a surrounding area of 70,000 square miles and a population of 16,000,000 persons with an annual output of 2,500,000 kilowatt hours of electric current.

Gone now, by Lozovsky's account, are the 140-foot dam structure, one of the largest in the world, its half-mile length, which served as a bridge across the Dnieper, and the nine generating units on the west bank, the largest ever built.

(The General Electric Co. and the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. manufactured them.)

Ruined, too, are the three navigation locks on the east bank, the feature which first had attracted Russians to the idea of a dam as a means of drowning the falls which had prevented deepwater shipping upriver to Kiev.

Premier Joseph Stalin added the hydroelectric feature, and the dam was begun in 1927.

As it rose, it became to Russian communism a realistic symbol of the Lenin dream: An electrified Russia ruled by the workers.

Col. Cooper, who had built the Wilson Muscle Shoals Dam in the United States, and many others, turned the dam and its works over to the heavy industry commissariat in 1932, and became the first foreigner ever to receive the order of the Red Star, in a ceremony on the dam.

Now all is rubble, a climactic gesture in the "scorched earth" policy which Stalin himself proclaimed.

Elaborating on this theme, Lozovsky said that when Germany overran countries in the west, she was strengthened by her loot, whereas even in retreat the Russians are hindering the invader.

German hopes of seizing the Ukraine's crops "came to naught," he said. The populace wrecked or removed tractors, combines and trucks and hid enough food for their own use.

"The Germans will get nothing!" he concluded.

Finns Claim Key Canal Near Viipuri

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, Aug. 28.—A Norwegian newspaper correspondent returning from the Finnish front said tonight that the Finnish flag had been hoisted over the castle at Viipuri, most important city obtained by Russia in the 1939-40 Russian-Finnish war.

There was no official report as to whether Finnish troops had captured the city, 70 miles northwest of Leningrad. Erik Bjertnaes, the correspondent, said many thought the present Finnish-Russian war would be finished within two or three weeks, when Finnish aims would be realized.

A Finnish army correspondent reported that the strategic Saimaa Canal which approaches almost to the outskirts of Viipuri was in Finnish hands. The story said, a Finnish wedge had been driven down the canal northeast of Viipuri until it reached Juustila, where the lowest locks are situated.

Finnish-Russo Peace Feelers Rumored

Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, Sweden, Aug. 28.—With the impending fall of Viipuri rumors of a rapid Russian-Finnish armistice have begun to circulate in the best informed neutral circles in Helsinki, Finland, it is reliably learned here.

When the correspondent of Stockholm's Social Demokraten queried tonight a highly authoritative Finnish source on whether the story published in a New York newspaper to the effect that peace feelers were extended from Helsinki to Washington was correct, he got as a reply "an extremely interesting statement."

The Finnish censors, the paper states, prevented him from telephoning this statement himself. The fact that he was given such an interview, combined with the cutting of the telephone wires by the Finnish censors, is considered by Stockholm observers as an indication that there may be some truth in the rumors of armistice feelers.

Nazis Pressed Back in Center, Reds Say; Rains Help Seesaw Defense of Leningrad

By C. L. Sulzberger
Copyright by New York Times

Moscow, Aug. 28.—Units of the Red army commanded by Gen. I. A. Koneff have renewed their successful series of counterattacks on the Central Front, battering through two hastily constructed German defense lines, it was reported today as the tremendous battle for Leningrad seesawed back and forth, and continued heavy rains muddied the terrain, slowing down the speed but not the intensity of the action.

For 24 hours enemy forces have been fighting desperately on the Kingisepp, Gomel, Dniepropetrovsk and Odessa salients, seeking to attain immediate objectives and get their retarded offensive going again before the weather, especially in the center and the north, turns worse, with resultant clogging effect on transport and motorized operations.

Development of Gen. Koneff's counterattacks, which have been going on intermittently almost a fortnight with small, but persistent gains, may be expected to relieve pressure to a certain degree elsewhere, since it is reported the Germans are being forced to rush reinforcements from the rear and from other fighting sectors in order to check these advances.

Nazi Plans Upset

The tactic of the Nazi high command, as this correspondent has previously pointed out, is believed to be one of extending the extreme north and south wings before trying to move up in the center, but during the past week the Russians have not only prevented any forward movement in the north, where Leningrad is the main objective, but have considerably upset German plans by thrusting back salients along the relatively weaker center.

Today's issue of the newspaper Krasnaya Zvezda reports, in an eyewitness account, that General Koneff's forces, which earlier had advanced more than 12 miles in one action alone, have again recaptured a number of villages around which the Germans had built up a series of defenses, including earthworks, trenches, mine fields, pillboxes and barbed wire barriers.

The newspaper says General Koneff's troops pierced the outer German line, after inflicting heavy losses, and then smashed through a second defensive system before the Nazis were able to organize in sufficient strength to halt the advance.

Although two days ago the Nazis attempted four localized sallies against Gen. Koneff's forces, these were all repulsed, and the action continued successfully, according to the newspaper, with the Red air force giving strong support to the ground troops by bombing and strafing enemy positions.

Foe Short of Materiel

It is asserted that captured documents gave evidence of German materiel difficulties, especially lack of ammunition, aircraft and artillery, on this front. This would seem to indicate that the Nazis are having difficulty in supplying their forces along the extended system of communications.

It is certain that in attempting to rectify local weaknesses in the central sector they will have to draw on reserves from the northern battlefront, which is far nearer and better connected than that of the Ukraine, and this in itself will relieve pressure on Leningrad to some degree.

The German claims to have cut the Leningrad-Moscow Railway are flatly contradicted here, and the city continues to build up reserves of materiel from other parts of the Soviet Union as well as to speed up factory production.

It is reported in newspaper dispatches that inhabitants of the industrial Leningrad district are taking up arms and shouting slogans recalling the district's famous defense against "White" Russian forces during the civil war. Hundreds of older workers who took part in the Red stand for Petrograd in 1919 have already joined up. The city parks are full of squadrons training in handling grenades, rifles and bayonets after working hours. Military discipline has been self-imposed in factories.

Today's Izvestia publishes an editorial calling on industry to increase production, and the workers are receiving considerable attention for the government. Leningrad railway workers are cited for heroism, and cases are mentioned where locomotive crews bringing supplies to the front continued guiding their trains to their destination although wounded by aerial bombardments. Today's radio broadcast the prediction that fascism will find its grave on the walls of the new defenses being built south of Leningrad.

In the south the Russians continued to fight back fiercely as the Germans sought to consolidate their Ukranian gains, and the Soviet action in destroying the famous Dnieper Dam not only ruins much of the industrial potential of the steel fabricating centers but ends the navigable value of the river and removes one of the easiest crossing points to the eastern Ukraine.

The effort imposed on the Germans before they were able to reach Dniepropetrovsk shows that Marshal Semyon Budyenny's rear guard has been fighting a stubborn action, and it would seem to imply a successful withdrawal of his army, which apparently has managed to escape encirclement.

At Odessa, where Rumanian troops have been assigned to the difficult task of trying to capture that well-defended city, combats continue.

After eight nights of quiet, Moscow had another air-raid last night.

Paris Invokes Secret Trials In Move to Halt Unrest

Net Spread for Reds, DeGaullists; Laval Eulogized

By G. H. Archambault

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, Aug. 28.—Following the shooting at Versailles yesterday of Pierre Laval and Marcel Deat, all signs point to immediate repression of Communist and similar activities throughout France, especially in the occupied zone. It will be stern and swift.

An authorized commentary implies that the German authority in the occupied zone has now left to the French government responsibility for the repression of communism. It says in part:

"When they attacked a member of the German army (an officer killed in the subway) two Communist agitators knew that they risked involving the whole population in general measures of extreme gravity. The wisdom of the occupying authority has allowed the country to avoid the worst—the fate of the nation will not be at the mercy of troublemakers in the pay of a foreign power.

"But it should be stressed that this has been made possible only because the French government has been able to impose its authority on the whole country and to get the situation well in hand. New rigorous measures will be taken against the members of the central committee of the Communist Party. The recent attempt (on Pierre Laval and Marcel Deat) will be punished with the same energy and rapidity. Thus, the government and the people, in their solidarity, manifest their complete sovereignty."

The commentary recalls, moreover, that the new measures against communism set no limit "to the research of past responsibility." This means that they are retroactive.

Trial to Be Speeded

Paul Colitte, the young man who fired the shots at Versailles—he has just reached his majority—will appear before a special section in the very near future. His case is simple juridically, since his deed was public and later he confessed premeditation.

Colette is described as a "Communist-Gaullist." Press comment in Paris attributes the shooting to "Anglo-Judeo-Soviet" incitation. Le Petit Parisien writes, for instance:

"Laval and Deat before, during and after our defeat showed such patriotic clearsightedness that they earned the hatred of the enemies of France. The suppression of the great servants of our country has ever been a British tradition. And it is sufficiently notorious that the Soviets stop at no crime."

Allies Are Blamed

The newspaper Aujourdhui, after pointing out that at the Versailles ceremony the Marseillaise had been played on an official occasion in Paris for the first time since the armistice, proceeds: "Thus France was reentering the European community. This was too much for London and Moscow. They placed a weapon in an assassin's hand."

Le Matin says, "Gaullists allied with Communists already have much French blood on their hands. They have shed it at Dakar, in Syria, and yesterday in Versailles. They will shed it again no one knows where. But whatever may happen they will not win their frightful war."

In the unoccupied zone the press also links the shooting with Communist propaganda and considers that the measures just taken for its repression are very opportune.

west and British-controlled Iraq to the west.

By their swift invasion, launched at dawn Monday after the Shah's refusal to oust 3000 to 5000 German agents from the country, the British and Russians seized control of the last possible foothold left open to Germany in the Near East, excepting Turkey.

(In Berlin official Nazi quarters said that Iran capitulated "because when a gangster attacks you in your house it is obviously foolish to attempt to defend yourself if you have no weapons." President Roosevelt was alleged to have been a "confederate" in the invasion because Iran provided the only feasible route for American war shipments to Russia.)

(In Rome the Italian commentator Virginio Gayda minimized the strategic importance of Iran's capitulation but warned that "the war will be partially transferred to central and southern Asia where the Axis forces will in due time seek out the enemy as they have done in other theaters of war").

May Stiffen Turkey

The establishment of formidable Anglo-Soviet forces in Iran is expected to greatly influence Turkey to present a stern front against any Nazi pressure.

It was stressed again officially that neither Moscow nor London has designs on Iran's territory or integrity.

The same pledge was given at the time of the British seizure of French Syria and Lebanon and Iraq.

For several hours before the final capitulation the situation had been confusing in view of the Iranian cabinet shakeup and announcement of a general mobilization in Iran, bringing the armed forces to between three and one-half and four million men.

The mobilization appeared, however, to have been largely designed as a precaution against possible internal disorders.

Reds 125 Miles in Iran

A Russian communique said that Soviet forces advancing "without opposition," had struck as deep as 125 miles into the country from the north, taking four more towns. They were Turkmanchai, 70 miles southeast of Tabriz; Danargan, 30 miles southwest of Tabriz; Harganrud, near Turkmanchai, depest point of Soviet penetration, and Kachan, on the Caspian Sea.

The British forces fought their way against "token resistance" through important Paitak Pass in the western oil area and occupied Karind, 45 miles inside Iran on the highway to Teheran, and seized the important town of Shahbad.

It was disclosed that Lieut. Gen. Edward Pellow Quinan, who has spent most of his life on the Indian frontier, is commander in chief of the British forces in Iran under the supreme command of Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, commander in chief in India.

France Seizes 'Anti-Reds' in Shooting

By the Associated Press

Versailles, German-occupied France, Aug. 28.—Authorities of German-occupied France hauled in numbers of the anti-Bolshevist Legion today in an urgent attempt to determine whether others besides the assassin Paul Colette had joined ostensibly to fight the Russians but actually for opportunity to attack the leaders of French collaboration with Germany.

An unstated number of legionnaires was taken in "protective custody" along with some 300 persons apprehended as suspected enemies of the regime. Widespread arrests intended to prevent the spread of general disorder went forward.

In Paris, the guillotine was busy. The heads of three accused Communists—Andre Brechet, Emil Jean Bastard and Abraham Trzebruche, a Russian—rolled from the block.

They were tried and condemned in secret by a special anti-Communist court—the same sort of court toward which Colette will be rushed for trial—and the announcement indicated that they were deemed responsible for the subway killing of a German officer.

Communist agitators in striking at a member of the German army knew they were risking bringing about general measures of extreme gravity for the whole population whose result is in no way limited to the immediate present," it was added.

Colette, who yesterday shot former Premier Pierre Laval, former Air Minister Marcel Deat, Col. Durvy of the Versailles barracks and a legionnaire named Besset, said plainly that in pretending to join the legion his technique was that of the Trojan horse.

He told an examining magistrate that he was a follower of the Free French leader, Gen. Charles de Gaulle, and that he was happy that shots of his had hit Laval and Deat, both leading collaborationists.

Asked why he had shot them instead of firing on high German officers, who were present at a mobilization of the legion yesterday which gave him his chance to make the attack, he responded:

"Why should you want me to fire at a German officer? I have no reason to do that, because they are in France to carry out their duty."

Authorized persons declared at once that Colette, who is 29 and a ship stoker, had been pushed into his act "by Communist-de Gaullist elements."

He told French newspapermen, they reported, that he had no particular person in mind when he went to the Versailles Barracks with the intention of killing some collaborationist leader. That he learned later that Laval would be at hand and decided to make him the victim.

"I was sure the personages surrounding him were also in favor of collaboration," he added.

"I didn't know it, but I'm certainly glad I got him."

The roundup of supposed Communists was particularly active here and in Paris.

Lucien Sampaix, a Communist journalist and former secretary-general of the Paris Communist newspaper L'Humanite, was sentenced to life imprisonment at hard labor for escaping from a concentration camp in the department of Hautes Alpes in the unoccupied zone.

Three other accused Communists—Pierre Lanant, Bernard Friednann, Andeoln Landondeau—were sentenced respectively to 15, 10 and 7 years.

Nazis Reported After Turk Deal On Dardanelles

By the United Press

Ankara, Aug. 28.—German Ambassador Baron Franz von Papen, delaying his scheduled departure for Berlin, today submitted to President Gen. Ismet Inonu "Germany's views" on the British-Soviet occupation of Iran from which German nationals fled into Turkey throughout the day.

(A Sofia dispatch quoted diplomats in the Bulgarian capital as saying that Von Papen is seeking an agreement with Turkey whereby Germany hopes to entrap the Russian fleet in the Black Sea and close the Dardanelles to the Soviet warships as a route of escape.)

Inonu received Von Papen in the presence of Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu, who earlier had conferred with the British, Russian, Iranian, Afghanistan and Italian ambassadors.

Saracoglu also was reported authoritatively to have been visited by United States Ambassador John Van A. MacMurray who advised him that the United States fully supported the British-Soviet occupation of Iran.

Von Papen was understood to have postponed his flying visit to Berlin, scheduled for Wednesday, in order to consult with Inonu and Saracoglu.

In connection with Von Papen's visit to Inonu it was revealed that the German legation has reserved 12 rooms at Ankara's best hotel for a German trade mission which will arrive September 8, to be greeted at a large diplomatic reception.

German business men already were reported to be in Istanbul negotiating for the purchase of a variety of articles needed by the German armies in the Soviet Ukraine.

Most of the Germans in Iran were reported tonight to have escaped into Turkey.

A group of 60 Germans reached Istanbul during the day and another trainload passed through Ankara later.

Turkish official quarters and the press were relieved at the armistice and end of hostilities in neighboring Iran, pointing out that "the conflict between two of Turkey's close friends and allies had been most embarrassing."

R.A.F. Pounds Ships, Airfields By Daylight

By International News Service

London, Aug. 28.—Royal Air Force fighter squadrons attacked German shipping, ports and airdromes in occupied western Europe in daring daylight attacks today the air ministry announced late tonight.

The port of Rotterdam was severely battered by fighter-escorted bombers in a late afternoon attack which came shortly after strong forces of Spitfire and Hurricane fighters carried out an offensive sweep over northern France.

At Rotterdam, according to the air ministry, direct bomb hits were scored on ships, wharves, and waterfront buildings.

Seven bombers and five fighters were listed as missing.

Today's activity followed heavy raids on the great Nazi Rhineland industrial center of Mannheim late Wednesday night and early Thursday, the ministry announced.

Huge fires were started among Mannheim's numerous factories and railway yards bombed.

During the same hours, smaller forces of bombers attacked other points in western Germany and along the Nazi-occupied French "invasion" coast. In the latter area, Boulogne, Dunkerque and Ostend were bombed.

No British planes were missing in any of these raids, the ministry asserted.

Sidelights of the War

Nazis' Latest: Storm Cannon Resembling Tank

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Aug. 28.—The German army in cracking the obstinate Soviet bridgeheads on the western bank of the Dnieper employed what is virtually a new weapon—mighty, low-slung, swift "storm cannon"—according to eyewitness accounts of the fighting in the Ukraine reaching Berlin.

The storm cannon, which look like sawed-off tanks when moving but expand cobra-like into powerful artillery when within range of the enemy, have been used in all the previous campaigns but apparently never in the number and with such important assignments as in the war in the east.

The eyewitnes reports tell hair-raising stories of their exploits in the "Battle for the Bridgehead" on the west bank of the Dnieper River. One storm cannon is said to have destroyed 22 Soviet tanks. Another story tells of one of these tank-cannon moving to within 20 yards of the Soviet artillery positions and blowing them "out of existence" in several volleys.

Axis Sea Power Seen Imperiled

London, Aug. 28.—If the British Navy and the Royal Air Force can continue to destroy enemy shipping on the same scale the next six months as the last six, the Axis sea power will be in a "damned dangerous situation," an admiralty official said today.

Repeated successes by the Royal Navy, plus the 580 attacks by the fleet air arm, bombers of the coastal command and R. A. F. fighters and bombers heave already sunk 4,007,000 tons of enemy merchant shipping since the war started or almost 50 per cent of the known German and Italian tonnage at the war's outbreak.

The official pointed out much of the recent success must be credited to the R. A. F. On July 16, he recalled, in an attack on a convoy near Rotterdam 17 ships of an estimated tonnage of between 90,000 and 100,000 tons were sunk and five other ships of a total tonnage of 40,000 tons were damaged and [illegible] days later four ships of about [illegible],000 tons were sunk off the Dutch Coast.

Bride of Month Was Attacked, Slain March 8

Petite, red-haired Rose Simons Abramowitz, 38, and bride of a month, was criminally attacked and strangled the morning of March 8 in her two-room apartment at 1901 Sixteenth Street Northwest. She was the first white victim in a series of six slayings here.

The woman's body was discovered by her husband, Barney N. Abramowitz, 33, Social Security Board lawyer, upon his return from work at 1:30 p. m.

She lay on the day bed, dressed in a red-and-black flowered print house frock, brassiere and stockings. Her shoes had been placed neatly on the floor.

On her throat were the finger marks of her assailant.

Abramowitz had last seen his bride at 8:30 that morning, when he left for work. Screams and pounding were heard by residents of the apartment house between 10 and 11 a. m. However, no evidence of struggle was discovered in the apartment by police.

A Kansas City girl, Mrs. Abramowitz came to Washington in February, was married here February 8.

Quantico Marines Seek Buried Cash

United States Marines at Quantico, Va., are on a treasure hunt. They would like to recover a military strong box, containing about $25,000, which was hastily buried when the Capital was invaded during the War of 1812. The rumor persists that the chest is still buried in the navy yard.

Another souvenir wanted to add to other relics in the museum at Quantico is the sword which Lieut. Israel Green of the Marines bent double when he made a thrust at the abolitionist, John Brown, at Harpers' Ferry in October, 1859.

your wives and sweethearts. A soldier always thinks of home. That is perfectly natural. It was natural in 1776, in 1861, in 1917.

I know from long experience how a soldier will growl and grumble and enjoy having an audience to hear his hard-luck stories. I've done it myself, and I've listened to it for more than 40 years. It is an American trait—and as old as the Army. But it is too bad that so many civilians don't understand it. It is too bad, too, that there are those who are trying to provoke this grumbling. There are forces at work constantly, day and night, that are trying to destroy the fitness and preparation of the American Army. That is one way the dictator nations have made war—to undermine the spirit and confidence of those they would strike. They did it to France. You saw it.

Holds Kicking Is Trait of Americans

We know there are agents of enemy forces and enemy powers within our country, trying to spread dissatisfaction and suspicion, trying to bewilder us, trying to fill us full of confusion.

That also is an old game of those that fear us. They have done it in other countries. In the armies of other countries they have succeeded. Great armies have been destroyed and the will of peoples has been shattered by this war from within to kill the spirits of men.

WATCH out for these activities. You may suspect some of those persons who cry on your shoulders and ask you to cry on theirs. Your best friends are men who expect the most of you—that demand of you your utmost efforts.

There are a great number of people that think of their Government only as an institution that will give them a handout. The soldier can entertain no such thought. It is he that must give to his country—his time, his labor, his endurance, and perhaps even his life. His reward? To have served his country. There is no other reward.

The soldiers that established this Nation and won freedom for all of us knew but few victories but experienced much of defeat, disaster, destitution, hunger and rags. They were eight long years doing the work that created for you this Republic that you, in your turn, may be called upon to defend. You have inherited this land and its blessings because of the blood and the sacrifice of men of preceding generations. Because it is your turn now, because your generation may have to carry its load and be called to make its sacrifices, would you fail? I think not. I know you would not fail.

Army Not One-Year Patriots

By act of Congress, on the recommendation of the President of the United States and the Chief of Staff of the United States Army, your term of service has been extended. It was a grave and thoughtful decision of the leaders of the Nation, that your services are needed for a longer period, that you are named to give that much more to your country. You are not one-year patriots. Nor can we afford in this crisis to have a one-year Army. If we were at war, you would not hesitate, no matter how much you longed for home. If you held back then, the days of this Republic as a proud and free Nation would be numbered.

I AGREE with my superiors that we are in a period of grave national emergency. That emergency has been declared by our Commander in Chief, the President of the United States. Its seriousness has been pointed out by the Secretary of War and by the Chief of Staff of the United States Army. The Congress has acted to prevent the disintegration of this new American Army of which you are a part.

These are our leaders; and we are soldiers. It is our place and solemn duty to make good. It is our obligation to stand in unbreakable unity behind our leaders. It is our place to trust and believe in them. They will be judged not by one generation but by posterity. And so will we be judged—by the America we make safe for our children and children's children. Whatever happens to us, we must make sure that our country goes on—greater and more secure in the liberties and pride of our people.

I am concerned about everything affecting your welfare and your fitness. I am concerned about all influences that are brought to bear upon you. I am responsible to my superiors for the Second Army, and in turn every one of you is responsible to his superiors in rank.

Stresses Need for Team Play

I HAVE held a high ideal for the soldiers of the Second Army. I hold that each and every one of you should improve in character, courage and ability as a result of his Army service—and return to his home a better citizen. I am interested in your moral behavior, your mental improvement, your physical hardening, and the progress of your instruction.

But no matter what I order or your officers instruct, you soldiers as individuals can and should do much for yourselves. You can help yourselves make progress as soldiers and as men. You can train your powers of observation and your understanding of character and human nature. You can hold, individually, the highest standards of personal conduct before yourselves. You can make that pride of country, of uniform, of the unit to which you belong, a vital, living thing in your lives. And you can always learn. All of us have much to learn. That is what I expect of you—never less, always the most.

And now we have our work to do. We move into another phase of our combat exercises in order to improve our skill.

You have done well. Perhaps you have done better than you think.

THOSE of you who were in the Tennessee maneuvers conducted yourselves with credit and learned, I am sure, a great deal. Every day seek to learn more, until you have a passion for perfecting yourself as a soldier.

I want all of you to know what every movement, exercise, and tactical disposition means. I want the chain of command to work from the top down to every squad. I want the soldier to ask questions and seek the answer. We have an Army of highly intelligent men. I want that intelligence put to use.

And now—if anyone is to ask you what your objective is—what OUR objective is, tell him this: AN ARMY FIT TO FIGHT . . . an Army fit to meet veterans in the field and take the field away from them, and suffer the least losses.

That's our objective; and individually and collectively let everyone put out his greatest effort to attain it.

And now, soldiers of the Second Army, I call on you for an all-out effort, day by day and month by month, to make this Army fulfill that objective—to make the men and commands of the Second Army fit to fight. And I wish you good luck.

Tomorrow: Congress Dodges the Tax Issue

Senate Finance Group Approves Creation of Nondefense Economy Committee

Secretary of the Treasury, the director of the Budget Bureau and three members each from the House Ways and Means and Appropriations and the Senate Finance and Appropriations Committees.

The amendment requires the group to report to Congress and the White House its findings as to the feasibility of cutting Federal spending for relief, farm benefits, NYA, CCC, public works and other nonmilitary items.

At the same time, it was writing into the tax bill the economy proposal the committee found an estimated 209 million dollars of additional revenue in new or increased taxes on corporate income, admission tickets, telephone service and electric light bulbs.

The committee boosted from 5 to 6 per cent the levy on the first $25,000 of a corporation's surtax net income and from 6 to 7 per cent on the amount over $25,000. The increases are expected to bring in 100 million dollars.

By increasing from 10 to 15 per cent the admissions tax, affecting every movie patron and sports fan, the committee tapped an estimated 72 million dollars in new revenue.

The committee lifted from 5 to 10 per cent the tax on monthly telephone bills. The new rate would produce about 23 million dollars.

A yield of eight million dollars is anticipated from the 10 per cent manufacturers' tax on electric light bulbs, approved by the committee yesterday.

Total revenue increases provided by the bill now stand at $3,688,500,000, Chairman George (Democrat), of Georgia, announced at the close of yesterday's committee session.

The goal originally set for Congress by the Treasury was a bill to produce 3½ billion dollars more than existing tax laws. As passed by the House, the measure would have raised $3,236,700,000 in additional revenue. The Senate Finance Committee, in revising the House bill, passed the 3½ billion mark two days ago and arrived within striking distance, in the view of several members, of 4 billion.

Achievement of the 4 billion mark appeared unlikely last night, however, with only a few major proposals for increasing revenue still awaiting committee action.

The committee yesterday rejected a gasoline tax increase from 1½ to 2 cents a gallon, which would have returned 127 million dollars. It also turned down a proposal for raising the new jewelry, furs and cosmetics retail sales tax from the House-approved rate of 10 per cent to 15 per cent.

By a 9-9 tie vote the committee failed to adopt a proposal for a 2 per cent increase in the graduated levies on excess profits, which would have realized about 50 million dollars.

The committee rejected by a 15-2 vote a proposal by Senator Downey (Democrat), of California, that it levy new social security taxes to provide a minimum monthly pension of sion|td sion of $30 for all unemployed persons of 60 years or over.

Chairman George said the committee action was chiefly "a vote against including the proposal in the pending bill, rather than a vote on the merits of the idea."

Other Actions

In other actions yesterday the committee exempted newsreels from the new 10 per cent tax on photographic apparatus and provided that no new or increased excise levies shall apply to installment payments on articles contracted for before enactment of the 1941 revenue bill.

The committee also approved an amendment giving corporations the right to make annual declaration of the value of their capital stock, instead of every three years, and extending for 30 days beyond September 29 the period in which corporations can make their declarations.

Senator Byrd, after committee approval of his nondefense retrenchment amendment, told reporters:

"It is little short of outrageous to impose the burden of this tax bill upon the citizens of this country without at least a sincere attempt to reduce Federal expenditures outside of essentially emergency items."

Angus McDonald, Canadian minister of naval affairs, was on his way to Ottawa after a two-week visit to England. He was accompanied by Percy Nelles and Frank L. Houghton, members of his staff.

D. C. Driver Acquitted In Hyattsville Death

Glenn R. Evans, 2, of 1732 Eighteenth Street Northwest, was acquitted on a charge of manslaughter yesterday in police court at Hyattsville.

A car driven by Evans struck and killed Camalair James Thomas, 38, Negro, of 42 I Street Southeast, near the Melrose Crossing in Hyattsville on August 11.

tively had led to a Congressional investigation of the Police Department and the greatest personnel shakeup in the department's history.

Kelly, himself former head of the homicide squad of the detective bureau, supervised questioning of the suspect by four members of the squad, who took over the prisoner after New York detectives and prosecutors had satisfied themselves that he was the man wanted for The Bronx girl's slaying.

Later detectives said Catoe was giving them a voluntary oral statement concerning the crimes.

Homicide Squad Chief Jeremiah Flaherty said the suspect gave his questioners detailed information concerning the Abramowitz and Strieff cases, information which had never been made public and which nobody except detectives and the murderer would know.

Robbery Revealed

For instance, Flaherty said, Catoe told them he took $20 from Mrs. Abramowitz. Detectives never had revealed that she was robbed before being found, raped and strangled, in her apartment.

Catoe was seized about 8 a. m. yesterday as he entered his automobile in front of his home.

Washington Detective Sergts. Curtis Trammell, Richard Cox and Fred Rawlinson and New York Detectives M. O'Connor and John J. Carroll. The New York officers had flown here the previous night and with the Washington men kept all-night watch on the suspect's house.

They questioned him all day in connection with the Bronx case and were joined last night by Assistant Bronx District Attorneys Francis X. O'Brien and Edward Breslin and Police Lieut. William Hylan.

After quizzing Catoe all day, they failed to obtain a confession in the Bronx case but expressed their conviction he was guilty before turning him over to Washington authorities early last night.

O'Brien said the suspect, while denying his guilt, had told a story about being hired to drive two white men and the girl's body around the Bronx. The white men, O'Brien quoted Catoe as saying, dumped the body on the lot where it was found.

Most incriminating bit of evidence against the suspect came soon after District police started questioning him.

Six Identify Him

Lined up with six other men, he was picked out by six Negro women as the man who attacked them here late in 1940 and early in 1941. Four had been choked and raped. The other two fought off their attacker.

Then detectives took him into a squad room, where he finally admitted, according to Kelly, that he was responsible not only for these crimes but also for the Anderson slaying in The Bronx and the sex murders here of Miss Strieff, Mrs. Abramowitz and the four Negro women.

Strieff Case Led to Probe Of D. C. Police

The murder and rape of Jessie Elizabeth Strieff, 23-year-old War Department clerk, took place Sunday, June 15, under circumstances so dramatic and mysterious that it precipitated a House inquiry into the conduct of the Metropolitan Police Department and brought about considerable revision of that department's personnel.

Miss Strieff left the apartments she shared with Miss Christine Tankersley at 2110 Nineteenth Street about 2 p. m. to purchase some butter. She had been preparing to bake a lemon pie for her fiance, Stanley Le Blanc, a Government clerk, who was expected to have dinner with the two girls. When she left the skies were threatening and she wore a blue slicker over her sports suit and carried an umbrella.

Fiance Found Her Gone

Le Blanc came to the apartment to find her gone and although she might have been expected to complete her errand speedily he did not become greatly concerned until several hours had passed. The reason was that in the meantime a cloudburst had fallen upon Washington and virtually blacked out the city. Le Blanc and Miss Tankersley naturally assumed that she had taken shelter somewhere from the torrential rain.

Police Are Called

But when hours passed and she had not returned, although the rain had long since ceased, Le Blanc called the police. The police took the steps customary in the case of a missing person, although the peculiar circumstances of Miss Strieff's disappearance might have indicated that it was no ordinary affair. The usual notices were sent out by teletype to keep a watch for the girl.

The next morning there was a sequel on the police teletype machines. The body of Jessie Strieff had been found. It was nude, it bore evidence that the girl had been ravished. A blue line around the neck indicated that the girl had been strangled and later examination bore out that assumption.

The body was found in a garage in an alley in the rear of 1717 Q Street, a dreary alley, overhung by locust trees, walled by unshapely fences, dirty and floored by uneven cobblestones and mud puddles. The garage where the body lay was in the rear of the home of the late Dr. De Witt Croissant, a professor emeritus of English at George Washington University.

Maid Finds Body

Dr. Croissant's colored maid, Frances Williams, went out to put some garbage in a can in the alley and to do so had to pass through the garage. As she opened the garage door she almost stumbled upon the nude body in the dim light.

One leg was draped across the bumper of auto owned by a tenant of the garage. The floor was spotted darkly with thickening blood, but there were no other signs of struggle.

The body was quickly identified and one of the most intense manhunts in Washington's police annals began.

Intelligence officers of the War and Navy Departments, thousands of amateur hawkshaws, and every man the Metropolitan police could bring to bear on the case went to work.

Mountbatten Takes Charge Of Illustrious

By the Associated Press

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 28.—Great Britain's famous aircraft carrier Illustrious, undergoing repairs after a seven-hour blasting by Axis planes last January, was placed under the command of Capt. Lord Louis Mountbatten, cousin of King George VI, in a ceremony today aboard the ship.

Capt. Mountbatten, who succeeded Capt. G. Seymour Tuck, expressed the hope that the Illustrious would soon be in active service again. The new commanding officer, who arrived in America recently by Clipper, will supervise repair work on the 23,000-ton vessel.

Captain Tuck, who was second in command during the attack on the Illustrious by enemy planes near Sicily and at Malta, will be decorated by the King with the Distinguished Service Order for the service he rendered while in charge between decks.

Capt. Mountbatten, who has survived the sinking of two destroyers in this war and has seen action in the Norwegian campaign, in the Atlantic, in the English Channel and in the Mediterranean, made an informal talk to the ship's officers and men. The press was asked not to quote his remarks, but to newsreelmen he said he hoped the Illustrious would soon be in the fight again against Germany and Italy.

His first official duty was an inspection of the Royal Marine guard of honor. He was then presented to the ship's officers and to Lieut. Comdr. Robert E. Vining, public relations officer for the Fifth Naval, and his staff of officers.

The Illustrious, a year old and with a speed of more than 30 knots, was badly damaged in the Axis plane attacks last January. British admiralty reports published in June said the ship's rudder gear broke and the ship careened while bombs started numerous fires and killed about 80 of her crew of 1800.

Gas Rationing Not Yet in Sight

Coordinator and Interior Secretary is vacationing in the West, told the five-man investigating committee:

Dangerous rumors are abroad, possibly nurtured by saboteurs, that a gasoline shortage is being "played up to foster war psychology."

A deficit of 27,800,000 barrels of petroleum products is expected for the last four months of 1941 in the Eastern States, with demand estimated at 199,900,000 barrels and intake at 172,100,000.

The fact that the Navy was unable to obtain bids on 2,500,000 barrels of heavy fuel oil in June for East Coast delivery is proof that a shortage really exists.

The shortage should be materially relieved by spring, provided the supply of tankers is not reduced.

While the Maloney committee, which the Senate transformed yesterday from an ordinary subcommittee of the Senate Commerce Committee to the status of a special investigating body, was launching it hearings, satisfaction was being expressed locally with the 18.5-cents-per-gallon ceiling set for Washington by Leon Henderson, OPACS administrator.

Harry Wainwright, research director of the Gasoline Retailers' Association, said he believed the Henderson schedule to be "very fair, and we recommend that all delears abide by it."

The OPACS head on Wednesday announced a fair price list for 40 Eastern cities, including the Capital, which had the lowest price of all—16.5 cents.

A telephone canvass yesterday revealed, however, that a minority of Washington's filling stations were selling "straight" gasoline at 17 to 18 cents. The majority were asking the approved price, which has been general since the first of the month.

Davies testified that West Coast motorists, who to date, have not been affected by the OPACS 10 per cent curtailment order, will soon be requested to cut down on consumption. His opinion was that Oregon, Washington and other Western States far removed from oil fields will feel the reduction, rather than Los Angeles and southern California, with their many wells.

Under questioning by committee members, Davies said he did not know how many idle tank cars were available.

"Couldn't you obtain the information within 48 hours from such a man as Ralph Budd, the OPM transportation expert?" asked Senator Maloney.

"I suggest that you ask Mr. Budd," replied the witness. "I have found it impossible to get the information."

Budd may be asked to appear before the committee when it resumes the hearings next Wednesday, after recessing this afternoon.)

Conceding that there was much confusion over the situation, Davies said that "the basic difficulty seems to be that no one wants to admit a shortage in spite of the fact that it exists."

"One cannot but wonder," he continued, "if there does not lie behind these efforts to promote confusion and create dissension some purpose, sinister and planned. Is it possible that we have here an attempt at sabotage."

He said voluntary efforts at gasoline conservation and the 7 p.m. to 7 a.m. curfew had failed.

At the conclusion of his testimony, Senator W. Lee O'Daniel (Democrat), from the rich oil State of Texas, observed: "I though we had an actual shortage but, instead, I gather that the public is being asked to conserve reserves. I believe they should be asked to do this and not told that an actual shortage exists."

Plucky Michigan Peach Queen Keeps Schedule Despite Fever

SAMPLE FOR SECRETARY—Secretary of Agriculture Wickard bites into a peach taken from the basket delivered to him at his office yesterday by Margaret Emery, who will reign as queen of the Michigan Peach Festival at Romeo, Mich., over the weekend

Miss Margaret Emery, 19, as plucky as she is pretty, yesterday refused to let a temperature of 101 halt the round of activities that had brought her to the Capital as the Peach Queen of the State of Michigan.

Arriving by airliner at 12:49 p. m., the dark-haired, blue-eyed queen plunged into her time-tabled official appointments with gusto.

Miss Emery, who is winner of a beauty, personality and poise contest and will preside at the annual peach festival at Romeo, Mich., at the end of the month, made her first stop on Capitol Hill.

After lunching with members of the Michigan Congressional delegation and distributing peaches to all diners in the House Restaurant, she rushed to the Department of Agriculture.

There she watched Secretary Wickard munch one of her peaches and continued on to the White House where Presidential Aide Gen. Edwin Watson smilingly sampled other specimens of the four bushels she had brought here. ("I should have brought more," Miss Emery confided later, referring to her fast-depleting supply of the fruit.)

Late yesterday afternoon the strain of being a celebrity was beginning to tell on Queen Margaret. Exhausted by her long airplane trip and her busy day, she took to her bed at the Raleigh Hotel after a doctor found she was running the 101 fever.

Nevertheless, she smiled pleasantly through a press interview and determined to carry on with her program last night.

The queen, whose home town is South Lyon, hopes to take up a career singing on the radio after completion of her university course.

In the meantime she will present peaches to Vice President Wallace and Michigan Senators Vandenburg and Brown today, before her return to South Lyon.

Americas to Seize Idle Foreign Ships

well as the peace and security of the continent."

The United States Government, through the Maritime Commission, will operate the ships now held in countries which do not have "appropriate organization" to man the vessels.

The announcement said the British government had agreed to recognize the transfer of vessels resulting from this plan of operation and to waive its belligerent rights, provided the ships were operated under stipulated conditions.

One of these conditions was that funds from operation of the vessels should not be made available to the countries whose flags the vessels flew "until the present war is terminated."

The vessels must also engage in trade that is not "inimical to the interests of Great Britain."

[Ninety-one vessels had been seized or placed in protective custody by nations of the Western Hemisphere since the war began. Not all countries, however, had taken steps against the ships of Axis or Axis-controlled countries.

[Those acquired were: Five German, 43 Danish, 42 Italian and one Rumanian.]

Employes Honor Retiring Head Of Gray Line Tours

LeRoy Galer, 61, retiring manager of the Gray Line Motor Tours, was presented with an engraved watch by his former employes last night at a dinner in his honor at the Lee-Sheraton Hotel.

Galer expressed his "double appreciation" in a speech of thanks, first for the "loyalty and friendship" of the 56 employes who gave the dinner for him, and second for being "one of the few fortunate enough to be able to retire from the sight-seeing business."

One of the two men who founded the Gray Line company here in 1913, Galer has been manager of the concern since that time. He lives at 1346 Kennedy Street Northwest.

Our Defense Setup

The executive order creating a Supply Priorities and Allocations Board does not effect any radical changes in the powers of existing defense agencies. But, as the President states, it does bring together around one conference table the agencies which "have a major responsibility in distributing the available supply of materials in the United States." The OPM and the OPACS will no longer operate independently of each other in pursuit of conflicting objectives. They will be represented on the enlarged central board and will necessarily comply with the decisions of that unifying agency. Moreover, the board itself will be headed by an executive director in the person of Donald Nelson, the highly efficient administrator who has succeeded Edward R. Stettinius as director of the OPM's priorities division.

Successful reorganization of the Government's administrative machinery for defense calls for strong personalities at the helm to guide the mechanism. This is the merit of the reshuffle. There is good reason to hope that the new setup will provide opportunity for the kind of leadership so desperately needed to put an end to internal disagreements and to maintain a sane balance between defense and civilian needs. So far there has been no single agency responsible for the allocation of scarce supplies between military and civilian needs. The OPM has been chiefly concerned with military needs; the OPACS has championed the cause of the civilian population. What is now envisaged is a complete mobilization of our industrial resources and apportionment of supplies in conformity with general policies accepted by all defense officials.

The task assigned the new board is a stupendous one but, given good teamwork, it should not be beyond the powers of the trained administrators who have been selected to direct this great national mobilization for defense. The good wishes of the country will be with them; and the public will sacrifice more willingly to speed the defense program now that united and purposive planning is to take the place of the former loose and uncoordinated marshaling of our resources.

The Wookey

The other day Mr. W. Averell Harriman, fresh from London, spoke of the "happiness" he had observed among the warring British. The notion that a people could be happy with death and desolation just around the corner sounded a trifle far-fetched. But this is to relate happiness to mundane life and possessions. Happiness, on the contrary, springs from the soul, and comes from an inner sense of unity with the universe. This is what has developed among the British. A nexus has been established between man and man in the presence of a common ordeal endured by a common sacrifice. This has bred an exhilarating solidarity in the nation as a whole. All the reporters note it. At the height of the bombing they observed men whose houses had been demolished turn to the air wardens with the remark "How can I help?" not "What can you do for me?" This is the spirit which illumines the magnificent play, "The Wookey," by Frederick Hazlitt Brennan, now having its premiere at the National. Wookey is the surname of a tugboat captain whose home lies in London's blasted Dockland. The hero, thrillingly played by Edmund Gwenn, is a character who would be admired in fair weather or foul. But in the context of Britain's indomitable struggle he is both type and symbol. The type is the Cockney. In peacetime he was the merry-andrew of the streets of London. In wartime, without uniform and without arms, he is the man in whom there is neither fear nor fright. For fearlessness Sir Ian Hamilton puts him on a par with the finest soldiers in history. Even Hitler in "Mein Kampf" notes the superiority of the man with spirit over the man with arms. The Cockney type in a different ethos is likewise the symbol of the imperturbable calm of all England when the Nazis loosed hell itself upon England. "Morale!" snorted Mr. Wookey, "I don't go for those nasty French words." Psychologists will have to help the historian in accounting for the phenomenon of a still-standing England. How will they account for it? We may only guess. But surely two elements in those little people of England will be given due credit, namely, their superb faith in their own destiny and their integrity of spirit. With these attributes men will move mountains, if the necessity arises. And they will find happiness in both the spur and the accomplishment.

Whither Japan

The protest which the Tokyo government has made to the United States and Russia regarding the dispatch of American war-aid supplies to the Soviet Union by way of the Sea of Japan and Vladivostok has been promptly and vigorously rejected both in Washington and Moscow. There could have been no other reception. As Secretary Hull made clear, freedom of the seas is our traditional policy, and we could not acquiesce in a closed sea in the Pacific while reaffirming sea freedom in the Atlantic. Specifically the Secretary means that the United States will not take kindly to any effort by Japan to interfere with American shipments to Russia. The Russian government for its part has notified Tokyo that any attempt to interfere with Russian-American trade will be considered an unfriendly act.

In the face of these warnings it is unlikely that Japan will attempt a blockade of Vladivostok. To do so at this time would leave Japan open to reprisals which she undoubtedly wishes to avoid. Indeed, the reference to an "unfriendly act" in the Russian statement suggests that Moscow might consider such Japanese action as tantamount to war and reply in kind. And that would be too bad for Japan. For the principal industrial centers of Japan lie within bombing range of Vladivostok. Yet it is precisely because of Vladivostok's proximity to the Japanese islands that Japan is so concerned over American shipments to Russia.

What Tokyo is probably worried about is not that these supplies (which include shipments of high octane gas now on the excluded list so far as Japan herself is concerned) will be sent to the Red armies in Europe. The Japanese probably are afraid that they might remain in Siberia. It is fair to assume from the nature of the Japanese protest to Moscow that Tokyo would feel happier if they could receive adequate assurances that American supplies would not be kept in Siberia but would be sent on to European Russia. But neither Russia nor the United States could permit its commercial or other policies to be dictated by Japan. And Japan's fears about Russia would be put at rest if she herself abandoned her aggression.

That Japan is prepared to do so is anything but clear. The signs, hitherto, have all been pointing in exactly the opposite direction. The occupation of Indo-China, carried out with the consent of the Vichy government, was regarded as the certain prelude to a Japanese attack on Thailand. The reinforcement of Japanese garrisons in Manchukuo suggested that Japan was placing herself in a position to move into Siberia following a Russian defeat by Germany. That defeat, which many expected to occur within three to six weeks, is still far beyond the horizon ten weeks after the outbreak of hostilities. The headache which this Russian resistance is giving Japanese statesmen must be pretty severe. But it must be as nothing compared with the worry over the outline of a powerful anti-Japanese coalition consisting of America, Britain, China, the Netherlands and Russia which is obviously in process of creation in the Far East.

No wonder, then, that realistic Japanese are convinced that Japan's alliance with the Axis bears in it the seeds of a catastrophe for the island empire. All the signs show that the counsel of wisdom for Japan is to seek a modus vivendi with the Western democracies. Maybe that counsel is percolating into high circles in Tokyo. At any rate, the exchange of views which took place at the White House yesterday between Ambassador Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, on the one hand, and President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull on the other may prove of major significance. What was said at this meeting has not been revealed. The same obscurity veils the text of the letter from Prince Konoye which the Japanese envoy delivered to the American Chief Executive. However, in view of the circumstance that it was Admiral Nomura who sought this interview, and that it resulted in "a general exchange of ideas and information regarding numerous matters pending between the two countries," it may not be an exaggeration to suggest that Japan is seeking ways and means of escaping the horns of the grim dilemma upon which her policies of the past decade have now pinioned her.

After these many years of aggression it will not be an easy task for the Japanese to persuade Americans of any change in Tokyo's policy. Fair words are no longer persuasive. And they should not be allowed even to arrest the development of the bold front which is now opposed, in place of timid individual protests, to Japan's aggression. The quintuple concert should be vigorously prosecuted until Japan demonstrates change by action. This does not mean that the path of reconciliation should be closed to Tokyo. But it does mean that the closest scrutiny should be given to any professed change of heart on Japan's part and that the most drastic guarantees should be demanded.

In this connection it is vital that there should be no misunderstanding of our policy in China. Fortunately the dispatch of an American military mission to China under Gen. John Magruder will give the quietus to a fear coming from Chungking that the United States is making a deal with Japan. The fear arose as a result of the Churchill speech last Sunday. Premier Churchill referred to American negotiations with Japan aimed at arriving at "a fair and amicable settlement which will give Japan the utmost reassurance for her legitimate interests." No wonder the Chinese were perturbed. Certainly our country would welcome a detente in our relations with Japan, but not a detente which would mean any sacrifice of Chinese territorial or administrative integrity. This is a policy which has been stated and restated many times. And if the Chinese required any reassurance on that point, they have now received it in full measure in the dispatch of the military mission. This mission will serve to relate our policy with China's defense unmistakably.

No man is better fitted to head such a mission than Gen. Magruder. His knowledge of China and the Chinese has been gained by long residence in China as military attache. He is a soldier, moreover, who knows his trade as few soldiers know it. But he has natural as well as acquired qualifications. Like Admiral Yarnell, who used to be commander of the China Squadron, he is a first-class diplomat. In both of these outstanding officers the compliment means that they have a tactfulness and a resiliency which help them win an objective when blunter men would fail. We are fortunate in America to have such statesmanlike qualities in our fighting services. We need them now in maintaining our policy in a world in arms, and we shall need them tomorrow in doing our part in reestablishing the world as a going concern when the present orgy of military aggression has been liquidated.

Plethora Of Strikes

The record of strikes for the first seven months of this critical year, as released by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, will go down in history as a grave reproach to our industrial statesmanship. The number of man-days lost through walkouts increased fivefold over the comparable period of 1940 when the national emergency appeared to be far less acute. In all 15,750,000 man-days of work were lost from January 1 to July 31. And this, of course, does not begin to tell the story. For in many instances these strikes have been in strategic defense plants where failure to produce machinery, tools or airplane parts has set back the work of other factories holding immense Army and Navy contracts.

An unnamed official suggests that this record should be compared with the sit-down epidemic of 1937 which brought about an even greater waste of human energy. Perhaps he concealed his identity because the suggestion is so thoroughly out of place. The world was not at war in 1937. At that time, moreover, attempts were made to justify the widespread strikes as a means of organizing unions in the plants of employers who were fighting the National Labor Relations Act in the courts. But now the legality of that act and labor's rights under it are no longer open to question, and still many unions would rather strike than invoke it. Indeed, a considerable number of walkouts have been ordered to smash rulings of the NLRB.

The truth is that the Government has provided more extensive machinery than ever before to guarantee to workmen their rights of collective bargaining and to bring about the peaceful adjustment of employer-employe disputes. It follows that there should be a quid pro quo. And, because of the imperative necessity of arming the Nation against Hitlerism, the President, in return for these benefits, has asked all unions and employers to compose their differences without interruption of work. Still strikes holding up defense orders continue to increase. Plants working on War Department orders alone lost 330,000 man-days because of walkouts in July and the total for this month already exceeds 400,000 man-days. Obviously the strike problem, far from nearing a solution, is becoming more serious.

It should be clear to even the most patient apologist for strikes against the preparedness program that it is not enough to set up mediation machinery and call for the hearty cooperation of all. Something more is needed to prevent a comparatively small group of unreasonable individuals from thwarting our efforts to equip a new Army and Navy. And the longer forthright action is avoided, the more serious is the problem likely to become.

REPROACH

Why have you come to me on the night's wings
To stir the smoldering of dreams again?
I had busied my heart with rest, with quiet things;
I had done with love as an old forgotten pain.

And now the sorrowing moon is pale with tears,
And all night long stars from their courses break,
And the wind's crying fills with the old fears
This heart, these lips that tremble for your sake.

Cure For Apathy

As a defense-minded housewife my defense activities lie in the manual rather than the intellectual field—and sometimes I smugly think that the former is more valuable than the latter at this time.

I have, of course, spent much time arguing loud and long against appeasement, against apathy; but at this stage people seem to have so definitely made up their minds pro and con on this war, that nothing short of a good loud bang of TNT will wake them up.

From 7 a. m. lunch boxes to midnight clock-winding, my three men keep me conscious of my duties. My husband's an office worker; one son, a student in aviation mechanics, and another son employed in a defense plant. So I feel that every potato I bake and every tomato I raise is priming the man power of the Nation.

I've registered as an air warden, too. Maybe that's only a gesture so far, but maybe it will serve as an example to others.

As this kind of average American housewife, and fully aware of all the propaganda from both sides, I have become impatient of talk, talk, talk. The more action we get—the more people really working (physically working) to produce and transport goods, the more apathetic ones will fall in line. The definite "antis" are not going to be persuaded anyway.

Curb Speed, Save Gas

In the August 21 issue of The Post there appears an article entitled "Only Ten Days' Gas Supply Left in East." This shows that Mr. Ickes' plan was not very good.

I recommend the following: Confine the speed rate within all city limits to 25 miles an hour; on the roads outside of cities to 35 miles an hour, with the exception that on highways which have no crossroads vehicles be allowed to go 40 miles an hour; then to insist that this regulation be strictly enforced by the police with adequate fines in proportion to the excess in speed on the principle of arithmetical progression.

I also recommend that mechanical stoplights be discontinued except in a very few places where both police and competent traffic engineers advise their continuance. The effect of mechanical stoplights is that when the signal is raised, the vehicles which have been waiting plunge forward at an excessive speed to make up for lost time. This plan would also be an enormous factor in the reduction of accidents, so that when and if mechanical stoplights are discontinued, after the emergency is over, people would have had the opportunity of seeing how much speed has to do with traffic accidents.

John Habinyak

There is nothing so unusual in the seemingly strange behavior of Private John Habinyak, who was tried a few days ago by court-martial at Fort Bragg and sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment for having spat on the floor of the mess hall and for continually refusing to obey orders.

We see pretty much the same type of behavior on the part of certain noted persons in public life who, because of their prominence, are referred to by the dignified term, isolationist. This case suggests, if facts are as the press say, that the prisoner should have been studied by the post psychiatrist before being tried before a court-martial in order to determine whether this soldier was merely a "wiseguy" or whether he was actually suffering from some malady.

Pegler Distorts

Westbrook Pegler's outstanding characteristic, it seems to me, is his ability to overlook facts which do not support his conclusions, or to distort those facts which he cannot overlook.

This characteristic manifests itself in almost every one of Mr. Pegler's articles. Allow me to cite an example from his column this morning.

"President Roosevelt has loaded the Federal Government," writes Mr. Pegler, "with ringers from the left wing . . . who never have been or could have been elected to any office."

I assume that Mr. Pegler refers primarily to his pet peeves, Harold Ickes, Felix Frankfurter, Leon Henderson, and Harry Hopkins. In this case he overlooks at least two important facts which belong in the picture.

In the first place, these men and many others whom Mr. Pegler would doubtless classify as "left-wingers" were appointed to their present positions or to equally important positions prior to the 1940 election. If the American people had disapproved of President Roosevelt's appointments, they had a fair chance to elect someone else. They didn't.

In the second place, the President has also appointed ringers from the right wing (e. g., Stimson, Knox, Knudsen, Stettinius, and Jesse Jones) who, so far as I know, never have been elected to any public office. Whether they ever could have been, only the omniscient but forgetful Mr. Pegler can say.

Kearny Decision

I wish Mr. Lindley could give us a little further information regarding the Kearny situation as outlined in his article in The Post.

As a farmer I am neutral but interested because every dollar that we farmers have to pay in taxes costs us more than the dollars paid by those holding Government positions or the dollars earned by union employes in constructural and industrial occupations. Yes sir; a farmer must pay more for his dollars.

Mr. Lindley said in his article that "no man is compelled to join the union but if he is in he must stay in." That's the way we run our jails and penitentiaries; you don't have to get in but if you are in you have to stay. Quite a new theory on rights and liberties for the United States.

But suppose a man goes to work in the Kearny shipyards, joins the union and after a while decides to withdraw his membership. He gets fired. O. K. Now suppose he goes home, takes a bath and goes back to the employment office. Can he get a job? If not, why not? Mr. Lindley stated that a new employe doesn't have to belong to the union and technically he is a new employe if he goes to a part of the works in which he has never worked. We haven't got down to a legal "black list," have we?

Special Police

In a recent and sensible editorial commenting on the Schulte report and the District's police situation, I noted that you questioned the committee recommendation for a separate special police force to provide for theaters, amusement places, and numerous other details which have overloaded the regular patrolmen in the precincts.

I agree with you entirely that Washington has too many special quasi-police units already, and that, should the new force be established, it would, under private control as proposed, be undesirable.

To meet the problem of conserving regular patrolmen for "first-line" duties, and yet to keep the situation within the proper and unified command of the Metropolitan Police, I suggest that New York City's practice be studied. In New York, all special patrolmen—as they are designated—are drawn from the eligible lists maintained by the police department and are under close police supervision, even to the extent of such details as uniform and equipment. Might it not therefore be advisable that our problem be likewise attacked? Eligible lists could be limited, for example, to men already on waiting lists for appointment as regular patrolmen, and to retired regulars who are specially fitted by experience. Disciplinary control could be vested, under appropriate general regulations, in the superintendent of the Metropolitan Police, to whom employers of special police could explain the particular requirements of the posts for which the men were required.

A further advantage of this arrangement would be that a unified special police force would be available for emergency duty in much the same way as the Reserve components of the services, and could, by the same token, receive standardized training, control and pay.

Defense Of The Poor

We are today spending billions for defense as though they were pennies. I approve of this spending most heartily. It is not, as many are saying, going to bankrupt this Nation! I remember quite well the days not so long ago when the President had to almost get down on his hands and knees and beg Congress for continued appropriations with which to fight poverty and unemployment. In answer to his pleas, the President was almost invariably informed by Congress that he must curb his "wild and ambitious" desires to pour out the Nation's gold.

The same old story about bankruptcy was told over and over again to frighten all against continued spending of billions for relief, as such extravagance it was said would sell the birthrights of the next 75 unborn generations.

Now that Congress knows that it can spend and tax and spend and do almost anything it wants when it wants to, I am hopeful that the knowledge of this fact will abide long after war spending. There is another defense, which is most distant from the hearts of Congress, and must be looked into immediately and wholeheartedly considered after the Nation returns to peacetime needs. It is the defense of the poor! Few men, other than the poor, think of the poor! I know of no better, surer and more Christain way to extend democracy, than for Congress, after the war is over, to feel for the poor of this Nation. With our money, the democracies of Europe, we hope, will destroy Hitler in Europe. With our money, let us destroy within our national borders poverty and all of its attendant miseries!

The Post Impressionist

In A Cafeteria

I had been to Charles Town . . . and every horse I played had either jumped the fence, stopped off on the way around for a drink, or had come out from the starting stall sideways.

The net result was, when I arrived again at the place of departure, my capital consisted of a car token, three pennies and a 25-cent piece.

I used the pennies for the purchase of an evening paper; the car token disappeared in the maw of a coin-box on a street car, and I held on to the silver piece for dear life, every once in a while putting my hand in my pocket to see that it was still there. I knew where I could obtain an evening meal for 25 cents. I had been in this position before.

I alighted from the surface car, walked across the street, and entered the cafeteria.

Being at the far end of the line and hungry, I gazed wistfully at the food, 'way off in the distance, and decided to read the paper.

The person directly in front of me, seeing this, turned around and joined me. He was having a hard time to get his neck over the edges of the paper. I shifted my position in order to let him have an unimpaired view. I asked him if he liked the reading matter; he said "No." So I turned to another page.

There were the usual murmur of voices and clattering dishes; table manners good, bad and indifferent . . . and an occasional dropped knife, fork or spoon or all three. A young man, with a tray loaded to the gun'ls with food, asking a handsome female if he might share her table. Animated conversation of four males at another table. A near-sighted old lady who just missed placing her tray on an old gentleman's bald pate. A customer having a hard time to find an empty table. . . . In short, the usual, and sometimes unusual occurrences that ensue every evening in a crowded cafeteria.

I was deeply immersed in an account of a P. G. A. golf match, when I realized that we had arrived at the food counter. The chap in front managed to remove his face from the paper and was now selecting his dishes. I began to select mine.

Somebody in front appeared to be holding up the line; couldn't seem to decide on what she wanted. She picked up a piece of blackberry pie, looked at it, brought it up in close proximity to her proboscis, and returned it to the counter. The same thing happened to a dish of salad. Finally, an attendant came to the rescue, and the trek to the cash register was resumed.

When, at long last, I shoved my sparsely filled tray under the sharp scrutiny of the cashier, that individual announced without hesitation that the amount I owed was 90 cents.

It was quite a shock. I put my hand in my pocket; the coin was still there. I brought it forth and said "Lady, this is all the money I have, and you can take it or leave it." She glanced again at the tray. "Beg pardon," said she, "75 cents" and smiled. I was sure I had been correct in my estimate. I took my tray and sauntered forth toward the far reaches of the room.

Seated at a table in one corner, I alternated between mastication of the food and perusal of the paper. People walked back and forth all around me, good-looking and bad-looking and all looking for a place to lay a tray.

An individual rushed up to my table. He laid down his tray, transferred the dishes and seated himself. He had not gone through the formality of asking permission to do this. He evidently was in too much of a hurry to bother with such a useless gesture. He attacked his food with mucho gusto, and it disappeared in a whirlaway of meat, vegetables and coffee. He jumped up and left the place like Butcher Boy is wont to leave the Puett gate.

It was all very interesting. The next to share my table was a well-dressed, fine-looking chap, the sales-executive type. He had the confident, easy manner of the man of affairs. He asked politely if he might be seated, did so, and started a conversation immediately. He seemed to be worried about a separate air force. All the other countries of consequence had a separate air force, and why shouldn't we? I felt like asking him what he liked in tomorrow's third at Hagerstown. But I didn't.

Just then a friend of mine stopped off and asked how I'd made out at Charles Town. In a thoughtless moment I said that I'd broken even, including expenses. "Broken even, including expenses," has saved many a face. But that is about all it has saved.

After my friend moved on, the chap at the table said that he'd never been to a race track, that he had always had to earn his money. I'd heard this so many times before I didn't think it required an answer. Whereupon he resumed his discourse on a separate air force, and I finished my meal.

As I was getting ready to leave the place, an old lady, endeavoring to seat herself at a table, slipped, and the tray of eatables slid gently into her lap. A dish of spinach, oddly enough, ensconced itself on her ample bosom, and all you could see was a large expanse of green. Attendants rushed up and started the process of rectifying the situation.

My mind ran back to an afternoon at Laurel and an old campaigner clearing the last fence and romping in, a stout winner; and I, with 83 riding on him across the board, standing there grinning like a monkey.

The horse's name was Spinach.

I walked thoughtfully out to the sidewalk and a starlit evening.

African Naval Bases

By Ernest Lindley

To Offset Hostile Control Of Dakar

LINDLEY

GEN. DE GAULLE publicly offers the United States the use of three French African ports as naval bases. None is suitably located to prevent or parry a Nazi move down the hump of Africa to Dakar. The northernmost is Duala, in the Cameroons, useful as a waypoint for planes destined for Egypt and the Middle East and to supply the Free French troops of Equatorial Africa, but too distant to counter an Axis attempt to control the South Atlantic sea lanes.

De Gaulle's offer is a reminder, however, that there are ways of offsetting hostile control of Dakar. While Dakar has been getting the publicity, at least two other ports on the shoulder of Africa are considered well suited for major naval bases. These are Bissao, in Portuguese Guinea and Freetown in British-owned Sierra Leone.

Freetown is classed as the best of the lot; with much greater anchorage space and deeper water than Dakar. Also, it is better suited for land defense. Freetown already has some docks and a British garrison. It is ours—for use—for the asking; and as this column pointed out more than a year ago, it is one of the two British-owned transocean bases in which our naval strategists are deeply interested (the other being Singapore).

FREETOWN is about 450 miles below Dakar. But Bissao is only about 200 miles from Dakar: and if the Nazis go into the Iberian Peninsula, British or American forces almost certainly will occupy strategic points in the Portuguese possessions.

Still farther north, only about 90 miles from Dakar, is British-owned Bathurst, on the Gambia River, terminus of the new Pan-American ferry service for planes. Shallow water limits the use of Bathurst as a major naval base, but it is useful as an advanced base for both naval and air forces.

Then, off Dakar lie the Cape Verde Islands, which in turn are only about 1,500 miles from Brazil. The Cape Verde Islands lack the natural facilities for a major naval base, but are vitally important as naval and air outposts.

IT WOULD be far preferable naturally, if the Nazis were prevented from getting the use of Dakar—or of Casablanca, farther north in Morocco. But a series of mischances blocked de Gaulle's effort to seize Dakar with the aid of British naval forces last year. Since then its defenses have been strengthened. As things stand now Dakar probably cannot be taken by anti-Axis forces without a sharp fight. When the break comes, it is only too likely to favor the Nazis, with their large air transport service for troops.

Naval and air experts ever, however, that the Nazis would pay heavily for attempts to use Dakar if Anglo-American naval and air forces held Freetown and advance posts at Bathurst and in the Cape Verde Islands.

ALL REPORTS to the contrary notwithstanding, official sources in Washington still assert that Gen. Weygand has prevented the Nazis from filtering into Dakar and other key points in North and West Africa. How long he will, or can, hold firm is, of course, problematic.

But on this there is general agreement: if an American force of some kind would appear somewhere in West Africa, Weygand would be tremendously encouraged to resist Nazi pressure, applied through Vichy, or perhaps later by direct military measures.

Weygand advised the armistice of June, 1940, believing the war was lost and Great Britain soon would be compelled to capitulate. It was an egregious error. He has not yet been convinced he was wrong, but, according to men who have been in touch with him, is willing to be shown. The proof, from his viewpoint, would be the appearance of American forces on the far side of the Atlantic. He has no doubt, American officials have been informed, that if the United States enters the war soon enough the Germans will be defeated.

ALTHOUGH the hump of Africa is across the ocean, strategically it is of the highest importance to the control of the South Atlantic and therefore of the Western Hemisphere. Our Latin-American experts have long recognized that we could not afford to let the Nazis show up at Dakar without resorting to prompt and strong countermeasures: if not acknowledged war, at least the occupation of other key points in West Africa and the Atlantic islands.

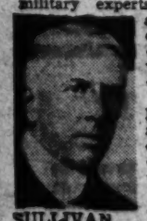
The question, asked by the strategists, is, why wait? In Iran the British and the Russians are at last beating the Nazis to the draw. Will we wait until the Nazis, getting the advantage of the first jump, move into West Africa? The British might move first, but their forces are limited, and psychologically any preventive steps they might take would not have one-tenth the value of the American flag.

Behind the scenes, this is one of the most controverted questions in high official circles; although, it must be hastily added, the signs still are that Roosevelt feels it necessary to let the Nazis draw and shoot first.

Problems At Kearny

By Mark Sullivan

The Right To Select Employes



SULLIVAN

FROM day to day, even hour by hour, we watch the progress of the war. In press, on radio, military experts report to us, and we avidly devour the effects of events, the developments of campaigns.

We watch partly because it is a spectacle, one of history's greatest. But partly we watch because we have direct concern in the outcome. We are on warning that if Hitler wins, one result to us may be likely—armed attack upon our shores. About another result there is hardly any doubt.

Practically every authority warns us, every intelligence tells us, that if Hitler wins he will organize the world outside the United States upon his authoritarian pattern of society, industry and government. Then he will try to force us, by economic pressure if not by arms, to unite with his system, and if we choose to unite with his system voluntarily, we will be obliged, in order to survive, to adopt a corresponding regimentation of our own. The system we would thus be obliged to devise, and bend our own necks to, would not necessarily be identical with the Nazi one. But inevitably it would include the fundamental and oppressive features of the totalitarian model. Against this threat of totalitarianism coming from abroad we are alert. Its progress in our direction we watch with our own eyes and through the eyes of experts. But no experts inform us and few of us are aware of the successive developments here at home that carry us toward a collectivized system of industry, which is the first stage of a completely totalitarian regime. Some of the developments arise without their significance being understood, even by those who participate in them. Some are the hurried actions of harried, well-meaning men, doing what they think is imposed upon them by emergency and expediency.

A GOVERNMENT BODY, the National Defense Mediation Board, decides that a shipyard at Kearny, N. J. should accept what is called "membership maintenance" of a C. I. O. union. That is, the company should agree to discharge from its employ any member of the union whenever the head of the union notifies the company that the member has ceased to be in good standing. This the company declines to accept. Thereupon, the President takes over the plant. It becomes a Government plant.

The first problem is, Will the Government itself do what a Government board said the private owner should do—discharge any worker who the union says is no longer in good standing? That would be revolutionary, a surrender by Government of the right to choose and retain its own employes. In effect, it would be a surrender by Government of a part of its sovereignty. To give to unions of workers the right to say who should and who should not have employment by the Government would be a move in the direction of the early Soviet organization of Russia. That was the period of the sincere if impossible adventure toward a truly "workers' government." It was quickly seen to be unworkable and was supplanted by dictatorship. Among alternatives, the Government might now regard the workers in the Kearny plant the same as Government workers generally. This would greatly narrow the status of the C. I. O. union now in the plant. It would deny the right to strike. Presumably, this would be resisted by the union. There are other problems arising out of the Government's taking possession of the Kearny plant, too intricate to be explained here, many going to the heart of the conflict between free government and authoritarian government.

If Mr. Roosevelt seeks a way out, he can hardly just turn the Kearny plant back to its private owners. That would leave the problem of "membership maintenance" where it was before. It would lead to renewal of the controversy. It would "lose face" for the Government.

There is a way. Mr. Roosevelt can ask Congress to pass a statute fixing the wartime emergency relation between employers and workers. Congress can fix that relation clearly—not putting upon any official or body the responsibility which in this case has caused embarrassment. With such a law passed, the Kearny plant could be turned back to its owners.

Fair Enough

Army Discipline

AT Fort Bragg, in North Carolina, Private John Habinyak, a draftee, has been sentenced to ten years and nine months in the Leavenworth disciplinary barracks for willful disobedience of lawful military commands and his case has been promptly taken up by Congressman Stephen M. Young, a Democrat from Cleveland, who ventures the opinion that the lieutenant first concerned in the case probably would not be worth his salt in civil life. The sentence was subsequently reduced.

This soldier spat on the floor in the mess hall and refused to clean it up, he spat on and littered the floor near his bunk, he refused to clean his mess kit and he finally refused to work as a member of the guardhouse gang. He is by all accounts, a dirty and disobedient soldier who would demoralize any command and set an example which would result in filth, disease and the total loss of discipline.

HE had his trial at which no denial was made and by his attitude he left the officers who tried him no choice but to do their duty or flinch. They acted for the good of the other soldiers of the same command who would have had to live in the disgusting conditions created by this individual or clean up after him. For that they are insulted by a member of the legislative body which enacted the laws which they faithfully enforced.

Army officers have absolutely no defense against the insults of Congressmen who elect to build political prestige for themselves by sounding off under the protection of their special privilege at random and at will. By all published accounts in this case, the lieutenant, Leo J. Kraus, was very patient with the recruit and tried to convince a newcomer that he must obey orders and show decent consideration for the other men with whom he was living.

ALTHOUGH the men in the bunks on both sides of Private Habinyak were reasonably clean, they would nevertheless, have to live amid the mess created by a dirty and sullen sulker or take on the extra duty of cleaning up after him. Men in barracks or in tents have an individual responsibility to one another in the matter of cleanliness and, far from defending a filthy mutineer, the Congressman should have taken the part of the other men who doubtless prefer to take their meals in reasonable cleanliness and to live in quarters appreciably more sanitary than the New York subway.

Unfortunately for Congressman Young's position in this case, the officers are only enforcing laws which were handed to them by the body of which he is a member and the sentence is one that was prescribed by Congress, not by the Army.

The contention that an individual should be permitted to act like some dirty animal violates the rights of all the soldiers who have to live with him and Congress made no mistake in holding that the officers should be not only empowered but required to enforce sanitation and inflict punishment for filth and defiant disobedience.

A BETTER and older method of dealing with Habinyak would have been to tell off some decent soldier to punch hell out of him and repeat the treatment every time he spat in the mess hall or the barracks. But there has been so much meddling with discipline that officers court interference whenever they get tough. Thus, if a sergeant does take a poke at some smelly individual for refusing to bathe or otherwise creating a disgusting nuisance, the officers can be sure that some Congressman will raise a holler about brutality.

It is unjust and contemptible conduct by a Congressman to toss off for publication the casual opinion that a young officer probably isn't worth his salt in civil life just because the young man has had the courage to do a difficult duty obviously in the interest of the enlisted soldiers of the outfit.

France Fights Back

By Barnet Nover.

The Struggle Against The "New Order"

NOVER

A FORTNIGHT ago Gen. von Stuelpnagel, commander in chief of the German army of occupation in France, issued a decree declaring that: "Any person who carries out Communist activity, who carries out propaganda, or who tries to; in brief, any one who supports Communist activity in any manner whatsoever, is an enemy of Germany. Those guilty are subject to the penalty of death." It might be pointed out that a Communist, in the eyes of the German army of occupation, as in the eyes of the Vichy government, is not only one who subscribes to the Moscow creed, but also any supporter of de Gaulle or the British, indeed, any one who does not believe in whole-hearted acceptance of the Nazi "new order."

Gen. von Stuelpnagel further decreed that anyone found in possession of an anti-German tract would be punished by a penalty of 15 years at forced labor.

THE DRASTIC nature of this decree is indicative of the strength and magnitude of the resistance to the Nazis and their agents which has arisen in France. It also reflects the alarm which this developing hostility has aroused in German quarters.

Unless this spirit of revolt is crushed, and crushed speedily, the Nazis may soon find themselves on the horns of a serious dilemma. France is only one of a dozen countries occupied by German troops, and while the German army has considerable reserves of manpower these reserves are not inexhaustible. Indeed, one of the reasons why acts of sabotage are increasing in the occupied area is that, because of the demands made on the German army by the Russian war, the German garrisons in western Europe have had to be reduced.

Unless resistance in France and elsewhere can be crushed these garrisons will have to be strengthened, which means that many fewer men will be available for the fighting in the East. At the same time the attitude of the conquered populations to their conquered makes it increasingly difficult for Hitler fully to mobilize the industrial resources of Europe. Yet the need of doing so grows as the United States, for all the confusion and laggardliness of its rearmament efforts, really begins to transform itself into an arsenal for the nations fighting Hitler.

GEN. VON STUELPNAGEL'S decree came after a period marked by demonstrations, riots and multiplying acts of sabotage in occupied France, particularly Paris. Knowing as the French do the Nazi readiness to apply terroristic methods, one might have concluded from the general's threat that it would be sufficient to restore at least surface calm and order. It has signally failed to do so, however. Acts of sabotage reached a new high in the Paris area in the period following the general's decree with the result that by August 25 the Germans were forced to assign 20,000 soldiers to aid the Paris police in crushing agitation. And then, on Wednesday, there occurred the shooting of Pierre Laval and Marcel Deat.

Both of these men have long been identified as ardent collaborationists. Marshal Petain has been moving in the direction of complete submission to Hitler's will as fast as his aged legs would carry him. But Messrs. Laval and Deat did not believe he was moving fast enough.

It was symbolic that the shooting occurred within sight of high ranking German officers who were helpless to prevent it and during a parade of volunteers who had signed up to fight Germany's battle in Russia. The same Marcel Deat who, two years ago, declared that it would be criminal for Frenchmen to die for Danzig favored having Frenchmen die for Hitler. No tears need be shed for him or for Laval. The most tragic aspect of the attempt on their lives is that it is likely to open the floodgates of Nazi vengeance that may mean the death of many Frenchmen whose only crime is their patriotism and their unwillingness to bow the knee to the conqueror and his French accomplices.

IN THE 14 months that have elapsed since the collapse of France, the French people have awakened from their stupor. Their eyes have been opened to the realities, both of German rule and Vichy treachery. They are now engaged in a struggle against both. In one sense it is a wholly unequal struggle. The instruments of power are in the hands of those whom they detest. The French people, in company with the other conquered peoples of Europe, are fighting on nonetheless. They are encouraged by the fact that the German victory, which the men of Vichy deemed inevitable a year ago, and upon which the Vichyards based all their plans and calculations, is no longer a certainty.

The year that has passed since the fall of France has seen further German victories, some of them spectacular. But the struggle is no longer as one-sided as it was last year and it becomes less so with each passing month. This circumstance, underlined by the duration and extent of Russia's resistance, has given hope to all the oppressed peoples of Europe. And no amount of terrorism is likely to do more than drive underground and then only for a time the spirit of resistance that has developed in Europe. In a very real sense Hitler is now fighting that war on two fronts that he has always sought to avoid.

The Gallup Poll

Majority Favor Extra $30-a-Month Pay For Draftees, Nation-wide Survey Shows

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 28.—The basic pay of a buck private in the Army draft camps would be raised an extra $30 a month after one year's service if the American public had the power to determine the Army wage scale. That fact is revealed in a Nation-wide survey of public opinion by the Institute.

In the draft extension act passed a few weeks ago, Congress authorized a $10-a-month increase. During the debate on that measure various other sums were suggested, including the $30 figure. The majority of voters favor the latter sum chiefly for the reasons that, as they themselves express it, "the boys in the camps should be rewarded for having been kept more than one year," and that with civilian labor making good money in the defense industries, the draftees "deserve more money too."

The survey was conducted among a representative cross-section of voters, throughout the Nation on the following issue:

"For the duration of the war, would you be in favor of the Government paying an extra $30 a month to everybody in the Army and Navy who has been in active service for more than one year, not including officers?"

YES	70%
NO	22
NO OPINION	8

In explaining their attitude toward the issue, voters for and against the raise gave the following chief reasons:

Reasons Against

1. The Government couldn't afford it.
2. It would mean more taxes for all of us.
3. Since draftees get their board, clothes and medical services free, the present pay is enough.

Reasons in Favor

1. It's the least we can do to compensate them for being kept longer than the one year they thought they were going to serve.
2. Civilian labor is making big money out of defense, why shouldn't the draftees get some too?
3. Many draftees left good jobs to enter the Army; they should be compensated.

A Pennsylvania steel worker expressed an attitude typical of many voters when he said:

"If we can spend money for all these war materials for Europe, we can spend more on our boys."

British Misspend Lend-Lease Funds, Wheeler Charges

Lacon, Ill., Aug. 28 (AP)—Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana said today that "the stupidity and folly and recklessness of American leaders have drawn us closer and closer to the European and Asiatic blood baths."

Addressing the annual Marshall County old settlers' reunion, the Senator said that lease-lend funds were being misspent by British officials while "England is lending Stalin for five years forty million dollars at three per cent interest." He added:

"Don't you think that we are being just so many sentimental suckers?"

Then he asked if the Nation was "prepared to spend from 10 to 15 billion dollars for England and Russia while the President coldly vetoes a bill which would give American farmers a modest increase in cash income."

Old Hand At War

Leningrad Has Known Its Horrors

The following sketch of Leningrad, and what may befall this great city, is written by a correspondent who lived there more than two years and who has visited it many times.

BLOODSHED and the death of hundreds of thousands of its citizens by violence or starvation would not be new to Leningrad, now apparently faced by one of the greatest sieges in history.

Thus far the world at large has merely the assurance of Soviet authorities and the patriotic resolutions of Communist organizations that Leningrad's civilians will defend it street by street and house by house, if the 1,500,000 Red army troops outside the city are defeated. They may or they may not. Leningrad is one of the least Russian of the cities in the U. S. S. R. containing a large admixture of German, Estonian, Latvian and Finnish elements. It doubtless also is honeycombed with Nazi agents and Fifth Columnists.

Many Leningraders still remember the horrors of the Civil War in 1917, which caused the city's population to drop from 2 million to 700,000. Hundreds of thousands fled from the city, abandoning homes and all possessions. Other hundreds of thousands died in the bloody street fighting or from hunger.

And That Was Old Style

This correspondent, who lived in Leningrad under the Czar and who revisited it during the Red revolution, will never forget the experience of stumbling on the bodies of those who collapsed and died of hunger on the city's main thoroughfares. Nor will he forget the gratitude of an old lady—widow of an admiral—to whom he gave a single herring. Black bread at that time sold for 80 cents a pound—and 50 cents was a Russian worker's wages for a whole week.

Many wooden buildings disappeared, torn to pieces and used for fuel during the long and severe winter.

Such misery resulted from the old-style war, in which bombers, tanks and other modern means of mass slaughter did not have a part. The examples of Rotterdam, Warsaw and Belgrade may well cause to shiver even the stanchest Soviet patriot in encircled Leningrad.

On the land sides, Leningrad is surrounded by marshes and forests which, however, are traversed by good roads leading into the city. These highways doubtless have been destroyed by the defenders, or soon will be, and rebuilding will be a tough problem for Nazi sappers.

The city itself, however, does not lend itself to guerrilla warfare or civilian defense. It has large, wide, straight main arteries which permit the use of artillery.

Warships Could Help

The depth of the Neva River, which winds through the city, permits the approach of medium-sized warships to the heart of the city. Therefore, if a last ditch defense is made, the Red fleet from nearby Kronstadt naval base may play an important role in the fighting.

Should the German high command decide to obliterate the city by bombing, however, and if Leningrad's air defenses permit such bombing attacks, the loss in human lives probably will run into the hundreds of thousands as the inhabitants cannot be evacuated for the want of somewhere to go.

Tugwell Granted Leave By Puerto Rico U.

San Juan, P. R., Aug. 28 (AP).—The board of trustees of the University of Puerto Rico today granted a one-year leave of absence to Chancellor Rexford G Tugwell to enable him to assume the governorship of the island.

The leave extends from September 19, 1941, to June 30, 1942, without salary. It is believed doubtful that Tugwell will assume the governorship before the start of his leave of absence.

Nearby Fort Becomes Model Community

HISTORIC Fort Washington, Md., once-strategic defense outpost for the Capital, now deserted by the Army, has become a tiny model community for District defense workers and Government employes.

The Army marched its last detachment away a year ago and turned the place over to the Park Service. Since then the old Army quarters have become home for 22 families, sharing the 345-acre reservation with the century-old fort which overlooks the Potomac, 12 miles south of Washington.

Last September when Fort Washington changed hands one Park Service official described it as a "lemon" because they had no funds with which to clean it up and run it. Later a CCC company moved in to clear the site of fire hazards.

Entrance to the fort is through this massive gate. The arch still contains some of the old machinery for raising the portcullis and draw bridge. One of the original barracks can be seen across parade ground

WITHOUT funds for proper building maintenance the office of National Capital Parks hit on the idea of using some of the buildings in a housing project in an effort to pay upkeep costs. The Welfare and Recreational Association, a quasi-Federal agency, agreed to administer the project on a five-year contract.

Typical of Fort Washington's new families is that of M. L. West, a machinist at the Washington Navy Yard. Mrs. West said they were just about ready to go back to Texas last January when he found the little duplex apartment.

"It's just about perfect," said Mrs. West when questioned about how she liked her new home. "I never used to play tennis because we never had a place before, but since living here I've become almost good enough to beat my husband." The Wests have lived in Fort Washington since January 23, have three children, and consider themselves very lucky to have such a nice home which costs them $20 a month.

One of the newer homes in the fort which have been rented to Government employes and defense workers. CCC boys trim the grass

OTHER homes range from 11 rooms with three baths to three rooms with one bath and rent from $20 to $60 monthly. Welfare and Recreation has spent $7500 so far reconditioning the homes, it was said. All available houses have been rented, according to Raymond D. Lewis, deputy general manager, of the Welfare and Recreation Association.

The old hospital is being used temporarily as a boarding house for a group of workmen from a Pennsylvania tree company which is working with the Potomac Electric Power Co. in installing a power line to Indianhead. Eventually, Lewis said, it is hoped to use this building and the old bachelor officers quarters as boarding houses.

THE school problem is complex at Fort Washington, Lewis declared. The Prince Georges County board of education, he said, does not feel it is responsible for the children there because it is Government property. Last term a temporary arrangement was made whereby ten of the children attended the school in Oxon Hill. They don't know what they will do this year, Lewis said.

Besides the buildings there is a swimming pool, three concrete tennis courts and a baseball diamond on the grounds. Picnic tables have been set up near the river.

Someday when the money is available the Park Service hopes to restore the old fort to its former state and convert it into a museum. But now its stone steps and gun ports are choked with weeds.

FORT WASHINGTON has been associated with many great historical figures. George Washington selected the tract because of its commanding position after the Revolutionary War. Prior to that it was the site of an Indian stockade. Today the old fort's towering ramparts bear mute testimony to the skill of Maj. L'Enfant, who designed and built the fort. It was begun in 1815 and completed in 1822.

The old battlement, though grim and foreboding, has never been under fire. During the War of 1812 its commander blew up the powder magazine and spiked his guns without firing a shot after the British had captured Washington.

IT remained an active part of the District's defenses until after the Spanish-American War. During that time, more modern gun emplacements were constructed which are still visible. As warships increased in size, the Potomac's narrowness of channel became the real barrier against a naval attack on Washington. In 1917 the fort's guns were torn out and sent to France. Since then the fort has had no artillery, its buildings being used to quarter troops.

Why It Takes So Long to Make Army's Big Guns

By Gladwin Hill

U. S. ARSENAL, Watertown, Mass., Aug. 28 (the Special News Service).—As a taxpayer, I had wondered for some time why it took so long to make those big guns for the Army.

I had heard tons about priorities and machine tools and bottlenecks, but I still couldn't see why it should take months to make a gun and a year or more to get them into mass production.

After all, a gun is just a hunk of metal with a hole bored through it, and there seemed to be no reason why that couldn't be done in a week or so, three weeks at the outside.

So I came here to find out.

The Watertown Arsenal and the one at Watervliet, N. Y., are responsible for most of the Army's big guns. Watertown does metal casting, Watervliet constructs the guns, and Watertown in turn builds the gun carriages. Brig. Gen. R. W. Case, in charge here, was very patient with my ignorance, and gave me an elementary lesson in gunmaking.

THE first step, it seems, is drawing some plans—blueprints, in great enlargement and detail, with several prints for each of a gun's several hundred parts. A fair-sized gun requires about 1500 blueprints. And the fastest anybody in the world has ever been able to whip up a set of these is a year.

Next, you want to be sure this design will work. So you build a tailor-made gun, each part fashioned laboriously out of metal, with none of the speed advantages of mass production—a job comparable to one man making a motorboat, including the motor. You have to assemble a variety of materials and tools, get them in shape for handling, and then do your work. It takes about a year.

All right, your gun works and you're ready to go into mass production.

FOR your metal work, you have to have a wood dummy of the gun made by an expert wood-carver called a patternmaker. He can't do just a pretty one-piece over-all statue of the gun. He has to carve out each of the gun's hundreds of parts individually.

The patternmaker not only has to be a sculptor, but also a jig-saw puzzle genius. The wood patterns are pressed into moist sand to make molds for metal castings. No piece can have too many angles or corners, or it will mess up the sand mold as you pull it out. The patternmaker has to break down the guns parts into a lot of odd-shaped pieces to avoid this.

All right, your molds are ready. Meanwhile, you have been assembling thousands of tons of variegated materials and machines. Under ideal conditions, all this planning, ordering, shipping and setting up requires six months.

Now you're ready to go ahead with your work—all ready, I had thought, to take your hunks of metal and bore holes in them. A couple of hundred years ago I would have been right, but modern shells require stronger barrels. They're made by two processes.

ONE is centrifugal casting. Molten metal is poured into a tube spinning rapidly. The whirling throws it into a thin layer on the inside of the tube. As it cools and hardens, you get a gun barrel, uniform to a tiny fraction of an inch.

This method can be used only on guns up to 3 inches bore diameter. The bigger ones, like the 16-inch coast defense guns have, as I suspected, to be bored.

But you can't just take any old piece of iron and bore a hole in it. It has to be a steel forging—a long column of metal heated to plasticity and rolled and hammered to make the crystalline structure of its molecules extra strong. This alone may take several days. Then the metal has to be cooled carefully, often by burying it in sand or cinders for some time.

YOUR forging done, the column of metal is put on a lathe, spun at high speed, and cut down to the proper outside size. Then a bit is started in one end to bore the primary hole. After that, there's the rifling—the spiral grooves on the inside of the barrel that start the shell whirling so it will travel straight. It may take a whole day to put the rifling bit through the first time. Then it has to be put through again and again, cutting the grooves a little deeper each time, until they are the right depth to a hair.

You're nowhere near done yet.

On the big guns, the barrels are so long that the metal needs extra support. This is obtained by "shrinking" a metal jacket around your inside barrel. A second barrel, just a shade too small for the inner barrel to fit inside of it, is heated to expand it, and your first barrel is slipped inside of it. When the jacket cools, it clamps tightly around the inside barrel.

Workers stack up barrels for 37 mm. antiaircraft guns in the Watertown arsenal. These barrels have yet to be shaped and straightened

BUT the barrel is the simplest part of the gun. You still have to make your breech, the complicated base of the barrel where the shells are inserted. This is a big machining and assembly job.

When that's done, your gun is ready to be attached to its carriage, the supporting works. I had been inclined to deprecate the carriage as a minor detail, until the general reminded me that the thing about a gun carriage is that you can't fire the gun without it—you might as well not have any ammunition.

Fortunately, when the Army decided it needed a lot more guns, it had the designs and test guns done and the two-year preparation period behind it. What remained was organizing the materials and the tools, which has been done in the interim.

NOW the guns are coming out. At least the general and everybody else says they are. I don't see now how they ever manage to do it at all.

Copyright by New York Times

Now is the time, if ever, to begin that cooperation with the British people for the maintenance of international order of which the Churchill-Roosevelt declaration was the initial step, according to an exhaustive study of "United States cooperation with British nations," published yesterday by the National Planning Association.

The Association, whose chairman is William M. Kiplinger, urges that the international controls, which have been established by the United States, Great Britain, and her allies, in the interests of the prosecution of the war to be continued and adapted to serve the interests of postwar reconstruction.

First, however, it argues that the machinery of control should immediately be improved by creating in Washington an overall international coordinating committee.

"Assurance that collaboration can continue," says the report, "would have a quickening effect on wartime effort, for without that assurance few people count on a durable peace. Opposition to wartime collaboration in the United States is certainly not due to pro-Nazi sentiment. If not due to moral indifference, it is largely due to a sincere suspicion that the nations will return to their old ways."

For the maintenance of order after the war, it is urged, the present channels of military cooperation will certainly prove of use. These, together with the technical missions now working in Washington and London, might prove the nucleus of the international police force so widely discussed. But economic measures of cooperation will also be necessary. The United States Maritime Commission and the British Merchant Shipping Mission could form the nucleus of a postwar international committee.

Both British and Americans should eliminate the sentimental and superficial and talk of "Anglo-Saxon" or "English-speaking" unity and get down to realities, the report urges. Otherwise there may be a revival of "Uncle Shylock" talk in Britain and of isolationism in the United States.

14,000 at Meade Start Holiday

Fort George G. Meade, Md., Aug. 29 (AP).—About 14,000 officers and enlisted men of the Twenty-ninth Infantry Division left Fort Meade this afternoon on weekend leaves, which will last over Labor Day.

All soldiers are due back at their unit at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning. The long weekend leave, originally scheduled to start after retreat today, began at noon instead as a result of postponement of the division's regular Wednesday afternoon half holiday this week.

Those who left today represented 80 per cent of the division personnel. Twenty per cent are required to remain in camp over holiday periods, but most of those who are here now had leaves of similar length last week.

French Loathe Pro-Nazi State, Swiss Asserts

There are only two zones in France, the "occupied zone and the less occupied zone" and 95 per cent of the people in both of them would like to throw out the pro-Nazi regime, Dr. Daniel Walther, a Swiss newspaperman, who has just arrived in this country from France, said yesterday.

WALTHER

Walther has for many years been living 3 miles from the Swiss border in the France the Germans call unoccupied. He is inclined to doubt now that it is France at all.

"You never see 'R. F.' meaning la Republique Francaise, any more. Now it is 'E. F.,' l'Etat Francais, the French state. That is symbolic of the whole situation," the newspaperman said.

Walther who of recent years has commuted between France and Switzerland, corresponding for a newspaper at Bern, said Frenchmen paradoxically detest Petain's political theories while greatly admiring him as a personality. Ever the popular hero, Petain is thought of more highly as an individual than DeGaulle, whose fight for French independence they, of course, favor.

But there is no division of sentiment between the personality and politics of the pro-Nazi Admiral Darland, the newsman stated. Frenchmen loathe both.

When the Nazis ordered newspapers to boost Darlan's popularity, the papers complied by carrying stories and pictures about him but on frequent occasions editions came off the presses with his picture upside down and the story in the "fifth column," Walther related.

The French, while hating their German masters, despise the Italian soldiers even more. The Nazis at least were straightforward in their invasion, while the Italians they consider "jackals" who took advantage of them after France had been brought to her knees.

Amusing to the French is the mutual dislike of Italian and German soldiers. Bickering between the two occupying forces has broken out in the open recently with French police stepping in to break up open street fights between Nazi and Fascist officers.

Gates, War Hero and Banker, Made Navy's Civilian Air Chief

President Roosevelt yesterday revived the key defense post of Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air, nominating Artemus L. Gates, a New York banker-war hero to supervise the fleet's air arm.

The job has not been filled since David S. Ingalls held it from March, 1929, to June, 1932. The Air Secretaryship was created by Congress in 1926. Edward P. Warner, its first and only other tenant, held the post from July, 1926, to March, 1929.

Gates, a 43-year-old former Yale University student, was born in Cidar Rapids, Iowa, and makes his home in Locust Valley, N. Y.

War Record Brilliant

He achieved a brilliant record in the World War. Shortly before the United States declared war on Germany, Gates enlisted in Naval Reserve Aviation. He emerged from the service with a lieutenant's commission.

Late in the war Gates was captured by the Germans when, while flying as a member of a French squadron, he was brought down by a greatly superior enemy squadron. He was released after the armistice, returned safely to the United States and resigned from the service.

A high spot of his war experience was command of the United States Naval Air Station at Dunkirk, scene of the British evacuation in the Second World War. The port was frequently under enemy attack in 1917-18. Gates carried out other important assignments as an active fifying member of the northern bombing group.

Won Two Medals

Gates was awarded the United States Distinguished Service Medal and the British Distinguished Flying Cross.

He won the American medal for going to the assistance of a wrecked British plane, despite the fact that he was unarmed and the wreckage was near the enemy coast.

Gates is now president of the New York Trust Co. and holds directorships in several national corporations, including Pan-American Airways and mining, publishing and mercantile firms.

The Navy commented yesterday on the appointment that "his broad background of experience in both the civilian and service fields qualifies him eminently for the post to which he has been appointed."

Recipes for Pickles Make Mouth Water

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Food Editor

Now is the time that the spicy aroma of the pickling kettle pervades the air. To most of us that tantalizing aroma brings memories of our own mother's home-made pickles.

Pickling recipes seem to be handed down from generation to generation, although there are a few modern versions. Many of the recipes in this month's recipe contest are the kind that mother and grandmother made. You will be able to pickle the run-of-the-garden by the winning suggestions which follow.

Martha Ellyn

Mrs. Grace F. Hiehle, 3422 South Dakota Avenue, Northeast, wins the first award of $10.00 with which I have her recipe for Run-of-the-Garden Pickles. This zestful symphony of vegetables is one with which I have long have been familiar. My mother, who makes the kind of pickles that everybody proclaims, "the best I ever tasted," has always included this very same pickle in her annual canning. This is the recipe by which Mrs. Hiehle makes it:

Run-of-the-Garden Pickle—Soak overnight 1½ quarts tiny cucumbers, 1 quart small green tomatoes, quartered, 1 pint tiny pearl onions, 2 chopped sweet red peppers and 2 chopped green peppers, in brine of 1 cup salt to 1 gallon water. Drain; cover with boiling water; drain. Cook separately 1 quart green beans, 1 pint lima beans, 1 pint tiny carrots, and 1 head cauliflower flowerets in boiling salted water until half cooked. Drain. Combine 2 cups sugar, 8 cups vinegar, 4 tablespoons white mustard seed, 2 tablespoons celery seed and 1 package mixed pickling spices. Boil. Add all vegetables. Cook 10 minutes; pack in hot, sterilized jars; seal. This recipe yields 6 quart jars.

Mrs. Helen Beauchesne, 7032 Eastern Avenue Northwest, Takoma Park, D. C., also has won the second prize of $5 with a recipe of her mother's. Mrs. Beauchesne writes "the following relish suited our Saturday suppers of baked beans and was also excellent for our wiener roasts." Her winning recipe follows:

New England Relish—Chop 1 peck green tomatoes medium fine and sprinkle over with 1½ cups of salt. Let stand overnight. Drain in the morning. Add one medium-size cabbage, chopped fine, and boil together with the tomatoes and 2½ quarts of vinegar for half hour. Then add 6 medium onions, 3 red peppers, 2 green peppers, finely chopped; 8 cups sugar, 2 tablespoons mustard seed, 2 tablespoons celery seed and 1 tablespoon stick cinnamon, broken into bits and tied in a small sack together with 1 tablespoon of whole cloves. Cook until soft and can in sterilized jars while hot. Makes approximately 12 quarts.

Mrs. George Charles, 11 S Street Northeast, makes peaches into a food that is as delicious as it is zestful. This recipe wins the third prize of $3 for Mrs. Charles. Here, is her winning recipe:

Pickled Peach Mangoes—Select ripe, free-stone peaches and put them in brine, strong enough to float an egg, for 48 hours. Then soak the peaches in clear, cold water for 20 minutes. Dry them and remove a small section from each peach. Do this with a sharp silver knife and bruise the peach as little as possible. Remove the pit through this hole. Sprinkle the cavity where the pit was with celery seed and fill it with freshly grated horseradish moistened with vinegar. Then replace the piece taken from the peach and sew it in place with a strong thread. Stand the peaches in glass jars. Count the fruit and for every 60 peaches boil a gallon of vinegar, a pound of brown sugar and a quarter teaspoon cayenne pepper. Pour this spiced vinegar, boiling hot, over the fruit in the jars. These should be standing in a kettle of boiling water, which has been brought to this point gradually. When the fruit and juice are cold, tie them up and seal them. They will be ready to eat in ten days or two weeks, but the longer they stand the better they are.

The following are the ten $1 prize winners:

1627 Thirty-fifth St. N. W.

Watermelon-Raisin Sweet Pickle—Soak overnight 2 pounds peeled watermelon rind in 1½ quarts water to which has been added 3 tablespoons salt. In morning, drain, add fresh water and boil until tender, about 20 minutes; drain. Combine 3 cups vinegar, 4½ cups sugar, 5 3-inch sticks cinnamon, 1 tablespoon whole cloves, 6 thin slices lemon, rind included, and 2 cups seedless raisins. Bring to boil, add the melon pieces and boil slowly for 1 hour. Seal while hot. This makes about 2½ pints.

Mrs. George T. Glorius
2606 Twenty-fourth St. N. E.

Pickled Stuffed Figs—Boil 2½ cups dried figs in sufficient water to cover, for 10 to 15 minutes, depending on dryness. Drain, slit down one side, and stuff each fig with a walnut meat. Press cut edges of figs firmly together, overlapping slightly. Combine 1 cup brown sugar, 1½ cups white sugar, 1 cup cider vinegar, 1 teaspoon each of ground cloves, cinnamon and mace, 2 cups water, ½ teaspoon salt and 1 tablespoon rum flavoring and bring to a boil. Add the figs and cook slowly until sirup is thick—about 30 minutes. These are ready to serve as soon as cold or may be sealed. If evaporation is very rapid, more water may be needed. Makes about 1¾ pints.

Mrs. B. G. Allison
3025 Fifteenth St. N. W.

Spiced Pickled Grapes—Remove the skins from 8 pounds Concord grapes and set aside. Cook the grape pulp in kettle containing 3 cups vinegar with spice bag containing 4 sticks cinnamon and 1 teaspoon mace, or 2 sticks, until grapes are soft. Pass through a fine sieve, keeping back the seeds. Add the skins and return to the fire. When it boils add 3 cups sugar and the bag of spices. Cook until it thickens. Place in sterilized glasses and seal.

Mrs. T. O. Maier
Hyattsville, Md.

India Pickle—Put through food chopper, 3 quarts green tomatoes, 1 quart white onion and 6 large red peppers. Then add 2 tablespoons celery seed, 3 tablespoons mustard seed and 1 tablespoon tumeric, ¾ pound brown sugar, 1½ tablespoons salt and 1 quart of cider vinegar. Heat 20 minutes. Put into sterilized jars and seal. Makes about 3 pints.

Mrs. Pauline T. Crow
1910 T Street, S. E.

Green Tomato Pickles—Slice 1 quart of green tomatoes and 2 quarts of onions very thin; sprinkle a little salt through them and let them stand overnight. Drain through a colander and put on to boil with enough vinegar to cover and boil slowly until tomatoes and onions are clear and tender. Drain vinegar from tomatoes and onions. Put into fresh vinegar 2 pounds brown sugar, 2 tablespoons white mustard seed ,1 tablespoon ground mace, 1 tablespoon celery seed and 1 tablespoon ground cloves. Let boil for a few minutes, then pour it over the drained tomatoes, which have been mixed with ½ tablespoon of cayenne, ¼ tablespoon ground mustard and 1 teaspoon tumeric. Mix all together. Pour into sterilized jars and seal. Makes 8 quarts.

Mrs. Albert Day
Bethesda, Md.

Sweet Pickled Peaches—Put 1 quart mild vinegar, 3 pounds granulated sugar, 2 cups pure New Orleans molasses, ten 2-inch sticks of cinnamon and 3 tablespoons whole cloves in a large saucepan over a low flame. Stir until sugar dissolves, and boil for 10 minutes. Dip 8 pounds, or 4 quarts, peaches into boiling water for a few seconds, then plunge them into cold water. Peel, only as many as can be cooked at a time. Leave peaches whole. Simmer the fruit in sirup until it is tender (about 5 minutes), cooking as many as the pan will hold at one time. Remove from the sirup with a perforated spoon and place in hot sterilized jars. Fill the jars with hot sirup and seal immediately. Yield, 4 quarts.

Mrs. Elmore M. Bibby
4306 New Hampshire Ave.

Mrs. Elmore M. Bibby has made pickles for years but she writes that she has found a "new wrinkle." It is a certain kind of pickling spices that contains about 20 different spices. Mrs. Biddy says, "Oh! what a difference it makes in my pickles and relishes. Just by chance a friend came to see me while I was finishing a tomato relish. She told me about the pickling spices. I bought half a melon to try the spices, and believe me, I am glad that I tried them, the results are marvelous." Here is her winning recipe for watermelon rind:

Pickled Watermelon Rind—Remove the green peel from the white rind of 7 pounds watermelon and trim off most of the red, cut rind into 1-inch cubes. Place the rind in a saucepain and cover with boiling water, put lid on saucepan and bring to boil; boil until the cubes of melon can be pierced with a fork. Drain the rind well and cool in a large saucepan and put 4 cups vinegar and 6 cups sugar and spice bag into the preserving kettle and stir slowly over a moderate flame until sugar is dissolved. Put into the spice bag, 4 tablespoons allspice, 1 tablespoon whole cloves. Add 6 small sticks of cinnamon, 1 sliced orange, 1 sliced lemon and 2 sliced tomatoes, and the melon cubes and cook steadily for about 35 minutes, continue cooking until rind is clear. Remove the rind to hot sterilized jars. Boil the sirup until thick, and pour over rinds. Adjust lid and rubber and seal. Yield about 1 quart. Place a few cinnamon sticks in each jar.

Mrs. Broadus B. Wright
1750 Harvard St. N. W.

Sweet Pickle Crab Apples—Select 6 quarts of perfect crab apples. Leave the stems and leaves on, cutting out only the blossom end. Prepare your syrup in this manner: Take 2 quarts cider vinegar, 2 quarts water and 8 pounds sugar and mix in pickling kettle. Tie in a cheesecloth bag the following spices; 12 4-inch sticks of cinnamon, 4 tablespoons whole cloves, 4 tablespoons whole allspice. Add spice bag to pickling syrup and boil rapidly for 10 minutes, put in apples and cook slowly. Cook only until tender. Remove apples gently with a large spoon from the syrup. Then remove spice bag. Carefully pack apples into sterilized jars, cover with hot syrup and seal immediately. Makes 4 quarts.

Miss Elizabeth Hansbraugh
Warrenton, Va.

Cauliflower Mustard Pickle—Divide a large head of cauliflower into pieces and boil it with a dozen white button onions in salted water (a level tablespoonful) until it is half done. Drain the cauliflower and onions and add a dozen dill pickles chopped fine. To 2 quarts of vinegar add 2 cups sugar, 2 teaspoons of celery seed and 1 teaspoon mustard seed, and bring the whole to a boil. Mix together ¾ cup of flour, ¼ pound ground mustard, a tablespoon tumeric powder and a little cold water. Add this mixture to boiling vinegar and continue boiling for 5 minutes. Pour boiling mixture over the cauliflower. Put into sterilized jars and seal. Makes about one gallon.

Mrs. May J. Johnston
5000 Fourteenth St. N. W.

Pickled Pears—Combine 4 cups of brown sugar with 1 cup vinegar and the following spices tied in cloth bag: 3 pieces mace, 4 sticks cinnamon, and 10 cloves. Bring to boil and then add 3 pounds firm ripe pears which have been peeled and cut into small pieces. Keep mixture below boiling point and remove the pears to sterilized jars as soon as they are tender enough to pierce with a fork. Do not overcook the pears or they will be tough. Let the syrup boil down until it is a little thicker (about 15 minutes) and then pour it over the pears. Save any remaining syrup for next process. Seal jars. Let the sealed jars stand for 2 or 3 days and then open them and remove the syrup to a saucepan. Bring to boil and let it cook until it thickens again. Pour over the pears, seal the jars and store them. The pickles improve greatly with age.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Down to Their Last Cent, Waiting for Payday, Couple Learn That Wife's Mother and Two Aunts Are en Route Here; How Meet Emergency?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Please answer this letter as quickly as possible, as time is definitely a factor to be reckoned with. My mother and two aunts (one of them from Texas, who is visiting her sisters), are coming (arriving late this week) for a day's visit with my husband and me. I don't know just when to expect them, but will hear in a day or two.

The trouble is this: Until next pay day, my husband and I will be operating at the lowest possible financial ebb. In fact, we are economizing now in order to be able to provide dinner for five, the day they arrive. Which means that we can't plan to take them to a show; or to provide any entertainment that costs money. We can't even buy car tokens for them; yet we have no car; and one cannot expect three ladies, past 55 years of age, to see the sights of Washington on foot. How are we going to entertain them?

You may say the sensible thing to do is to postpone their visit until after next pay day; but as my aunt from Texas is not to be in the East that long, they will have to see Washington immediately, if at all. And I do want to see her. Besides which, I doubt that we could get in touch with them now, to make other arrangements, even if it seemed best. So what does one do, in such a situation?

ANNA.

Means of Keeping Afloat Until 'Ghost Walks' Again

DEAR ANNA: The logical, emergency solution of such a problem is to borrow say $5 or $10 from some Good Samaritan of your acquaintance until next pay day—providing you know anyone who would have it to spare. There is a possibility, of course, that most of your best friends are workaday associates, on the same payroll and as hard-pressed as you are, while waiting until "the ghost walks" again.

In that event, you might resort to the desperate expedient of hocking some "collector's item" of furniture, silver or bric-a-brac (supposing you have such),—to be redeemed immediately you are in funds again. Or perhaps your fur coat, wrist watch or even engagement ring might serve to float the small, short-term loan needed to carry you through the crisis.. If so, you would not be the first resourcefully hospitable bride who coped thus with a comparable dilemma. And if the absence of the valued article should be noted and remarked by your trio of guests, I am sure the Powers on High would pardon you for implying that it is undergoing repair.

If none of these suggestions is feasible, here are final alternatives. The one is to confidentially unburden your pecuniary plight to your mother, as quickly as possible after the guests arrive—explaining that while you honestly wouldn't have missed this opportunity of seeing them for a million dollars, the fact is that you are temporarily "caught short" until pay-day and simply can't "do" for them what you devoutly wish you could.

She may slip you a greenback to see you through; or she may take charge of the situation by insisting on telling your aunts exactly how the land lies; and making the visit a "dutch treat" party from start to finish. Or the trio might get real pleasure from showing you Washington at their expense—finding full compensation in having your company, plus your services as tourists' guides. If you do elect to tell the truth, and they respond with such a proposition, fall in with it warmly and appreciatively. Don't make things more awkward by demurring and sickly apologizing. Remember that "it is more blessed to give than to receive;" and, also that there is an art to accepting favors.

If your husband's pride will not permit confiding in your mother, the other alternative is to economize on that "dinner for five" you are planning for the evening of your guests' arrival—to a degree that will leave you some cash-on-hand for sightseeing. You may be thinking in terms of a "company" menu—based on such costly items as steak or chops, with several vegetables, salad, dessert and soup or appetizer courses in addition. But if you are a good cook, you can prepare a deliciously satisfying supper at trifling cost—by serving spaghetti with meat balls (or meat sauce), a "tossed" salad of mixed green vegetable, and, for dessert, pie with coffee. For about 15 cents extra you may have a first (or "appetizer") course of either grapefruit juice, sauerkraut juice or fruit cup (canned). This bill of fare, prepared at home, should not cost more than $2 for five persons; and it is possible you had been figuring on a $5 outlay as a minimum.

With around $3 for sightseeing, you could commute by trolley (50 cents for all) from the suburbs to the neighborhood of the Mall, where you would be within walking distance of the Smithsonian Institution, National Museum and Mellon Art Gallery. From there, you could go by taxi to Capitol Hill for another 50 cents (no more than streetcar transportation for five would cost; since you would be in the minimum rate zone: 20 cents for two passengers, 10 cents for each extra passenger),—and there see the Capitol, Library of Congress, Supreme Court building, Folger Shakespearean Library and other points of interest. Another 50 cents' cab fare would take five passengers from Capital Hill to the vicinity of the Washington Monument and Lincoln Memorial. And from there, you could easily make pedestrian connection with a streetcar to take you home again. That would be a lot of sightseeing for one day; about as much as any able-bodied person would care to take in; and it can be done (per estimate) for $2 and incidentals.

And if these advices still do not solve your problem, it so happens I have a friend who (as I write this reply) is in a mood to lend you a five-spot to see you through the visit; or until your next pay day. Whether the mood will last, I cannot say; but it is pleasant to know it exists at the moment.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

The Birds on Connie's Dress

She's Casual, But Neat—The 1941 College Miss

When Annette Davis goes back to Duke University this fall she will look neat as a pin in an outfit such as the bright-colored plaid suit above. Annette, who recently modeled in a local college shop fashion show, was a freshman last year. Now that she is a sophomore she has learned that she can dress casually and still keep her costume and accessories "under control." Her longer length torso jacket is faced at the collar with green velvet, just the color of a stripe in the plaid. Her skirt has pleats, front and back. The shoes are especially tanned cowhide sandals by Joyce—the kind of low-heeled comfort girls go for. But the cutest trick seen yet is her "Boy-Girl" stocking cap. See how perkily it sits behind a pompadour. The "boy and girl" are made of yarn, of course!

Smooth Manners Aids Popularity Of Teen-Agers

Her first glimpse of the gay whirl should be such fun! But when her hostess introduces the catch of the season she exclaims crudely, "Pleased to meet you!"

If you have your etiquette down pat no one ever suspects the social game is new to you, that you're a greenhorn. By replying with a smooth, correct "How do you do" when introduced, you seem right at home with the young sophisticates.

You'll remember, too, it's up to the girl to start the conversation after an introduction. For, if you forget, the man may walk away—thinking you don't care to talk to him.

Dancing begins? Up to the men to say "Thank you" for a dance, but you may say smilingly, "I enjoyed it, too." Does a dance seem tiresomely prolonged? It's your privilege to suggest stopping, so don't keep going round and round until your partner's tired of YOU!

And when you're out with a man please allow him to be the masterful male! Let him open doors for you, give your order to the waiter and tell the usher how far down you want to sit in the movie theater. But when it's time to call an end to the evening, you do it!

The Dining Room Is On Way Back, Says Magazine

In the past decade architects have been omitting dining rooms from floor plans of inexpensive modern houses and from many apartments. Now the Ladies' Home Journal reports a trend on the part of American families to revive the institution of the family dining room.

The editors of the magazine, who have spent the past two years traveling throughout the United States visiting families for the article series, "How America Lives," find that parents now feel handicapped by the loss of this room. A certain degree of formality in serving meals is necessary to the training of their children, they say. Manners and habits suffer if this is lacking.

With the elimination of the dining room, there's a general letdown in family morale. Dinette or breakfast nooks, essentially informal, are poor substitutes for a room removed from the kitchen and reserved exclusively for the pleasant ceremony of dining.

Some families, the editors report, though possessiong dining rooms, seldom use them. Junior's velocipede and a bowl of waxed fruit on the table hold down the fort, while the family hold forth in the kitchen.

Recently, however, it has been found that families with dining rooms have been making extra effort to use them regularly. They feel that attractively served meals with pretty silver, china and linen, in a nicely appointed room have a worth-while effect upon the behavior of the children—and the entire family.

Home Problems Are Important In World Today

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

THE ONLY sanity in the world today is probably the so-called daily grind, for it's the only constructive work that's being done . . . everywhere else the world concentrates on destruction. So, rather than belittle those simple daily household duties, women in their homes in these critical days must regard themselves as the guardians of civilization—that makes home-making problems deeply important.

Mrs. W. T. N. writes: "I have a new home with tile floors, exposed rafters in the living room, stone mantle, and a cypress ceiling in the sunporch which is really a part of the living room. I have an old oak sideboard, an oak wardrobe, and an oak chest which I must "make do." The sideboard has a brown mottled marble top. Could I take the marble off and make a table with it? How about removing the mirrors from the sideboard and putting some shelves above it? I thought I might bleach and pickle this piece of furniture. Would it be suitable for the sunporch? The bottom of the wardrobe could be made into a chest, but how and where could I use it?"

Your ideas for doing over your oak furniture sound very interesting. You might have a carpenter build a staunch trestle base—coffee table height—for your marble top, using wood from an old oak piece of furniture, or if you don't have anything suitable, use pine and finish it to match your oak. When you take the mirrors off the buffet, it will be very nice to bleach and pickle, then hang shelves on the wall above. Why not leave the oak wardrobe as it is, then bleach and pickle it? You might even add some painted decorations to break the big expanse of doors.

Poor Posture Causes Swayback, Simple Exercises Will Aid It

By Ida Jean Kain

MOST WOMEN do not have a good posture, therefore most women do not have a good figure. Far more silhouette worries are caused by faulty posture than by excess weight. The most common posture fault is swayback. The effects of an exaggerated incurve at the small of the back are jutting hips and a protruding stomach. One counterbalances the other. The correction is to strengthen the muscles of the abdominal wall and to learn to sit and stand correctly. When these important muscles are in good tone and held up, the muscles in the lower back are also strengthened and the curve is decreased.

There are any number of exercises which help to correct swayback. One of the simplest is to sit on the floor with the small of the back pressed against a wall, the muscles of the lower abdominal wall pulled firmly up and in. When you make a practice of sitting in that position for two 5-minute periods a day, it amounts to exercise.

Leads to Correct Sitting

Later, to progress with the exercise, you assume that position without benefit of wall, keeping back straight and abdominal muscles firm. All this leads to correct sitting at all times. To carry through on the benefits of the exercise, make a practice of sitting in a chair with the back of the hips pressed against the back of the chair seat, back straight and muscles pulled up. If you could learn to do that your figure couldn't get out of line.

Backward bending exercises which tend to increase the curve at the back should be avoided, and the opposite position of forward bending should be practiced. The "knee chest" position is excellent. Get down on all fours, weight resting on the knees and forearms, head resting on the backs of the hands. Start the exercise with the back and abdomen relaxed, then push high with the middle of the back as you pull up with the abdominal muscles. Arch the back like an angry kitty.

Another corrective is to lie on back on floor, flex the knees and bring them up to chest, then with the arms hug the knees to chest. It sort of "rests" the back.

All Are Helpful

To carry that position further, sit on the floor, hands at the sides and slightly back, legs straight out in front. Now, give a heave, come up with the legs and swing them back overhead, bracing your weight under the hips with the hands, elbows on floor. Try to touch the feet to the floor beyond the head. In this position the small of the back is pushed out and the muscles of the abdomenal wall contracted. If you were doing this exercise in a gymnasium you would make use of horizontal bars and "walk" up and down from this upside-down position. You might try it against your living room wall! Or you can lie on the back on the floor with your head touching the wall and, bringing the knees up, try to touch knees to the wall.

All of these exercises are helpful in strengthening the muscles of the abdomen and lower back. It is very important to correct swayback, not only because the condition puts your figure entirely out of line, but because it frequently leads to severe backache.

Cucumber Pack

Hollywood, Calif.—During hot weather Mary Astor, Hollywood star, makes use of the lowly cucumber for a complexion beautifier. Cucumber will stay icecold for at least 20 minutes, so it acts as a pore refiner as well as a bleach. Mary first cleanses her face with cream, then lies down in a comfortable position. She makes a mask of long slices of cucumber which have been piled in a bowl with ice cubes. After working all day Mary finds that the treatment is wonderful for toning her tired skin and for relaxing taut facial muscles.

Emphasis Is on Defense At F. A. Vanderlip Party

By Patricia Grady

The Robert Todd Lincoln house took on renewed glamour last evening to the guests of Frank A. Vanderlip, jr., who gathered in the 5 o'clock shadows of the spacious garden to sip a cocktail, chat with friends and stroll the length of the flower-bordered lawns. Well over a hundred Washingtonians—with a national defense emphasis—answered the bid of the son of the late Frank Vanderlip, head of the New York City Bank, to drop in after desk hours at the famous Georgetown house, now owned by Mrs. Arthur Woods.

The coordination of business and Federal housing schemes was the topic of the day, for by far the greatest number of the guests came from the business world or from the Government agency from which Mr. Vanderlip derives the title of Regional Coordinator of the Division of Defense Housing Coordination. Residential society also mingled in the group to make it a welcome diversion from the "just-a-few-friends-are-dropping-in" kind of Washington summer social fare.

Red-covered tables—which drove the pet duck, "Pyramis," into hiding—were placed in convenient nooks throughout the garden as well as scattered on the broad lawns. A long bar, dispensing all manner of liquid refreshment, magnetically gathered around it a large group, while others of the guests sauntered through the tree-shadowed flag-stoned paths and toward the spot-lighted fountain at the rear garden. As dusk came and guests stayed, candle-lanterns were lighted and the party went on and on and on.

Mrs. Beale Was Going On to the Watergate

Mrs. Truxtun Beale explained to her host that she was wearing a floor-length black and lavender lace dress because she was going from there to the Watergate performance of the Ballet. Federal Works Administrator John Carmody apologized to an Irish friend for the "O" that his Gaelic ancestors had dropped from his name. Representative William T. Pfeiffer, of New York City, was accompanied by Mrs. Pfeiffer, who was wearing a matching dress and hat ensemble in an intriguing shade of purple. Mrs. Ronald McCrindle left early to spend a quiet evening at home with her office-shackled husband, who couldn't get to the party. Mr. and Mrs. Minor Hudson came across the lawn to join Mr. and Mrs. Ward French—she offsetting her chic black dress with silver foxes—and Ford Cramer, who were engrossed in conversation at a glass-topped table. Mrs. Dion Phillipson, in a rose-beige suit, chatted with Mrs. Mead Fletcher, who accented her remarks with nods of her gay-flowered chapeau, and Mr. Fletcher.

Ringing with laughter was the table of Frank Marsh and Mrs. Marsh, in a gay red turban and matching coat; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Quay, and Mr. and Mrs. George L. Zell. Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Palmer brought their two daughters with them but the Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy came wifeless. Mrs. Earl Draper, who set off her tan suit with a brown picture hat, stood near Mr. and Mrs. Meade Fletcher—she in a smart blue and white chiffon print. Mrs. Anna Rosemann, of New York, in a white picture hat, found matters of importance to discuss with John Ihlder and Miss Laura Tuckerman, whose black dress boasted a front panel of black and white print, nodded to acquaintances as she made the rounds of the chatting groups.

Loy Andersons Among Others There

Others spotted here and there were Mr. and Mrs. Loy Anderson, she in a yellow dress; Carl Monsees and Davies Snow at a table together, Capt. and Mrs. Thomas Hammond, Mrs. Allie Freed, Mr. and Mrs. William Meade Fletcher, Victor de Mers, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Pavenstedt, Mrs. Hazel Maas, in a gray and white print; Jacob Crane, Oakleigh Thorne, Walter Prendergast, Denys Smith, Clifford Mallory, John Amory, Miss Eileen Barry, Henry Barnard, N. Max Denning, Miss Sara Harde, in a white-trimmed green print, and numerous others.

Mrs. Arthur Woods was not present at the party in her historic home because she is in southern California vacationing at Mr. Vanderlip's Palos Verdes ranch.

Another Party, A Different Note

Another of yesterday's cocktail parties struck a slightly different note—this time diplomatic. Frank Langstone, a member of the New Zealand cabinet, feted his Prime Minister, Peter Fraser, who is sojourning in Washington. The party was held in the Pan American Room of the Mayflower Hotel. Swarms of diplomats came to pay their respects to the head of the New Zealand cabinet.

It was a strictly stag affair. The guests included the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih; the Russian Ambassador, Dr. Constantine A. Oumansky; the Minister of the Netherlands, Dr. A. Loudon, who will be host at a luncheon tomorrow in celebration of Queen Wilhelmina's birthday; the Greek Minister, Cimon P. Diamantopoulos, and the Minister of Luxembourg, Hughes le Gallais.

As would be expected, the emissaries from the empire dropped in to greet a fellow British statesman. Among them were the Minister of South Africa, Ralph William Close; the Minister of Canada, Leighton McCarthy, and the Minister of Australia, Richard G. Casey. Among the representatives from the British missions were Rear Admiral H. Pott, Maj. Gen. F. G. Beaumont-Nesbitt, Sir Owen Chalkley, Sir Arthur Salter, Sir Henry Self, Sir Frederick Phillips, Lieut. Gen. Sir Colville Wemyss, Air Marshal A. T. Harris, and C. A. Berendson.

From the United States official group were Representative Sol Bloom, W. Averell Harriman, Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, George T. Summerlin and Harry Hawkins of the State Department, and many others.

Madame Simovitch, whose husband, Gen. Dushan Simovitch, is with his country's refugee government in London, fled from Yugoslavia at the last possible moment. Accompanying her from New York yesterday were Mr. and Mrs. Rudoye Nikolitch. 2d Armored Division Declared To Be Equal of Europe's Best

By the Associated Press

Camp Polk, La., Aug. 28.—The Second Armored Division from Georgia today drew praise from commanding officers as being the equal of any tank division in Europe, but stern criticism of the handling of troops by officers and faulty communications again developed in a post-maneuver critique held here.

Maj. Gen. George V. Strong, whose Eighth Corps troops were engulfed by the Second Armored Division from Fort Benning during the closing phase of preliminary maneuvers here, said he considered the Second, commanded by Maj. Gen. George S. Patton, the equal of any armored division fighting abroad.

Lieut. Gen. Walter Krueger, commanding the Third Army, also praised the aggressive punch in the lightning spearheads driven by Patton's division during maneuvers and said he was "keenly gratified" with the progress in training shown by all troops and commanding officers. He spoke highly of the morale of his entire command.

Krueger said however, that while considerable headway had been made, troops must further train themselves in keeping covered from potential air attacks and keeping roads cleared for troop movements.

"There were many cases," Krueger said, "in which men in every position were disposed to abandon caution and their equipment and go peacefully to sleep, even though they were close to the battle front."

"All this," Krueger continued, "is the fault of our officers who either do not perceive there are errors at all; do not conceive them of consequence, or are too timid or supine to insist upon their correction."

Krueger said there continued a "glaring need" for improvement in communications. He said in one instance an outfit was unaware the war had begun until 12 hours after hostilities opened.

Fadden Named New Premier Of Australia

Copyright by New York Times

Canberra, Australia, Aug. 28.—Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies tonight announced his resignation to the cabinet and subsequently to a joint meeting of ministerial parties, which unanimously elected Treasurer A. W. Fadden leader of the Country Party, to succeed to the prime ministership.

Menzies will interview the Governor General, Lord Gowrie, tomorrow, tender his resignation and advise him of the commission of Fadden, who will spend the weekend forming a new cabinet.

Menzies did not resign the leadership of the United Australia Party, and his status will be discussed later.

Menzies in a statement said a frank discussion with his colleagues in the cabinet had shown that while they personally had good will toward him, many felt he was unpopular with a large section of the press and people, that this unpopularity handicapped the effectiveness of the government, giving rise to misrepresentation and misunderstanding of its activities, and that there was a division of opinion in the government parties themselves which would not or might not exist under another leader.

He therefore invited the two parties to select another leader, he said, and they unanimously chose Fadden.

Before the House rose Menzies announced that the cabinet had decided to send a Minister to London as soon as practicable, but not the prime minister. Menzies is prepared to accept office under Fadden. It is the unanimous wish of his colleagues that he go to London and he will undoubtedly be strongly urged to accept the appointment, though it is known he is disinclined.

An important implication of Menzies' retention in the U. A. P. leadership is that Fadden must consult him in the choice of a new cabinet. Menzies is expected to recommend retention of most of the present U. A. P. ministers.

Bridges Complains Of Wire Tapping To U. S. Attorney

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—Harry Bridges, executive head of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union (C. I. O.), carried his complaint that G-men tapped his telephone wires at the Hotel Edison from August 4 to 21 to the United States attorney's office today.

United States Attorney Mathias Correa declined to discuss Bridges' statement to reporters that he had complained that E. J. Younger and a man known to him as Fred West had tapped his wires.

Bridges is awaiting a decision on a California deportation hearing on the charge that he is an undesirable alien.

"The FBI (Federal Bureau of Investigation) is on the spot," Bridges said. "They've got to get something on me by hook or by crook. J. Edgar Hoover made a statement over a year ago that he had evidence enough to get me deported. He didn't show anything like that at the hearing."

Blonde Hopes To Awe Natives In Jungle Trek

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MRS. KARENA SHIELDS,

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Aug. 28.—Blue-eyed Mrs. Karena Shields hopes that her fair skin and small stature will hold in awe the natives she may encounter on a trek into a section of th Central American jungles where five previous expeditions have perished.

The La Crescenta, Calif., woman left by plane today for Mexico City on the first leg of an adventure intended to throw light upon the Mayan civilization.

Mrs. Shields, a blonde, will go to the huge plantation of Palenque, bordering Campeche and Guatemala, where she spent her girlhood. From there she will set out Saturday, accompanied only by the Palenque Plantation manager and several native boys.

Five previous expeditions seeking the temples and tribal haunts of Palenque vanished, she said, and no white person ever has returned to tell of the forbidden cities of the jungle.

"The natives there have been warped by something, and practice terrible ceremonies akin to voodoism, which, perhaps originally destroyed their civilization," she added.

Mrs. Shields, a divorcee in her thirties, said her initial voyage would take only a week aind a half and would serve to inspect ground she had flown over and photographed many times. Later she will return to dig for buried temples and other evidence linking the Mayas with the history of mankind.

Two other Californians, Mr. and Mrs. Dana Lamb of Santa Ana, Calif., went to Mexico City last week under a commission of the Mexican National Museum to search for the Lost City of the Mayas. Mr. and Mrs. Lamb discovered, from the air last May, what they believed to be the legendary Lost City. They hope now to reach the place on foot.

29th Division To Parade for Veterans of '18

About 1500 veterans of the 29th Division of 1918, who battled their way into history on the Meuse-Argonne front with the A. E. F., will review a parade of the 29th Division of 1941 on Monday as the climax to the Division's annual convention which begins in the Hotel Willard today.

Today's program will be devoted primarily to registration, with sightseeing tours, unit dinners, reunion party and a dance also scheduled. The convention will be officially opened at 2 p.m. Saturday with an address of welcome by Commissioner Guy Mason, while Sen. Robert Reynolds, of North Cadolina, chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee; Sen. Millard Tydings, of Maryland, and former Gov. Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey, the later two Twenty-ninth Division veterans, will speak at the banquet at 7:30 p. m. Saturday.

Memorial services will be held Sunday morning in Arlington National Cemetery at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and the grave of Gen. Charles G. Morton, wartime commanding officer of the division.

The parade by the new Twenty-ninth Division, now stationed at Fort Meade, will be held at 10 a. m. Monday and will include tanks, infantry and mechanized equipment. The new division, made up of selectees and National Guardsmen, will follow a route down Constitution Avenue from Ninth Street Northwest, across to Pennsylvania Avenue on Fifteenth Street, and then down Pennsylvania, where the veterans will review the parade from in front of the hotel.

New Age Limits to Take Most Reserve Officers Off Duty

By Marshall Andrews

Post Staff Writer

Most Reserve officers now on extended active duty will be returned home after a year's service and practically all Regular Army line officers will be promoted one grade under orders issued by the War Department this week.

It was expected provisions affecting Reserve officers would be applied shortly to National Guard officers now in Federal service.

At least 25,000 officers, it was estimated, would be affected by the orders. Outstanding features were:

No Reserve officers on active duty will be promoted to the grade of lieutenant colonel or colonel. Very few, if any, on inactive status will be promoted.

Fifty per cent of Reserve officers in the field forces will be relieved after one year of active service.

Seventy-five per cent of Reserve officers on administrative duty not with the field forces will be relieved after one year's service.

New Age Limits Set

No Reserve officer who has attained certain specified age in grade will be retained in service after expiration of one year of active duty. These age limits are for colonels, 55 in the field and 60 in administrative posts; lieutenant colonels, 52 and 53; majors, 47 and 54; captains, 42 and 50; first lieutenants, 35 and 47; second lieutenants, 30 and 45.

In the Regular Army, 500 majors will be promoted to lieutenant colonels. All captains with 12 years in the Regular Army will be raised to majors; all first lieutenants with three years service will be made captains and all second lieutenants will be promoted to first lieutenants. Exceptions will be made only in the case of officers not recommended for promotion by their superiors.

It was expected junior grades would be filled by calling young Reserve officers to active duty and by commissioning graduates of R. O. T. C. courses and service schools.

Air Corps Excepted

Orders relieving Reserve officers from extended active duty and withholding promotion will not be applied to those of the Air Corps. With a few exceptions they will not be applied to medical officers and chaplains.

It was understood the orders were issued as part of the current program for "revitalizing" the Army and to give training on active duty to larger numbers of Reserve officers.

1-A Registrant List Will Be Recruit Source

Local Selective Service Boards throughout the country have been ordered by national headquarters to supply Army, Navy, and Marine Corps recruiting offices with lists of Class 1-A registrants as a source of recruits for regular or reserve terms of service.

The 1-A registrants who have been classified as immediately available for service are considered prime material for the regular service branches which carry a longer term of service than does the maximum 30-month draft duty.

The Navy and Marine Corps are accepting enlistments for regular six- and four-year tours of duty, respectively, and allow selectees to enlist in the Naval or Marine Reserve, where they serve only in emergencies.

The Army is seeking enlistments of selects for regular three-year terms which might be extended to 4¼ years under the draft extension law.

Meanwhile, local draft headquarters announced the names of 108 Negroes who will be inducted today at Baltimore. They follow:

Should Be Well Informed

Phoenix, Ariz., Aug. 28 (A.P.).—School Teacher Edna Bowers' letters to Private Richard Rathkey keep him well-informed of doings in his home town of Lancaster, Pa.

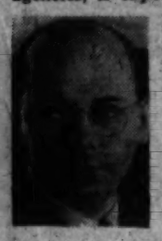
Her latest to the Luke Field selectee consisted of 65 pages. It kept Rathkey busy an hour reading of the town happenings "and a lot of other things the public wouldn't be interested in."

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Longer Hours for U. S. Employes in Sight

A general lengthening of the hours of Federal employes, chiefly those in defense agencies, is expected to take place after Labor Day. It's known for a fact that officials of half a dozen defense agencies are now considering plans to make their employes work longer hours, and the plan can be expected to spread as the pressure grows greater to get out the work. Officials in some of the agencies say lengthening of hours wouldn't be necessary if additional employes could be hired. And for once it isn't a question of money to pay the employes but of office space to place new employes.



Though officials deny it, the Navy Department is among the agencies known to be considering longer hours for its employes. The Navy, it must be presumed, is planning to place its employes on a 44-hour week to correspond to the work week of War Department and Selective Service employes.

Navy employes would be working a 44-hour week now, no doubt, if it weren't for the fact that an estimated 900 white-collar workers would have to be paid time-and-a-half overtime for all hours over 39. It's known that the Navy requested a legal opinion on overtime pay for its white-collar employes and the lawyers must have decided that the law required overtime to be paid, as the longer hours haven't been ordered.

F. B. I. Takes Lead

The Navy has about 8500 white-collar employes here and to pay about 10 per cent of them overtime while forcing the others to work without extra compensation would have the worst possible effect on employe morale. Federal Bureau of Investigation requires its employes to put in an average of one hour overtime daily and the F. B. I. field office here has been working its employes an average of two hours overtime daily.

In just about every agency here long overtime is being worked, but only at War, Selective Service, and FBI is it required officially. Veteran officials oppose the compulsory-overtime-for-everyone-plan. They would rather see overtime worked, when it's necessary, without an official order. Frankly, they fear that with some agencies ordering it officially, members of Congress may get the idea that other defense agencies don't work overtime and, in the interest of equal treatment for all employes, a longer work week for all employes may be voted by Congress. And if that happens the 39-hour week would be lost indefinitely.

Dr. Howard A. Edson won the run-off election at Agriculture for the employe representative on the appeals board. He polled 2000 votes to 1284 for Daniel Stansbury and 836 for H. A. Wilkinson . . . Civil Service exams: graphotype operators, $1260; horizontal sorting machine operator, $1260; junior meteorologists, $2000; script engravers, $13.44 a day, Bureau of Engraving and Printing; link trainer operators and instructors, Civil Aeronautics Administration, $3200.

Canon Williams Arrives to Take Cathedral Post

The Rev. Merritt F. Williams, former rector of St. Philip's Episcopal Church, Charleston, S. C., arrived here yesterday to assume his new duties as a canon of Washington Cathedral, in charge of its social service program.

Native Bostonian, Canon Williams was graduated from Washington University, St. Louis and the General Theological Seminary, New York City, in 1926. He served for three years as missionary to Alaska, was ordained to the priesthood in 1930, and later was chaplain to Episcopal students at the University of Florida.

He will preach his initial sermon at the cathedral September 7. He and Mrs. Williams have a son and daughter, and the family will reside at 3515 Woodley Road Northwest. He will formally begin his duties Monday.

D. C. Seeks Air Raid Protection

$286,025 Asked For Emergency Reservoirs, Sirens, Other Equipment

Steps were taken yesterday by the District Commissioners to guard Washington against fires caused by enemy bombing planes in the event this country becomes involved in war.

The city heads conferred with Harold D. Smith, director of the budget, and requested allocation of $286,025 from the President's emergency fund. The money would give Washington an emergency water Supply for the Fire Department, air raid precaution equipment, emergency radio for the Fire Department and provide for training of auxiliary fire fighters.

The Commissioners said they would also ask for an additional $150,000 to be used for fire hose, 15 trailer pumps and uniforms. The pumps would be somewhat similar to those now used in London.

Commissioners' Statement

In justification of these items, the Commissioners said:

"In view of the added and constantly increasing hazards resulting from the country's preparations for defense, it is doubtful whether the Fire Department, with its present limitations, can continu edur-ing these unsettled times of preparedness to render the same degree of protection to citizens of the District and to the Federal Government that it has rendered in the past. It may be well pointed out that of all branches of the municipal government hte Fire Department is the action branch. Its success is predicated on preparedness and speed. Delay would mean added danger and the probable loss of life and property.

"The success of any fire department depends upon an adequate water supply and that system should be protected by every means available. In any war emergency, there are three important factors to consider—the possibility of a large number of fires occuring simultaneously with in a relatively small area, the possibility of these fires assuming the proportions of a conflagration, especially in the high risk or closely built up areas, and the possibility of the normal supply of water being either completely exhausted or seriously curtailed. For this reason, it is vitally necessary that we provide means of securing a reliable water supply."

Reservoirs Asked

The Commissioners asked for 18 reservoirs or cisterns, each having a capacity of 100,000 gallons, so installed as to be automatically kept full of water. The cisterns would be located in park areas. It was proposed that they be placed at the following locations: Army Medical Center, Walter Reed Hospital, National Bureau of Standards area, Mount Alto Hospital area, Georgetown Hospital area, Connecticut Avenue and Calvert Street Northwest, Washington Circle, Dupont Circle, Lafayette Square, Franklin Square, north side of the Ellipse, Mount Vernon Square, Judiciary Square, Massachusetts Avenue and G Street Northwest, north side of the Capitol grounds, the Mall, between Adams and Jefferson Drives on the east side of Twelfth Street; park area, south side of C Street between Seventh and Ninth Streets Northwest; New Jersey Avenue and E Street.

It also was proposed to install nine emergency air raid sirens, costing $1900 each. They would assemble auxiliary firemen and warn the populace in event of air raids.

Siren Locations Designated

The sirens would be installed in firehouses and be controlled from the fire alarm central office, which would be the control center of all fire communications and raid raid warnings. They would be located at the following fire stations: No. 25 Engine Company, Nichols Avenue and Esther Place Southeast; No. 19 Engine Company, Pennsylvania Avenue and Twenty-eighth Place Southeast; No. 27 Engine Company, Minnesota Avenue and Hunt Place Northeast; No. 8 Engine Company, 637 North Carolina Avenue Southeast; No. 17 Engine Company, 1227 Monroe Street Northeast; No. 9 Engine Company, 1624 U Street Northwest; No. 22 Engine Company, 5760 Georgia Avenue Northwest; No. 31 Engine Company, 4930 Connecticut Avene, and No. 29 Engine Company, 4811 Conduit Road Northwest.

The Commissioners also asked for at least 15 two-way ultra-high mobile radio receivers and transmitters for fire department apparatus at a cost of $13,625.

An auxiliary firefighting force would also be organized and trained, and a director appointed for coordination of all activities within the scope of the proposed program. His salary would be $6000 a year. Four police and fire surgeons would also be needed to supplement the present board of police and fire surgeons. Their duties would be confined to treating members of the auxiliary firefighters.

More Sue Dupont Hotel Over Leases

Eleven tenants filed suit yesterday to compel Dupont Circle, Inc., to run its 12-story building strictly as an apartment hotel until their leases expire.

The company agreed on July 1 to lease the place to the Government for offices, most of the 600 tenants moved out and the Government has occupied part of the building.

The tenants asked the District Court to forbid this at once, by issuing a temporary injunction to be in force until the suit is finally settled. There will probably be a hearing on this next week.

The suit raised an issue foreseen by Acting Attorney General Francis Biddle Wednesday, when he ruled that the Government's lease agreement was to be considered valid "until and unless the courts render some decision requiring a contrary conclusion."

Tenants Named

The tenants who sued yesterday and the dates they said heir leases expire are: Mrs. John P. McMillan, December 1, 1941; Teresa Smith, September 15, 1941; V. Volta Parma, February 1, 1942, with a right to renew for a year; George E. Reedy, of the Washington bureau of the newspaper PM, November 1, 1941; Naneita Antolotti, June 1, 1942; Helena H. Weed, June 1, 1942; Nina M. Ikard, July 1, 1942; Jeanette W. Moffatt, May 15, 1941, but extended a year by renewal; Samuel Scida, operator of a barber shop in the place, December 31, 1944; Joseph Paiano, operator of a beauty shop in the lobby, January 31, 1943; W. Charles Brown, operator of a newsstand in the lobby, no expiration date.

The residential tenants all claimed that the company agreed to operate an apartment hotel and cited a provision of their leases binding them to "use said apartment only as a private residence and not to carry on any business therein."

The commercial tenants said they went to great expense to equip their establishments because they expected customers from among the 600 tenants. They claimed they made their agreements with the "distinct understanding that the building was to be used exclusively as an apartment hotel." The proposed change to an office building, they claimed, has driven away their customers and ruined their business.

Complaints Listed

Since most of the residents accepted a suggestion that they get out by July 15, the tenants complained, offices have been established, tenant elevator service has been virtually suspended, the lobby furniture has been removed, room service provided in the leases has been suspended and tenants have been notified that telephone service will be cut off September 2. The tenants charged also that they have been harassed and coerced to give up their premises.

Similar charges were made Wednesday by Edward G. Fisher, comptroller of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association. He claimed the Dupont Circle, Inc., forced him to move and sued for $15,000 damages. Mrs. Lee Wolverton, beauty shop executive, sued last week for $100,000.

Harry Newman, president of Dupont Circle, Inc., said he had "no comment" on the new suit.

The action was filed by Attorneys Martin F. O'Donoghue, Thomas X. Dunn, Harry Levin, Lewis Perkins and Leon L. Sclawy.

Kilmarnock School Auctioned for $4,950

Heathsville, Va., Aug. 28 (A.P.).—The old Kilmarnock School and approximately two acres of land were sold at auction yesterday afternoon to Miss Lee Boone, of Wicomico Church, for $4950.

William S. Brent, superintendent of county schools, said delivery of the property would be made on October 15, when the new school would be ready for occupancy.

Ballet Under the Stars Closes Tonight at the Watergate

Continuing the "Ballet Under the Stars" season at the Watergate, Col. DeBasil's Original Ballet Russe last night repeated three selections, all of which have proved popular in previous programs of the series.

An audience, estimated at 8500, saw the dancers present "Aurora's Wedding," "The Eternal Struggle," and "The Blue Danube."

The performance of "The Eternal Struggle," gave many in the adience who had witnessed it first on the Tuesday night program, an opportunity to become better acquainted with the interesting choreography of Igor Schewzoff, who dances the lead. The ballet, with music by Robert Schumann as its background, depicts man's fight against, and triumph over, weakness and temptation.

In response to many requests, the company will repeat "Graduation Ball" in the closing performance of the engagement at the Potomac Watergate tonight. The program includes "Swan Lake" and "Aurora's Wedding," and all the stars of the organization will be present.

The company will leave shortly for Canada, where it scheduled for a long tour under the patronage of the governor general, the Earl of Athlone, and Princess Alice. The profits of the performances will be given to "Wings For Britain."

Daylight Time Opponents Increase Lead

The opponents of daylight saving time for the District shook dust in the eyes of those favoring it yesterday, as 184 "No's" and 61 "Yes's" poured into The Post.

Totals in the public opinion poll on the measure now stand at 513 in favor and 846 opposed to a change.

A voter in favor of daylight time attempted to explain the growing lead of the opposition by writing that "people who oppose something are much more apt to take the trouble to vote than those who are in favor of it. I feel sure there are more people in favor of daylight saving than there are opponents.'

Another one in favor of putting the clocks ahead suggested that "The Post should publish the fact that they do not have to go to bed or get up an hour earlier, as the day or the sun or the moon and the stars are not changed, it is only the clock, and the clock is the time we all go by and it would not work a disadvantage to anyone."

A mother wrote she is opposed to daylight saving "because it is still warm and light at 8 p. m. and children can't go to bed in the heat. As my child wakens about 6:30 or 7 a. m., regardless of what time he got to bed, he doesn't get enough sleep" under daylight saving.

Another wrote of putting the clocks ahead one hour: "It is an un-American idea imported from Europe. Most countries over there make it a regular practice to observe 'l'heure d'ete' (summer time) every year. Why should we ape them?"

And another critic of change: "Vital statistics are recorded by standard time. Since we are born by standard time and die by standard time, why not live by standard time in the interim?"

At the bottom of the pile of ballots was a letter from a reader of The Post who was born in Washington and now lives in Maine. The verdict? "No."

D. C. Schools Fear Taxing Of Facilities

7000 Increase Expected Here When Fall Term Opens on Sept. 22

The feet of Washington school children returning to their books on September 22 will mean not only the end of vacation fun for hte children but also a considerable headache for the District School board, the superintendent of school's office revealed last night.

Grade school facilities are likely to be severely strained by the wave of incoming Government, defense and civilian workers which has brought about 60,000 persons to the city since June, 1940, the school office said. The strain will be felt acutely in the Southeast area, they added.

About a dozen portable schools will be in use when classes are convened and four new school buildings are projected to take care of the increased school-child population.

Expect 7000 More

According to a study made by the school board, Robert L. Haycock, first assistant superintendent of schools said, an average of one elementry-school-age child can be expected for every new family here. This would mean that at least 7000 new elementary school pupils will be registering in Washington in September.

Since the greatest influx is of young married couples, Acting Superintendent Frank C. Daniel said, the strain will be mostly upon the grade schools and high school facilities are considered adequate to meet the increase.

New buildings are to be erected at Minnesota Avenue and Ely Place Southeast, Alabama Avenue and Thirty-sixth Street Southeast, Atlantic Street and Nichols Avenue Southeast, and a Negro school at Forty-ninth and Hayes Streets Northeast. The first two are expected to be completed by next March and will house 350 pupils each.

Two of the frame portable schools, relics of the World War population boom, will be used to take care of pupils in the Bennings area pending completion of the Minnesota Avenue school.

Bellvue Problem

The major point of embarrassment for school officials is the new Navy housing project at Bellvue, near Bolling Field, where the Navy has reported that there will be a considerable number of school-age children in residence during the next year. The nearest school is in Congress Heights, a mile and a half away. Haycock said that these pupils would have to be accommodated there, and in other schools, until the Atlantic Street building is ready for use. Money for this project has not yet been appropriated, he added, although the land has been acquired.

Student Shot By Pal Trying To 'Scare' Him

CHRISTOPHER MERTZ, JR.,

A Gordon Junior High School student was accidentally shot in the hips yesterday with a .22-caliber rifle by a playmate who was trying to "scare him" while he was fishing in the Potomac River near Chain Bridge.

The wounded boy, Christopher Mertz, jr., 14, of [illegible]mac Avenue Northwest, was treated at Georgetown Hospital, where his condition was described as "fair, not serious as yet."

Milton Wickstrand, 13, of 2938 Eskridge Terrace Northwest, told police that he and a companion were in the woods on the Virginia side of the river with rifles, shooting for target practice. He said that he saw young Mertz standing on the rocks on the Washington side, with his back to him.

"I guess I was trying to scare him," he admitted, but said that he shot in front of the boy and to one side. Witnesses said that the bullet apparently glanced from a rock or the surface of the water and then struck Mertz, pasing through his body and lodging in his left hip.

Two boys who were on the bridge talking down to "Sonny" when the shooting occurred summoned one of the Mertz neighbors, W. B. Davy, who took the lad to the hospital in his car.

'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde' Takes on a New Realism

Spencer Tracy and Splendid Cast, at Palace, Make Stevenson Thriller More Grim Than Ever; Supplementary Fioms Are in Lighter Mood

"DR. JEKYLL AND MR. HYDE," as presented on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater this week, with Spencer Tracy in the dual title role, is the most vividly realistic version of the Robert Louis Stevenson "horror" story so far brought to view.

LANA TURNER

It takes full advantage of the photographic and technical skill developed by the unlimited resources of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio since the tale of dual personality achieved through Dr. Jekyll's secret formula last was filmed, with Fredric March as star, and thus replaces the grostesquerie of shoddy and transparent transformations with startlingly real metamorphoses of both character and physical appearance. The gain is wholly on the side of intensified brutality and multiplied repellence.

Where once "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" could be contemplated as a mere exercise in melodramatic trickery, it now becomes a stark and disturbingly realistic study in human cruelty and depravity, ameliorated only by the consideration that the groping young scientist, in the end, is the principal victim of his own daring.

No need now to recapitulate the imaginative story of the brilliant young Dr. Jekyll, who sought to segregate the cells actuating evil from those inspiring good in the human brain; the murderous consequences of his experiments or the havoc they brought to many lives. Enough that it has been executed in the present instance with such frank, such unrestrained and such relentless actuality as to become questionable "entertainment"—especially for any but adult and nerve-hardened audiences.

Almost Too Perfectly Done

Perhaps it is that the piece has been too well done. Certainly, it never has been more expertly acted, more sumptuously staged or more skillfully directed, all factors that emphasize rather than conceal the inherent hideousness of the Stevenson creation. Spencer Tracy decorates his twofold portrayal with no distended nostrils, wolfish fangs or tousled "fright wigs." His transitions from a kindly and tender young physician, deeply in love, to a malevolent fiend are accomplished by some sort of photographic legerdemain in clear and uninterrupted view of the audience. It is principally a matter of eyes and mouth, but so minutely and perfectly contrived as to be real instead of obviously make-believe. In either character the quiet power of Tracy's acting never is dimmed.

The two principal feminine roles are played with comparable effectiveness. Ingrid Bergman, as Ivy Peterson, the ale house girl who engages Mr. Hyde's brutal interest, is a revelation in the part. "Intermezzo" no more than scratched the surface of her capability as an actress of quaint humor, pathos and dramatic strength. And as the patrician young beauty betrothed to Dr. Jekyll, Lana Turner ceases to be any mere "sweater girl" and becomes a brilliant young artist of surprisingly rich promise. Donald Crisp, as her father; Ian Hunter, Dr. Jekyll's confidant; Barton MacLane, Sara Allgood and Peter Godfrey, as the Jekyll-Hyde gentleman's gentleman, are foremost in the support. C. Aubrey Smith, Frederic Worlock, Lumsden Hare, Lawrence Grant and Billy Bevan are among the veterans cast in minor roles.

Supplementaries Not So Grim

The auxiliary film attractions at the Palace this week offer relief from the chill grimness of the major feature. The wonders, the beauties and the opportunities of Uncle Sam's northermost continental possession are handsomely set forth in Technicolor in the FitzPatrick travelogue to "Alluring Alaska" and Pete Smith contributes an interval of sprightly animal humor in "Lions on the Loose," recounting the adventures of two cubs that encounter strange adventures both in the wilds and face to face with modern civilization. An interesting newsreel further augments a feature designed for those who want their strong meat a little stronger than ever.

'Life Begins for Andy Hardy,' And in Earnest, at the Capitol

By Richard L. Coe

Despite all the hue and cry about certain "questionable" sequences in "Life Begins for Andy Hardy," which opened to packed houses yesterday at the Capitol, it is difficult to see how this national favorite could have tackled an inevitable problem more forthrightly or so true to the Hardy form.

Andy goes to New York after graduating from Carvel High, discovers life has major hypocricies, turns his back on them and gets a job in a Carvel garage until college opens. Since Andy and his fellow playmates are obviously getting older, M.-G.-M., as naturally, has been forced to treat them as such. With this latest release as the eleventh in the series, the producers not only come to grips with a problem which, if ignored much longer, could have become a rather inane joke, but guide their hero to an exemplary conclusion. What's so indecent about that?

Of course it's a difficult step for the Hardy films to take. The Judge tells Andy that promiscuity is not admirable and Andy evades the romantic tendencies of a divorcee.

Having gotten this humorless, patriarchal breast-beating over with, we now come to the more familiar phases of what is, after all, another in the Hardy series. There's a pleasant sense of novelty in the subdeb language Judy Garland employs to such comic advantage. She tosses out those quaint expressions you hear your younger acquaintances dash off with becoming zest. Judy is a great boost to this yarn.

There are also two newcomers to the series in "Life Begins for Andy Hardy" and both ring the bell roundly. Patricia Dane is the questionable lady Andy meets in New York and a thoroughly tasty dish she is, too. Ray McDonald, who danced on the Capitol stage just before leaving for this, his first picture assignment, is likable and outstanding in the brief but effective role of a young hopeful hoofer.

Lewis Stone, Fay Holden, Ann Rutherford and Sara Haden appear in their customary roles.

Patricia Bowman and Paul Haakon, two unique dancers, headline the Capitol's stage bill, appearing together in a charming finale routine. Each has a single specialty, with Miss Bowman being particularly effective in her swingy creation, "Beat Me Daddy." (Of all things, Miss B!). She and the consistently fine Haakon form a rare duo of the first rank.

Also on the bill is the Virginia baritone, Fague Springman, a young man who appeared at the Capitol a good deal in the past year or so. He has a stirring voice and a far smoother stage personality than when he began.

Jimmie Edmondson, the chap who spells, sings and talks backwards, and the knockabout Diamond Brothers, complete the bill for which the Rockets form a dancing background.

HEDDA HOPPER

A Future Star Begins Young

Hollywood, Aug. 28.—Orson Welles will use 7-month-old Judith Melinda, daughter of Dorothy Comingore and Writer Richard Collins, in his next picture for RKO, "The Magnificent Ambersons."

DEANNA DURBIN

Judith Melinda was born only one short week after Miss Commingore's final scenes in "Citizen Kane,' and Orson feels a special interest in her. "I want her in this picture," he told Dorothy, "not only because she is the first child to be in films before she was born, but because from now on I'd like the public to see her grow up in each succeeding production!"

Henry McRae, production head of Universal's western serials ever since Heck was a pup, has grown to be practically a father to all the Indian actors, so it's not surprising that the Inyo tribe finally made him a member during their latest film "Overland Mail." Henry's title is "Chief Eight-O'Clock-Rain-Or-Shine."

Barbara Stanwyck nearly started a riot, over at Columbia on the "You Belong to Me" set, when a South American orchestra was playing a lowdown doubledeut. Went into an impromptu jitterbug routine that had everyone in the place, including the carpenters, tapping. And Red Ducharme, her partner, was no slouch, either.

Fred Astaire has always dreamed of having a golf course in his own backyard so he could leap right out of bed and onto the green, as it were. And now he's going to have it. He's building a pitch-and-put course on that ranch of his down near San Diego.

Deanna Durbin had to rehearse several times for a scene in "It Started With Adam." She was supposed to rush into a bathroom, then shriek at finding it occupied. On the fourth try, the shriek she let out was a honey, 'cause Comedian Gus Schilling had sneaked in unbeknownst and laid himself out in the tub for a gag.

The illness of Dorothy Comingore, in Boston, will prevent her arrival in Washington today. Her personal appearances, in conjunction with "Citizen Kane," at RKO-Keith's Theater, therefore have been canceled.

Fire Truck Hits Streetcar To Avoid Auto

A hose truck racing to a fire failed to get there last night when it smashed into a street car to avoid hitting an auto. But the firemen—except for one who was hurt—hailed a passing fire vehicle and continued on to the scene of the alarm.

The truck, attached to No. 14 Engine Company, was headed for the box at Eighth and E Streets Southwest when, at Seventh Street and Constitution Avenue Southwest, a head-on collision with an auto operated by Eva M. Moorer, of 1803 Biltmore Street Northwest, threatened.

The fire apparatus driven by C. C. Creamer, swerved and careened off the auto into a streetcar, operated by D. E. Shautt, of Alexandria, Va. Autoist, streetcar passengers, and firemen escaped unhurt, except Sergt. J. R. Ludlam, who required treatment for leg and arm injuries.

Creamer and two other firemen of his truck, P. C. Koffman and W. Garges, continued on to the fire on another truck that came by.

The blaze proved to be nothing more than a gasoline can aflame in front of 515 Ninth Street Southeast.

A two-car crash at Eleventh and P Streets Northwest resulted in one machine turning turtle and two passengers going to the hospital.

The injured were James Robinson, 25, Negro, of 1200 N Street Northwest, taken to Emergency Hospital, and Mattie Robinson, 22, of Chevy Chase, Md., taken to Freedmens Hospital. Operator of their auto was Virgil Robinson, Negro, 25, of Chevy Chase. Driver of the other car, listed by police as Eugene Frost, jr., 19, of Ardmore, Pa., was charged by police with failure to give right of way.

Ground Broken On Salvation Army $29,000 Building

Victor B. Deyber, 2020 Twentieth Street Northwest, chairman of the citizens advisory board, broke ground yesterday afternoon on the Salvation Army's new $29,000 building at 1211 G Street Southeast.

The new building will be completed some time after the first of the year, and will house all branches of the Salvation Army's Southeastern Division.

The building, a two-story brick structure, will house a large auditorium and classrooms for young people's activities.

Funeral Is Held For Mrs. Ward

The funeral of Mrs. Louise B. Ward, 59, widow of Joseph Howard Ward, who was fatally hurt Wednesday evening when she fell down steps in her home in Rockville, Md., will take place at 10 a.m. tomorrow from the Methodist Church at Woodside. The services will be conducted by the Rev. Elgar C. Soper, pastor of the Methodist Church at Potomac. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery, Washington.

Mrs. Ward suffered a fracture of the skull and her death occurred two hours following the accident. Her husband was for a number of years a member of the District Fire Department.

'Another 'Steve Brodie'

President Gets New War Unit Plans Today

The War Department's wandering office building, which has been "up in the air" for 24 hours due to differences between the President and the Army, is scheduled to come down to earth soon—possibly today—on the Quartermaster site in Arlington, Va., favored by the President.

Officials responsible for plans for the once-called "dream building" spent yesterday in conferences and agreed on a "compromise" which they will lay before the President today.

The compromise was believed to call for erecting the building on the site reserved for a quartermaster depot, but changing its size so that it will be neither as large as the massive building of four million feet asked by the Army nor as small as the 2,500,000 feet indorsed by the President at a Tuesday press conference.

Brig. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, Army construction chief, appeared to have lost, at any rate, his fight to locate the building just across Memorial Bridge, on the northern side of the old Experimental Farm.

Gen. Somervell, a stout defender of the Memorial Bridge site, stood his ground for it Wednesday at a conference with the President, even though the Commander in Chief believed the site favored by the general would obscure the view of the Arlington Cemetery and the Lee mansion.

The committee that worked out the compromise, under the President's orders, was composed of Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission; Harold D. Smith, Director of the Budget, and Gen. Somervell.

WPA Won't Get Unused Tracks in D. C.

Seven miles of unused streetcar tracks in Washington will not be dug up and thrown into the melting pot for national defense—at least not for the present time.

Howard O. Hunter, WPA commissioner, announced that the WPA would dig up old abandoned streetcar rails throughout the Nation to salvage the steel for defense production. He directed all State WPA administrators for assistance and to give the work first priority in the WPA program. But, it was specified, the track must be public, and not traction company property.

The tracks here are owned by the Capital Transit Co., which is under legal obligation to maintain them and to pay for their removal when they are no longer needed. The company must also repave the streets.

WPA officials said that much red tape must be unraveled before the Government could accept the rails, even if offered by the traction company. Furthermore, it was pointed out that there are not enough WPA workers here to be assigned to the task of taking up the rails and repaving the streets.

E. P. Goucher, Capital Transit Co. engineer, said there are approximately 3000 tons of unused streetcar rails here. A spokesman for the company said he had been told by the WPA that the tracks would not be removed by WPA help.

D. C. Chances For 1c Milk Are Brighter

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Washington's chances of obtaining a 1-cent milk program this fall for its thousands of malnourished boys and girls are far from gloomy, despite discouraging procedure on the part of the Agriculture Department.

Investigation yesterday revealed there are a score or more children's services—day nurseries, boys' clubs, child hygiene centers and the like—which are eligible to participate.

The Agriculture Department's Surplus Marketing Administration, which administers the "penny milk" projects throughout the country, has held that Washington can get one only if a 270 per cent increase in consumption will result.

It would be well-nigh impossible to achieve such a gain in the public schools, situated in low-income neighborhoods, which are proposed for participation in a low-cost milk project, Federaly subsidized.

The reason is that about one-third of the youngsters attending these schools last winter and spring received free lunches, including milk. Had no such program been in effect, it would have been simple to meet the consumption increase requirement laid down by Surplus Marketing Association.

Now, however, it is learned, that a Washington project—if granted—would be considered as a single unit. Public schools, parochial schools, settlement houses, nurseries, etc., would be lumped together. The problem resolves itself, then, into marshaling these charitable child service agencies for a mass descent upon the SMA's technical obstacles.

In order to qualify, the juvenile welfare organizations must be non-profit, have a clientele which is on relief, WPA or lowest third income brackets and each must apply separately for inclusion in the program.

Starting the ball rolling yesterday was Thomas Gearty, director of the Merrick Boys Club, 608 Massachusetts Avenue Northeast.

Informed that the make-up of the club is such as to make members eligible for the penny half pints, Gearty said he will apply at once.

"We don't have money to buy milk for the boys at present," he said. "If we could be supplied at 1 cent a bottle, it would be a great help."

Merrick Boys' Club is a branch of the Christ Child Society settlement house.

"We took a census of our boys a few months ago," said Gearty, "and found that they average less than a glass of milk a day at home. That's why, when they went to the free camp this summer, we saw to it that each boy had a quart and a half to drink every day."

Msgr. Shehan Enthusiastic

Also enthusiastic over benefits of a 1-cent milk project was the Very Rev. Lawrence J. Shehan, director of the Catholic Charities of Washington and rector of St. Patrick's Church.

He pointed out that, of slightly more than 10,000 children attending parochial schools here last year, less than 400 were covered by the free lunch program. This in spite of the fact many of the schools are situated in low-income neighborhoods.

Msgr. Shehan voiced the opinion that several of the schools could qualify under the rule which says that a school, in order to be placed on the penny milk list, must have 65 per cent of its pupils in the relief-WPA-low-income category. He said he will take steps to obtain the low cost bottles.

The Post will continue today to inform other child service agencies of the opportunity to get good milk at a low price. It will be glad to furnish information as to qualifications and eligibility.

London Fears War Output Is Inadequate

By Drew Middleton,
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 28.—British and American war production, moving at its present capacity, will be unable to meet the demands for equipment on the present fighting fronts and the calls from other nations for arms, informed persons said today.

The strategy of the war is more and more based on production and the need is intensified by the Soviet losses of raw material and heavy industrial plants as the result of German drives in the southern Ukraine.

The demands of Russia and other nations go all the way from fighter aircraft and heavy tanks to bayonets and tent pegs, it is now disclosed.

Russia and China are making the most urgent appeals of the present belligerents for supplies, it was said, but other nations asking immediate aid in bolstering their armaments include the Dutch East Indies, the Malay States, Turkey and Portugal.

None of these latter is a belligerent but most are to be classed as "probables," informed sources said.

Britain not only has her soldiers at home to equip, it was pointed out, but also her armies in India, the Middle East and in the Far East at Singapore.

London, Aug. 28 (AP).—The British government tonight took over full control of British railways.

The four big railways are the Great Western, London Midland and Scottish, London and Northeastern, and Southern.

Kelly, 3 Aides Are Sworn In To Police Posts

Four key commands in the Metropolitan Police Department were filled officially yestrday when three captains were advanced to inspectors and Inspector Edward J. Kelly was made assistant superintendent and acting major.

Kelly was sworn in by Capt. Lawrence Beall, chief property clerk, and afterward administered the oath of office to Inspectors Richard H. Mansfield, Milton D. Smith and Harvey G. Callahan.

Appointment of Kelly as assistant superintendent with the designation that he be acting chief of police is understood to be a temporary setup pending the actual retirement of Maj. Ernest W. Brown, November 1. Brown now is using his accumulated leave.

Callahan, Smith and Mansfield immediately took up their new duties as executive officer, chief of equipment and property and chief of detectives, respectively.

Capt. Ira E. Keck, who has been acting chief of detectives since the retirement, August 1, of Bernard W. Thompson, remained as assistant chief of detectives for the time being at the request of Inspector Mansfield.

The Commissioners said Keck will be promoted to the rank of inspector "if certain civil service requirements can be met."

The District Commissioners are expected to approve at least 90 per cent of the recommendations listed in the report submitted to them by the committee investigating the Washington Police Department.

He Who 'Drinks Like a Fish' Shown To Be Just a Sissy

By International News Service

Grand Rapids, Mich., Aug. 28.—The phrase "he drinks like a fish" was proved just one of those things tonight when Miss Estelle Bozeman reported a jellyfish immersed in a highball composed of 1000 jiggers of water and one jigger of alcohol survived but a few seconds.

But a gold fish is hardier, and will survive in a 4 per cent solution of alcohol from 15 to 40 minutes, depending on its size, Miss Bozeman, a Women's Christian Temperance Union instructor, reported.

Her report on the effect of alcohol upon living matter was prepared for the sixty-seventh convention of the W. C. T. U., which will open in Grand Rapids tomorrow.

Salesgirl, Waitress and Movie Usher Take Norse Crown Princess Into Their Hearts

By Sigrid Arne
Associated Press Staff Writer

She is a salesgirl, selling camera film. She comes from a one-street town in the Kansas corn belt, and she is waiting for a better job in the Government.

Meanwhile, she is stepping on air. She has a special customer who throws glamour over the whole week. This lady has amazing big blue eyes and a soft voice with an Oxford accent. She's clever about taking movies and she buys a good bit of film.

When it comes time to make out the sales slip the girl each time asks primly, "name and address, please?" The lady says quietly, "The Crown Princess Martha of Norway, Pooks Hill, Bethesda, Md."

The salesgirl always asks the question primly as though crown princesses were a dime a dozen. She does that because she does not want to make the princess self-conscious!

The salesgirl has asked about the princess' films. It seems most of them are pictures of the three sunny-haired children of the princess: Ragnhild, 11; Astrid, 9, and Harald who is only 4, but an excellent swimmer.

Ragnhild and Astrid remember the frightened scurrying through the dark nights of Norway. But Harald doesn't. He just asks: "Where is Papa?" and he is told: "Papa is in London with the King."

The salesgirl has a memento of these visits with the princess—it is a clipping from a Norwegian paper, which the princess forgot on the counter one day. The girl meant to return it, but she couldn't—quite. She sent it home once just to prove her story.

She has borrowed a Norwegian-American dictionary at the library, and she has read one Norwegian novel (translated) and two Norwegian histories (also translated).

There's the Congregation

In Bethesda, some seven miles from downtown Washington, are several quiet-living couples who go to the Lutheran Church. About twice a month the Crown Princess sits among them and sings the old songs.

She's always accompanied by Mrs. Ragni Ostergaard. The congregation has found out that Mrs. Ostergaard is the Princess' lady-in-waiting, and that back home she is called "Countess," but that she uses "missus" here.

Sometimes P. Weddel-Jarlsburg comes, too. The congregation has found out he is the "Master of the Royal Household." He used to run Norway's palaces. He signed the checks, hired the servants, saw to the entertaining. Now he does the same thing at Pooks Hill, the estate just outside Bethesda where the Princess lives.

The people at the church tell about the time two noisy boys came by on a bicycle just as church let out. They spilled and the princess was the first to help pick them up—"just like one of us."

They are careful to pretend they don't quite know who she is. They just nod and she nods back.

Down the street a way in Bethesda is a neighborhood movie with air-cooling and good talking apparatus. It doesn't always get first-run pictures, but they come soon enough.

There is a young usher who comes from a farm 20 miles away. Twice a week he sees this quiet, blue-eyed lady come in. She whispers "halfway." She always has another lady with her. Sometimes he can't find two seats half-way, so they quietly find seats in the back.

Then he watches. He knows that she is the lady who will be Queen of Norway one day; that she grew up a Princess of Sweden. He's entranced. He says she looks best in "middle blue."

He knows which actors she likes best but he doesn't think it would be Hoyle—pardon, cricket—if he told. He's disturbed when she sits through a comedy without laughing. Then he hunts the papers for the bad news that's troubling her. Once he made a clipping file of stories that mentioned her and her husband, the Crown Prince Olav, who is in London with his father, the King. But he never had the nerve to give the clips to her, so he threw them away.

The file included pictures of Prince Olav. "Gee!" says the usher, "they'd make swell movie actors. They're pips for looks, both of 'em."

The Embassy Office Boy

At the Norwegian Legation there are 40 people working very hard because so much of the kingdom's business is transacted here. There are one or two Americans on the staff in jobs where they don't have to handle too confidential work.

The staff has pasted big, gold stickers on every door. There is a big "V" in the center of each sticker. In one office is a big picture of Mrs. Roosevelt.

They don't take time to go out for lunch. They bring sandwiches and some one goes into the kitchen and makes a big pot of coffee. Then they have their snack on the porch.

Quite frequently they get invitations to dinner with the Crown Princess, right down to the office boys. It's an office boy, I want to tell about. He says the Norwegians are hell-bent for eating outside. They even bring out the good silver. They are crazy about coffee and sweet corn.

He says he thought the Crown Princess would wear a crown—at least a little one—when she entertained. But she just had on a blue silk dress and a jeweled pin which looked like the royal crest. He looks quite important when he says that.

He says once he carried sugar and cream to the princess and she asked if he'd had enough to eat. "Gee!" he says, "and you ought to see the invitations she turns down. Just to eat with us mugs."

He sneaked a little cake to take to his mother once. It's getting hard but she hasn't eaten it yet.

There's a red-headed Irish girl, full of wise cracks, who works as a waitress in a Washington department store restaurant. It's a popular place. Twice a week, in walks the crown princess, she says, and has lunch. She doesn't eat much, but she knows fancy sauces like this Irish girl knows the corns on her puppies.

This Irish girl is putting on no dog for no crown princess. But, she thinks back, doesnt it beat Harry how dumb some dopes are? Didn't she, the other day, seat four fat dames at the next table? Didn't she find them yapping like a set of banshees when she brought them their spaghetti, and them with three tires already around their waists?

And they were saying, "Well, it isn't our war. Let 'em kill each other off."

The red-head looked over at the crown princess, and she had ducked her head and sat very quietly and didn't eat. And did the Irish girl break it? She spilled a cup of coffee in the nearest fat lap. And she paid the cleaning bill. It cost a buck, and well worth it, she says.

Burial will be in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Bittinger died Tuesday at Amesbury, Mass., while on a vacation trip with her husband. Her father-in-law died in a Washington hospital the following day, before his son returned to the city.

Mrs. Bittinger, who was stricken suddenly with a cerebral ailment, is survived in addition to her husband by a son, Yorke Flynn Bittinger, and her father, Clarence L. Gilbert, of Bethesda, Md.; two sisters, Mrs. Fulton Gruver and Mrs. Melford McGuire, and a brother James Gilbert.

In addition to his son, Mr. Bittinger is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary Leishear Bittinger, and a daughter, Mrs. Robert W. Hall, of Santa Maria, Calif.

A native of Greenville, W. Va., Mr. Bittinger was educated at Hampden-Sydney College, Va., came to Washington at the age of 18 and engaged in the lumber business. Subsequently he operated a restaurant here, and then took a position as teller at the McLachlen Banking Corp., retiring two years ago. Death came after a long illness.

Mr. Bittinger was past master of the B. B. French Lodge, Masons, and a member of the Washington Commandery, Knights Templar, and of the Sons of the American Revolution.

For many years he was an elder of the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church. He made his home with his son, at 3910 Livingston Street Northwest.

He was also a director of the Brookland Building Association and treasurer of the Mutual Fire Insurance Co.

L. R. Davidson Dies; Retired Industrialist

T. M. Lanigan, Long a District Employe, Dies

Requiem mass for Thomas M. Lanigan, 79, who served the District Government 42 years before his retirement in 1931, will be said at 11 a. m. tomorrow at the Sacred Heart Catholic Church, Sixteenth Street and Park Road Northwest. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Lanigan died Tuesday at his home, 1368 Harvard Street Northwest, after a short illness. A native of Washington, he was employed as an overseer in the Engineering Department of the District.

He was a member of Spalding Council, Knights of Columbus; Ancient Order of Hibernians, Catholic Knights and Holy Name Society.

Mr. Lanigan's daughter, Mrs. M. Joseph Meehan, and her husband, a Commerce Department official, were located in the White Mountains of New Hampshire last night and notified of his death. They had been motoring in Canada and were found at an inn after members of the family had police make a check of hostelries in the area.

In addition to Mrs. Meehan, Mr. Lanigan is survived by two other daughters, Mrs. Walker F. Dooley and Miss Anna C. Lanigan, of Washington, and a son, Thomas M. Lanigan, jr., of Washington.

Liquor Receipts In Va. Increase

Richmond, Va., Aug. 28 (AP).—Gross receipts of State liquor stores in July amounted to $1,927,150, an increase of approximately $649,795 over the July, 1940, gross receipts of $1,277,355, records of the Virginia Alchoolic Beverage Control Board showed today.

Gross receipts from spirits alone totaled $1,870,786, compared with $1,290,804 in July a year ago.

The 10 per cent State sales tax accounted for $177,355 of the gross receipts, while in the same month of the previous year the tax amounted to approximately $123,614.

Mrs. McKee Is Buried In Glenwood

Final rites were held yesterday for Mrs. Clara Yoder McKee, 72, of 1115 Clifton Street Northwest, one-time church organist and choir leader, who died Tuesday at her home after an illness of two weeks.

A native of Washington, the daughter of the late Maj. Charles Yoder, Civil War veteran, and Annie Warder Yoder, member of an old District family, Mrs. Yoder was educated in schools here, and later studied voice, piano and organ in New York and London.

Mrs. McKee served as organist and choir director in several churches of the Washington area, most recently with the Church of the Ascension. She was a member of the board of directors of the Volunteers of America Hospice here, and of Beck Circle, G. A. R. Ladies' Auxiliary.

She leaves her husband, Henry Hunt McKee, president of the National Capital Bank and East Washington Savings Bank; a brother, Frank Yoder, of Albuquerque, N. M.; a stepdaughter, Mrs. Gustav Franke, and a stepson, George Marion McKee, both of Washington.

Services were held yesterday at the S. H. Hines Funeral Home, 2901 Fourteenth Street Northwest. Burial followed at Glenwood Cemetery.

TROIKA TO PRESENT RECORD REVUE. Nationally known stars will glitter at the Troika opening Thursday. The truly remarkable line-up will include Rosita Rios, dynamic Puerto Rican singer recently seen at the Capitol Theater; Accordionist Gypsy Markoff, darling of New York's topflight night spots; Karakaeff, renowned as one of the finest male dancers of the original Ballet Russe; the Chandra Kaly dancers who come direct from Piping Rock and have played two command performances at Buckingham Palace . . . This is a revue of which any Manhattan club could justly be proud and sets a new high mark for Washington night spot diversion. There'll be a Pan American finale. Add on dancing in the new Crystal Room, Valencia's rhumba group and Sasha Lukas' orchestra. Troika's shooting high this year!

Don Carper and his Four will return to the Cafe Caprice for its fall opening on Wednesday, it is announced by Manager Dan Wathey, of the Roger Smith Hotel. This is splendid news. Don and his group made endless friends in Caprice last year. It's really a return "by popular request."

MATT AND EILEEN RETURN. The Anchor Room favorites, Matt Windsor and Eileen George, will return from their month-long vacation next Monday. Matt has been fishing and swimming at Ocean City, Md., with his family. Eileen has been up in the Adirondacks most of the time, but is now in New York looking around for new songs to christen in the Anchor Room on the evening of Labor Day . . . This leaves only today and tomorrow for you to say goodbye to "We Two."

DANCING FOOTBALLER. Martin, of La Marr and Martin, now dancing at the Casino Royal, is really Herschel Martin, famed as an All-American fullback in 1931, later a professional footballer with the New York Giants. His amazing whirls look more difficult than any football play.

"MISS WASHINGTON" of 1941, Jean Cavanaugh, certainly gets around. When we said goodbye to her at the "good luck party" in her honor in the Neptune Room, we thought it was really goodbye. But 30 minutes later who should we see dancing the conga in the Lounge Riviera but "Miss Washington" and Lieut. Maurice J. Fitzgerald of the Army Air Corps. Jean is one of the loveliest "Miss Washingtons" ever selected, may very well return to Washington as "Miss America."

Fred Miller, part owner of Restaurant "823," is planning to get right back into the groove as a singer. He and Van Taylor are rehearsing a bunch of rollicking new ballads for the midnight session.

ONE DAY CANADIAN VACATION. Maestro Milton Davis recently took an early plane (and what a mighty effort that was!) to Buffalo, motored over to Canada for dinner and a look around, caught the plane back to Washington, arriving here at 8:25. "I've been wanting a Canadian vacation for a long time," he said.

A THREE GENERATION PARTY was held in the Plymouth the other eve. Coproprietor Charlie Braden had just returned from his boyhood home at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., and brought his father back with him. Dining with them was Charlie's blond baby boy, "Binny," who is a born greeter like his daddy, said "Hello" to everybody in the place.

TUNE THERMOMETER. Mayfair's popular Senators are so constantly flooded with request numbers that they have a time trying to sandwich in one of their own groups. But Pianist Bill Harrington says that Mayfair patrons have excellent musical taste, prefer the streamlined later hits. He cited their top request numbers as "Time was," "You and I," "All Alone and Lonely" and "I Went Out of My Way."

MARTIN AND LA MARR, gifted ballroom dancers now appearing at the Casino Royal

Singer Tommy Lawrence, of the Nightingale, is spending hours every evening saying goodbyes to all those 'Gale customers who are rushing in to see him before he leaves on Sunday night. Attention, singers! Maestro Rodd Raffell is now auditioning male vocalists to take Tommy's place.

SHOREHAM SCENE. Maureen O'Sullivan, of the cinema, telephoning in the lobby and verra smart in a tan covert suit with pink blouse . . . Dancer Nitza all happified because her portrait in a Spanish costume is now being exhibited on Fifth Avenue . . . Impresario Max Lowe bursting with plans for Shoreham fall entertainment. No date has been set yet for the formal opening of the Blue Room.

"WHAT-A-MAN" Bill Strickland, of the Lotus, has presented us with a unique vacation snapshot of himself. It shows him holding a minnow in one hand and a giant bass in the other. "The big fish is the one who got away," he says.

SPORTING GLEN ECHO MUSICIANS. Drummer-trombonist Sammy Ferro, of Paul Kain's band, is a baseball devotee. He often plays with kids on the sandlots . . . Trumpeter Joe Garbleman always has his pockets full of golf balls which give him sort of a Mae West-ish contour . . . Pianist Ken Foy and Trombonist Dick Leith are golf bugs, too.

Dick Koons, young leader of the Mayflower Lounge Orchestra, will become a papa in the not distant future. Or so we've heard from six different sources.

BURT'S IN HOME GUARDS. Burt Lopatin, owner of Burt's Trans-Lux, is a member of the Alexandria unit of the Virginia Protective Force that's pinch-hitting for the National Guard. He's drilling manfully but says he gets awfully tired after he's marched four miles. But what we can't understand is that Burt's only a private. And he'd make the best mess sergeant in the Army.

PALL MALL PLANS. Bert Bernath's orchestra in the Pall Mall Room will be augmented about September 11 for the fall season. Pall Mall has remained open all summer for the first time in its history, is looking forward to a record-braking fall business.

ENGINEERING BASSIST. Hardy Franks, the tall and goodlooking bassist with Jimmy Summerville's Four M's at Hi Hat, is studying aeronautical engineering in his spare time. Between keeping up with his studies and his music in Hi Hat, he only gets six hours sleep a night, but figures the effort will be worth while. Engineering comes naturally to Hardy. His father, John Franks, is one of the senior associates of Fairchild Aviation.

Hollywood Wronged Tommy Harmon

Chicago, Aug. 29.—The corn grows tallest not in Iowa but in Hollywood. They screened "Harmon of Michigan" for football writers and coaches last night in a downtown Chicago hotel and it's collousal, stupidnous and horrific. It wasn't very good.

POVICH

There's reason now to tremble for what Hollywood might do to the life of Lou Gehrig. They gave Harmon a fine kicking around and are still batting .000 in their attempts to produce a football picture that doesn't assail the nostrils, the vision and the eardrums. For Harmon and introducing Harmon of Michigan gag of the studios and chucked the poor kid in the middle of the mess.

When Hollywood was keeping its hands off Harmon and introdusing Harmon of Michigan with a fan-fare consisting of authentic rapid-fire news-reel shots of his amazing touchdown runs of last season, it was wonderful. It was also very misleading. It was the last eye-ful of good football that the picture contained.

A Plot From the Grade C Files

You know the rest, if you've seen Hollywood's past crimes against football. Tommy didn't marry the coach's daughter, but his young wife was rooting for him as the "Big Game" neared. Sure, Tommy's team won it. By this time, he was coaching, not playing. And sure enough, he beat his old coach in the "Big Game" with the traditional radio announcer telling all about it as the ball moved up and down the field. Somehow, Hollywood's football announcers can watch 100 yards of football field and all that's going on, without taking their eyes off the same spot.

It all ends up in an indictment of high-pressure college football by young Coach Harmon who lost his ideals about the game to give old Webster a winning team "at any price." When his quarterback is half-murdered because young Coach Harmon gives him no protection whatsoever against a charging line, young Coach Harmon rediscovers his conscience and quits his job.

The story reaches its absolute nadir when the script writers call for Harmon to show his stuff with a professional team, with all of his teammates rankling with jealously at the big dough Harmon is getting. THEY don't block for him, and get him half-killed in the first half. But, never fear, Tommy wins 'em. He does it by stick-to-it-iveness, high resolution and what Churchill would call good old British grit. Two ribs broken on his left side, Tommy takes the ball in his hand and the bit in his teeth, and with no blocking whatsoever from his ten jealous teammates he gallops, unaided to a touchdown from kick-off Yes, he does. You see it right in the picture. That fetches the boys to his side. It also fetched half of the preview audience to the bar at the rear of the big ballroom for a bit of sustinence.

Chicago Has Heavyweight Hopes

Chicago, which never produced a heavyweight fight champion, is in something of a dither over a young colored lad named Booker T. Beckwith, who is growing up to be a 285-pounder. He's had only 17 professional fights, but already they're beating the drums for him as the coming champion.

He zoomed into new prominence the other night by licking Red Burman, the trial horse from the East whom every challenger is supposed to lick before he gets any national notice. Beckwith did it very thoroughly. He knocked Burman down in the first round for a nine count, and laid him out for a count of three in the third round before winning a very handy decision. Even Joe Louis couldn't knock Burman down until he was able to knock him out.

Beckwith was beating Burman throughout the fight despite the fact that after the third round he was fighting with only a left hand. He was fighting with a fractured small bone in his right hand and couldn't use it. Burman, interviewed after the fight, said, "That boy's the fastest puncher I ever met. He doesn't hit as hard as Louis, but he will when he grows up. I don't know any heavyweight he couldn't lick today, except Louis. I wish I had his future as a fighter."

Rigney's Failure Is No Mystery

Coach Muddy Ruel of the White Sox, miracle-man behind the sensational pitching of Jimmy Dykes' staff of cast-offs, had an explanation for Johnny Rigney's dismal failure on the mound yesterday after he had won two consecutive three-hit shutouts.

"Rigney had as much stuff on the ball as on the days when he was winning those shutouts," said Ruel. "But good pitching won't stop good hitting all the time. Those guys up there with bats in their hands can be tough, too. They'll murder anything but good pitching, and sometimes they'll murder that, too. This is a two-sided business. Any time you get a good hitter out, you've done a good job. When you don't get him out, it should come as no great surprise. And there are always more good hitters than there are good pitchers. But the pitchers who can't get those weak hitters out are the real bums."

Pounds of Potpourri

Dear Boss,

This wouldn't be a half bad trip if I didn't have to sit down and pound this typewriter. In fact, Boss, I'm just about fed up on this machine. I've been sitting here looking at it for half an hour trying to get an idea for a letter and what happens? The typewriter looks up at me and says, "Get to work, Jerk." If I weren't in love with the capital "T" on this Corona bum, I'd throw it out the window.

HAIGHT

Well, boss, I'm still sitting here trying to write something. Since I ended that informative first paragraph I have (1) disposed of hangnail on right index finger (2) wondered who won the third at Marlboro (3) worried about expense account (4) tried to figure out why the next town spelled "La Jolla" is pronounced "La Hoya" (5) made mental picture of myself riding surf board in Hawaii (6) attempted to get better view of blonde on hotel patio (7) thought how lucky I am to have a boss like you (8) worried about expense account.

You see funny things out of a hotel window. A man across the street, fixing an electric sign on a movie theater, just messed up "Loretta Young in He Stayed for Breakfast." He's changing the sign and at present it reads "Gary Cooper in All Seats 20 Cents." He's still working on it, boss. Now it reads "Gary Cooper With Barbara Stanwyck in All Seats 20 Cents." I get it—standing room only.

I met a man today who doesn't like California. He says it is the "Three S" State—sunshine, slacks and suckers. Did you hear the one about the jockey who reduced so much that he went to the window to adjust the shade and went up with it? There's a night spot here with 11 bars in it. In fact there are so many bars here that they sing, "Beat Me Daddy, 888 to the Bar."

I have been wondering ever since I have been here why this hotel, 18 miles from the south border is named "U. S. Grant." I found out that a son of the general was the original builder. Might be a good idea to build a Robert E. Lee annex to take care of the Dixie trade. Incidentally, my room is No. 333. Sort of makes me feel at home because my horses invariably run third when I bet them to win and place.

This San Diego is a boom town. Population has almost doubled in two years, chiefly through Army, Navy and Marine bases, plus the Consolidated airplane factories. These plants employ upward of 40,000 men. This is ideal climate for plane making. With no rain from April to November, assembly work can be done outdoors. The police force has been in-

Soldiers Field, Chicago, Aug. 28.—The Chicago Bears, big and bristling, ground out some kind of a score in every quarter and packed three touchdowns into the final 15 minutes tonight to bedazzle a record crowd of 98,200 fans with a 37-13 victory over the College All-Americans.

Supreme in professional football, the Chicago team that rolled to a 73-to-0 triumph over the Redskins last November, tonight hung up the biggest margin of victory in the eight years of the pros' series with the All-Americans. In the fading minutes it was sheer bewilderment as the Collegians gave ground before the Bears.

Threatened suddenly with a close game when the Collegians' passing attack cut the Bears' lead to 16-13 at the start of the fourth quarter, the Bears cut loose. Sid Luckman returned a kickoff 45 yards and set in motion one more touchdown. They left the Collegians limp and mortified by pulling the moth-eaten sleeper play for another touchdown. And with one minute to play they slammed home the third touchdown of the quarter to insure the most one-sided rout in the series' history.

Forty-seven Yard Placement Good

The Bears were stopping at little tonight. In the third quarter, they boldly and blithely called Lee Artoe, big tackle from the University of California, out of their line and held the ball for him for a placement try, 47 yards from the post with the angle sharp. Artoe slugged it home for three points.

Not always, however, were the Bears in the ascendancy. The Collegians surged back after a first-quarter touchdown of the pros to tie the score at 6-3, and they pressed goalward again in the fourth quarter to cut the Bears' lead to three points.

Tommy Harmon did not disappoint the 98,200 despite his losing cause. He teamed up with his old foe, Minnesota's George Francy, on a pass play that tied the score for the All-Americans in the first quarter. Flung by Harmon, it was a superlative pitch into the corner of the field and Francy snared it with a leaping catch.

Harmon, Francy, little Charley O'Rourke, of Boston College, and Jack Robinson, the colored boy from U. C. L. A., were swell football players for the Collegians tonight. Harmon cut loose with the flashy runs that marked his college career, but

Abbott Leads Amateur Field Into Semifinals

Actor Turns Back Todd and Billows; Riegel, Bishop and Ward Also Survive

By the United Press

Field Club, Omaha, Nebr., Aug. 28.—B. Patrick Abbott, an unemployed actor from Pacific Palisades, Calif., knocked over two of the toughest match players in golf today and led the field into the semifinals of national amateur tournament.

First he bowled over the veteran Harry Todd, of Dallas, Tex., 2 up, and then he whipped Ray Billows, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., 3 and 2.

In the other semifinals match, Marvin (Bud) Ward, of Spokane, Wash., the 1939 champion, meets 26-year-old Bobby Riegel of Houston, Tex.

Scrambling all over the Field Club's tight layout, Ward pulled miracle after miracle to defeat little Glen Oatman of Kansas City, Mo., 3 and 1, and Steve Kovach, young steel mill worker from Tarentum, Pa., 5 and 4.

Chapman's Conquerer Bows

Three down at the turn, Bishop rallied brilliantly to defeat Hal Stone, jr., of Bloomington, Ill., 1 up on the eighteenth green of the morning round, then broke down hard-hitting Lou Jennings, Portland, Ore., 5 and 3. Jennings, one of the favorites after whipping defending champion Dick Chapman in the first National Amateur match he ever played, faded badly on the front nine and finished six over par.

Riegel first eliminated Walter Burkemo, Evanston, Ill., then won from Bruce McCormick, the Los Angeles fireman, 1 up in a match complicated by a questionable ruling. With the match squared, McCormick accidentally kicked his own ball near the ninth green. Counting that as a stroke, he halved the hole with a par four but an official ruled such a kick meant loss of the hole.

At the fourteenth hole, officials found another rule which revealed it should have been scored merely as an extra stroke which would have given McCormick a half, but still another rule prevented them from reversing the decision after the two have driven from the tenth tee.

Few Favorites Fall

Unlike yesterday, when the favorites fell, it was a day of formful golf. Billows, twice a finalist and the most consistent match player

Mistake Admitted In Ruling Costing Match in Amateur

By International News Service

Omaha, Nebr., Aug. 28.—Joseph C. Dey, jr, executive secretary of the United States Golf Association, announced late today that Referee W. F. Nicholson, of Denver, had admitted he was wrong when he assessed a penalty hole on Bruce McCormick, of Los Angeles, in today's quarter-finals match with Bob Riegel, of Houston.

Nicholson's decision cost McCormick the match.

According to U. S. G. A. officials, Nicholson quoted the wrong rule of golf after McCormick accidentally touched his ball on the ninth hole of his match with Riegel.

McCormick accepted Nicholson's ruling without protest. If he had protested before proceeding to the next hole, the U. S. G. A. bigwigs could have tossed out Nicholson's "mistake" ruling.

Nicholson held that touching ball cost McCormick the hole. The U. S. G. A. high officials said the referee should have quoted a rule which would have cost McCormick only a stroke. With this penalty, McCormick would not have lost the hole—or the match, as Riegel scored only a 1-up victory.

'Come Over,' Says Jacobs To Schmeling

By International News Service

New York, Aug. 28.—Three "ifs" stand between Max Schmeling and another chance to win the World's Heavyweight Championship, Promoter Mike Jacobs said today as he read with an icy stare the news that the German heavyweight has planned a fistic comeback.

"Humph," snorted Mike. "He's got a long way to go."

Schmeling paid a visit to the International News Service office in Germany and boasted to Pierre Huss, I. N. S. Berlin bureau chief, that, "I am tougher than ever and can lick any of them."

The brain of the bash business read that much of the news, then mumbled:

"We've got plenty of good contenders over here.'

Corpl. Schmeling, who is one of the Hitler parachute troopers now, further explained to Huss that, "I'll parachute out over New York from the first plane that will take me and 'pull a Crete' on Mike Jacobs. Naturally," he added, "I'll be equipped with boxing gloves instead of a machine gun."

Uncle Michael, who hardly could qualify as a non-Aryan in Nazified Germany, chuckled at that one. He said, "Well, we can talk about his coming over here later. Right now he wouldn't be any more welcome here than I would be over there."

Der Mox, among other things, told Huss that he is fully recovered from an illness that confined him to a military hospital and that his leg, injured in action, is virtually healed. He said he hoped to come to New York "sometime next year," and "bring back Joe Louis' scalp."

Jacobs read through Huss' dispatch, then said:

"I'm glad to know Max is still alive and healthy.

"If he stays that way, maybe he can think about boxing again.

"If he's able to fight after the war, he can have his chance to win the title as far as I'm concerned. . . . If he can beat the other contenders."

Nats Are Held To 4 Hits as Sox Win, 4-0

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 28.—Nothing came of the Nats' attempt to win their third straight game today—nine nothings, to be exact. Thornton Lee and the White Sox shut 'em out, 4-0, to the delight of 7,500 customers. It was a very unhappy afternoon for the Nats.

They made only four hits today after beating the White Sox with an 18-hit deluge yesterday. The left-handed Lee cooled 'em off. Washington got one man as far as third base and two as far as second. Lee licked 'em good for his seventeenth win of the season.

We don't like to be too depressing about it all, but the fact is that the Nats didn't get a solid hit after the second inning. In the last seven innings the only Washington athletes to get on base were Buddy Lewis, who beat out a slow grounder to second base in the fourth inning, and George Archie who did the same thing in the eighth.

Steve Sundra started the ball game for Washington, and two of the Nats' old pals, Joe Kuhel and Taft Wright, attended to him. They socked Sundra and his successors for five of the White Sox' ten hits that included two doubles by Kuhel and two singles and a double by Wright. Sundra was lifted for a pinch hitter in the sixth.

Three Hits for Wright

The Sox nudged him for a run in the first inning, when Kuhel impolitely lined a two-bagger over Buddy Lewis' head against the right-field wall. With two out, Wright ushered Kuhel home with a single to right, the first of his three hits.

In the third inning, Don Kolloway singled to center, stole second on Sundra's renowned languid pitching motion, and Kuhel rapped another double to right. Everybody knew it would fall safely, except Kolloway, who reached only third on the blow. Kreevich fouled out, but Sundra walked Wright purpose-

Rookie Pollet Blanks Giants, 5-0, for Cards

St. Louis Cuts Dodger Lead to One Game; 20-Year-Old Southpaw Limits Foes to 3 Hits

New York, Aug. 28.—The St. Louis Cardinals took advantage of an open date for the Brooklyn Dodgers today to crush the New York Giants, 5 to 0, and cut the margin between first and second place in the National League to one game.

Howard Pollet, the 20-year-old rookie southpaw sensation, pitched a magnificent game in holding the Giants to three scattered singles while his teammates blew the struggle wide open with a five-run blast in the fourth inning.

It was Pollet's third start since being called up from the Texas League two weeks ago and was his second victory. He beat the Boston Braves, 3 to 2, on four hits in his debut, and then lost a 3-to-2 decision to Brooklyn last Sunday, although holding the Dodgers to seven safeties.

Today he gave a scratch single to Mel Ott in the first, a hit by Dick Bartell in the third and another by Johnny Rucker in the sixth. Each came with two out and the only real threat against him developed in the eighth, when Bill Jurges walked and Joe Orengo was hit by a pitched ball with none out. Then Pinch-hitter Hank Danning popped up, Bartell sacrificed and Rucker fanned.

That one base on balls was the only one the youngster gave.

Redskins Try George Smith In Backfield

By a Staff Correspondent

San Diego, Calif., Aug. 28.—George Smith, center on the world champion Redskins of 1937, was tried as a blocking back in scrimmage today. Smith, who played the position occasionally while at University of California, seemed to fit in well at the new job. Reporting in excellent condition, Smith has been punting sensationally here.

X-ray pictures failed to disclose a break in the left foot of Steve Slivinski, regular guard who was injured yesterday. The injury was diagnosed as a torn ligament in the left side of his foot and Trainer Doc Mauro said he would be in action at Sunday's practice.

Wilbur Moore has an ailing leg ligament. Blocking was stressed by Coach Ray Flaherty in today's scrimmage. Halfback Red Morgan was particularly impressive. The defense was equipped with bulky pads for the work.

Moore Released From Hospital

Boston, Aug. 28 (U.P.).—Terry Moore, captain and centerfielder of the St. Louis Cardinals, will be released tomorrow or Saturday from St. Elizabeths Hospital where he has been confined for eight days as result of being srtuck by a pitched ball.

Boxing Commission Suspends Eddie Blunt for Four Months

By Tony Neri

Poland knocked out Blunt in the fourth round of the scheduled 25-round match. He will be suspended until January 1, 1942.

The National Boxing Association has been notified of the action and Blunt will not be allowed to fight in any States affiliated with the N. B. A.

Abe Kettler, manager of Blunt, stated last night that he was going to appeal to the commission today for a hearing. Kettler asserted, "Blunt was hurt at the beginning of the third round after taking a Poland punch under the heart. After that my boy was through. Poland is a heluva belter . . . I tried to talk to Blunt between rounds but he didn't seem to be right . . . he was hurt bad. After the fight Blunt was down in the mouth. He wouldn't talk . . . just wanted to be alone."

Kettler said Blunt's share of the gate was $1040 net. The manager was surprised at the small payoff.

Comiskey Suspended

Pat Comiskey, who was supposed to meet Claudio Villar, was also suspended for 30 days for failure to put in an appearance for his engagement here.

The commission met yesterday morning in the insurance office of a member, Thomas P. Morgan, jr. Present at the meeting were Morgan, Claude W. Owen, chairman; John J. Agnew, junior member of the ring body; Dick O'Brien, secretary, and Charlie Reynolds, who refereed the Blunt-Poland match.

The commission also announced that (a) no main event fighter will be paid off until noon of the day following a bout; (b) all contracts of preliminary fighters must be filed with the commission before they will be allowed to appear here.

Promoter Joe Turner stated yesterday that he took an $800 beating on the show. Co-promoter Kearns dropped about $600.

Turner added, "the only thing that looked fishy to me was Blunt going down without being hit."

Poland Disconsolate

Bill Poland was feeling disconsolate about the whole business. The Jewish heavyweight said, "I'm sorry the fight finished the way it did. It made me look bad. The guy just wasn't willing."

Poland is scheduled to make his next appearance in a return match against Harry Bobo in Pittsburgh, September 15. Bobo was knocked out in the eighth round of the first meeting.

Earley Allows 2 Hits; Cubs Bow to Braves

By the Associated Press

Boston, Aug. 28—Tom Early's two-hit pitching gave him a slight edge in a stirring hurling duel with Vallie Eaves of the Chicago Cubs today, enabling the Boston Braves to cop a 2—1 verdict and the rubber tilt of their three-game series.

Bill Nicholson singled sharply to right in the fourth and that was the only blow off the Boston boy until the ninth when, with two away, Phil Cavarretta slammed a 2—2 pitch over the right field fence to save the Cubs from a whitewashing.

Eaves, who was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the eighth was almost as effective. The Braves scored one in the first as the big Indian loaded the bases and then forced in a tally by walking Gene Moore. In the fourth the Braves collected their second when Max West lifted his tenth homer into the right field bleachers.

7 Top 3-Year-Olds Entered In Warrenton Horse Show

Seven of the Old Dominion's best 3-year-olds are already entered for the juvenile championship of the Warrenton Horse Show, beginning tomorrow at the Warrenton (Va.) show grounds, and any other colts that win blue ribbons during the progress of the opening session will be added to the eligible list.

Already qualified are Springsbury Farm's trio, Looter, Traumertan and Port o' War; Betty Couzens' Spanish Oak, J. North Fletcher's Pappy, Mr. and Mrs. C. Lynch Christian, jr's Scotch Yarn, Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggin Perry's Magic Luck and Ruth O'Keefe's O'Doc, who might not be able to show because of a slight injury he received last week.

Otherwise the show will be principally a "battle of champions," as every tricolor winner on the Virginia circuit this year will compete in the conformation or working hunter divisions.

Heading the list is Mr. and Mrs. Perry's most brilliant star, Cornish Hills, who has won enough titles this season to furnish an entire tack room. His No. 1 adversary in Old Dominion shows, Mrs. M. E. Whitney's The Bear, will continue the pursuit, along with Mr. and Mrs. George Watts Hill's Inky and Balkonian, the Greenhalghs' Big Boy and Billy Do, Mrs. D. N. Lee's Glamour Man, and other top conformation mounts.

In the open jumping division, Virginia railhangers will tell you that the final session of the show on Labor Day may mark the shattering of local high-jumping records.

Ten mounts, most of them veterans at jumping 6 feet or higher, will turn out en masse for the featured skyscraper event, including Lieut. Fred J. Hughes, jr.'s Black Caddy, who went 6 feet 6½ inches at the recent Columbus show; Margaret Cotter's Rocksie, victor at just one-half an inch less at the Rappahannock (Va.) show; Peggy Sampson's Hi Ho Silver, Black Boy and Hellzapoppin; Capt. David Wagstaff's Enterprise, and other high-minded leapers.

Tomorrow's program, beginning at 9 a. m. daylight saving time, includes classes for ponies under saddle and over fences, foals, yearlings, 2-year-olds, junior hunters, 3-year-olds, novice hunters, working hunters, hunter hacks, halfbred hunters, junior jumpers, junior hunter hacks, maiden hunters, 5-year-olds and under, $200 jumper stake, working hunters with amateurs up, modified Olympic, and junior championship.

Vincent Richards Bows Out

New York, Aug. 28.—The active sports career of one of the finest competitors and best guys in the muscle business, Vincent Richards, will formally close here next Monday. Richards finally has yielded to the pressure of business and the increased barking of his valiant dogs. He's giving up the competitive side of the game after a quarter of a century of playing, though he is still on the sunnier side of 40.

CONSIDINE

Richards won the doubles championship of the United States with Bill Tilden, when he was only 15. That was during or just after the World War. Next Monday, fittingly enough, the perennial Tilden will be his opponent in a three-out-of-three professional singles match, and they will team up against Karel Kozeluh and Fred Perry, who Tilden says is the greatest player in the world today.

Age Hasn't Bothered His Game

"I've seen them all, Tilden told us, "and I say that Richards was the greatest instinctive volleyer who ever lived, and just about the greatest strategist the game ever saw. And the remarkable thing about Vinny is that his game is still excellent today," enthused the man whose own unending skill is one of the wonders of the sports world. "After his auto accident in Florida a few years ago they practically had to rake him out of the wreckage, yet he came back to play fine tennis, and confounded some of the greatest doctors in the country, including Dr. Henry Reimann, who worked with that great Viennese, Dr. Lorenz."

For the writer's dough, Richards would have been an outstanding ball player, football backfield man or end, boxer, or anything else he tried. He had (and retires with) a sports savvy that few men have. He was born with semisupernatural coordination, quick strength, eagle eyes and all the other things spiritual and physical that go to make a first class athlete. As it turned out, he chose tennis. He was unlucky enough to come along at a time when the greatest crop of players in the history of the game were playmen like Tilden, Bill Johnston, Dick Williams, Manuel Alonso, Rene Lacoste, Jean Borotra, and Henri Cochet. He never won the national singles championship, but he beat them all at one time or another, with little except his incredible volleying. He won more titles than he can remember, all over the world, including Wimbledon and the first and last Olympic Tennis championship at Paris in 1924. He won four straight 5-set matches to cop that one.

Richards had Ty Cobb's lust for battle. He went out there to win, His style wasn't orthodox, any more than Cobb's was, and like Cobb he had no patience with the niceties.

Once when he was playing Tilden—whom he beat more often than anyone beat Tilden as an amateur—Vinnie made a spectacular dive through the air and volleyed back one of Tilden's masterful 'cross-court shots. But he lost his balance and plunged face first into the dirt. Tilden loped over to get Richards' return and hit a high lob, as was his wont, to give Richards time to pick himself up and get in position. Fiercely resentful of Tilden's gesture, Richards got up off the ground and belted the lob for a placement.

The Novices Loved Him

When he was an amateur, battling against the most finished craftsmen of their day, Richards was always the darling of the dubs. That is to say, audiences usually pulled for him because they saw in his game a reflection of their own—lack of the standard strokes and the verve which all vicarious experts ascribe to themselves. "He had me 5—1 and 40—15 in the fifth set of a match in Philadelphia 20 years ago," Tilden remembered. "I got lucky and won the thing. That night I went to hear a John McCormack concert. John was a tennis nut, you know. He had been at the match. Well, anyway, the audience at the concert was yelling for an encore, but John wouldn't come back. He looked genuinely upset, backstage, so much so that his manager was worried. But nobody knew what was bothering him until he suddenly turned on me resentfully and said, 'You know, Bill, I guess you're the better player but Richards should have beaten the hell out of you today'."

Pirates' Rally In Ninth Beats Phils, 3 to 2

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 28.—For eight innings today, Ike Pearson, Phillies righthander, had a shutout victory, but the Pittsburgh Pirates exploded in the ninth to score three runs with two out for a 3 to 2 victory.

Elbie Fletcher poked out a single to open the ninth but when Pearson fanned Vince Di Maggio and retired Stu Martin on an infield grounder, a ladies' day crowd of more than 5000 breathed easier. Their belief was short-lived, however. Debs Garms batted for Al Lopez and singled to score Fletcher. Maurice Van Robays, pinch-hitting for Pitcher Lloyd Dietz, doubled, Garms pulling up at third, and Jeep Handley doubled for his fourth hit of the day to score both runners.

Tommy Hughes relieved Pearson and promptly walked Arky Vaughan and Bob Elliott, but Frank Hoerst came in to retire the side without further scoring.

Mildred Burke Keeps Title At Turner's

Blondes and redheads just don't get along together. This old axiom was proved for the umpteenth time at Turner's Arena last night when golden-tressed Mildred Burke retained her ladies' rassle crown by soundly thumping Mae Young, the Oklahoma cowgirl.

Almost 2,000 fans howled with glee when Mildred, a trim 130-pounder, spotted the robust Moe 50 pounds and then put her down for the count with a back drop after 14½ minutes of blood-curdling action.

The chief offensive threat of both ladies were the molars, and Miss Young led in this department, scoring once with a good solid bite to the Burke calf, and later with a fair-grade nip of the wrist. The "champ" had to content herself with a solitary wee nibble of the wrist.

Referee Casey Berger was worked overtime in seeing that the mythical rules of wrestling were upheld, and several times he looked as frantic as a motorist needing gas at 6:55 p. m. as the ladies darted over, under and around his bulk to continue the war.

The end came with startling suddenness. Miss Burke had a gruelling body scissors on her opponent and was turning on the pressure after some 13 minutes of battle. Miss Young escaped this with the finesse of an eel and countered with a body slam and an airplane spin. With her world's title on the line, Mildred concentrated hard and when she came out of the spin she managed to flop across Mae, pinning her for the count.

In the semi final Ernie Dusek laid the Green Hornet low with a pair of crotch holds and body slams after 34 minutes. Dusek, amazed at being the hero after all these years, beamed with scant comprehension as he retired from the ring. Mr. Hornet was mad through and through about the whole thing, and averred that he had been cheated. It seems that Ernie did all his crying after he had pulled the Hornet's mask out of kilter and blinded him.

Maurice LaChappelle teamed with Frank Judson to trounce Angelo Leone and Freddy Grobmier in the two-man team affair. LaChappelle had to pick up a substitute as Ace Freeman, his regular partner recently made the mistake of putting his arm in a wrestler's mouth. It got bitten and is now infected.

Yanks Rally To Defeat Browns, 8 to 5

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 28.—The New York Yankees gave good proof today that they have been holding something in reserve while coasting along at the head of the American League.

After the St. Louis Browns had tied the score in the ninth inning the bombers exploded three runs in the tenth and won 8 to 5.

The Yanks pumped two runs across in the first inning with three hits, one a double by Joe Gordon. Then in the third Tom Henrich hit his twenty-sixth home run with one on and singles by Gordon and Frenchy Bordagaray added another.

This appeared to be all the Yankees needed, and they took things easy while Atley Donald set out to pitch himself a good game.

George McQuinn doubled a run across in the first and St. Louis collected another in the sixth on a single, a walk and a couple of outs. No one was disturbed, but when the Browns put together three singles and a walk for two runs in the eighth, Norman Branch was sent to the mound to hold onto the victory.

Then McQuinn came through with another double after Harlond Clift walked in the ninth to bring in the tying run.

This awakened the Yanks to action in the tenth, when Fritz Ostermueller took the mound for the Browns. Bordagaray walked, Phil Rizzuto sacrificed and both runners were safe as Ostermueller fumbled the ball. Branch fouled out, but Pinch-hitter Gerry Priddy singled, to load the bases. When Red Rolfe also fouled out, Bordagaray raced home after the catch and Rizzuto went to third. Priddy stole second and both runners scored on a single by Henrich.

Tigers Win on Homer By 'Crippled' York

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 28.—Rudy York, whose recent batting slump was attributed to a broken wrist about which he kept silent, slammed a home run into the leftfield stands with the bases filled in the seventh inning today to give the Detroit Tigers an 8-to-7 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

The four-bagger, York's twenty-first of the season, came off Relief Pitcher Mike Ryan and enabled the Tigers to overcome a three-run margin in the box, aided by homers of Ted Williams and Manager Joe Cronin, had built up over the first six innings off Starter Al Benton.

Ryba had relieved Joe Dobson with none out and two aboard as a result of a double by Charley Gehringer, his second of the game, and successive singles by Rip Radcliff and Barney McCosky, which scored a run. He whiffed Bruce Campbell, then filled the sacks with a walk to Pinky Higgins, to bring up York.

Siebert's Hit Beats Indians For A's, 5-3

By International News Service

Cleveland, Aug. 28.—Pitcher Al Milnar weakened in the seventh inning, issued three straight passes and saw Dick Siebert single home a trio of runs today that gave the Philadelphia Athletics a 5-to-3 triumph over Cleveland's Indians.

The A's collected their other runs in the first heat when Sam Chapman singled with the bases loaded.

John Babich, Philadelphia's starter, was replaced by Bill Beckman in the opening inning when the Tribe shoved over all of its tallies on four hits that included Boudreau's triple.

Milnar was removed from action in the seventh and Bill Brown held the A's hitless the rest of the route.

Three Big Name Pros Shoot Sub-Par 70s; Dick Chapman Heads Amateurs With 75

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

Hershey, Pa., Aug. 28.—The little man with the big winning streak, Beltin' Benny Hogan, and Clayton Heafner, the blond bomber from North Carolina, shared the first round lead at 69 with two lesser lights in the $5,000 Hershey Open championship here today.

Both out in one over par 37s, Hogan, the host pro and Heafner, among the leading money winners of the year, each roared home in 32 strokes, five under par to share pace-setting laurels with George Fazio, Philadelphia, and Harry T. Nettleblad, of Framingham, Mass.

Three "Names" Shoot 70s

The three-under-par 70 bracket also was marked by a four-way tie between a quartet of big name professionals: Denny Shute, the two-time P. G. A. champ, and Horton Smith, the perfection putter, each with a pair of 35s; Lloyd Mangrum, the California stylist, and Terl Johnson, of Norristown, Pa., who was out in 32 and back in 38 for his 70.

The two-under-par 71 bracket contained Felix Serafin, defending champion; Thomas Harman, Monclair, N. J., and W. A. Stackhouse, of Sequin, Tex.

Dick Chapman, who until Saturday will still be the National Amateur champion, flew here from Omaha with Washington's Leo Walper and was easily the best of the amateur delegation with a 75. Chapman had putter trouble out, but was four under par at one time on the back nine. Johnny Bulla was also among the 75 shooters, while slow poke Ralph Guldahl, Worsham's playing partner; Johnny Bass, Baltimore, and Chandler Harper were among those at 74.

Heafner's erratic coleading effort included nine 3s over the Hershey Country Club course, one of the longest layouts in the country. He finished the first nine with three in a row, and then with a performance which stood out like a sore thumb on the score board, he finished the back nine with five threes in a row.

Worsham Sinks 15-Footers

Worsham was the star of the eight-man Washington delegation by four shots. Al Houghton with 15 pars and three bogeys was a 76 shooter with Cliff Spencer and Walper at 77. Spencer was one under par for seven holes with a ball out of bounds, but he three-putted the eighth green and was off on a parade of bogeys. Walper, Chapman's tutor, played with an extra set of the amateur champion's clubs and pulled himself to a 77.

Bob Garnett, Chevy Chase, and Al Treder, Manor, both hit the ball well, but had trouble on the carpets and finished with 79s, while Young Freddie Bolton, playing in his first big tournament, was two over par five times and had 81. Burning Tree Amateur John Brooks was 82.

Worsham, winner of the Baltimore Open and three one-day tournaments in the last two months, dropped two 15-foot putts for birdies and knocked iron shots dead to the pin for his other two. The putt he was most proud of, however, was a 15-footer for a big six on the par 5 tenth after he visited a trap, woods and hedge en route to the green.

Wise Moss Victor In Oaks Preview Over Dark Imp

By the Associated Press

Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 28.—Mrs. E McCuan's Wise Moss, a candidate for Saturday's $10,000 New England Oaks, qualified handsomely for that stake today, winning Narragansett Park's featured Cranston Purse of 6 furlongs by four lengths over the Wheatley Stable's Dark Imp

The latter is also a candidate for the Oaks and running third to these two 3-year-old fillies was J. R. Neville's One Witch.

Wise Moss finished the three-quarters of a mile in 1:11 2/5 and went on to complete a mile and eighth, the distance of the Oaks, in 1:53 3/5.

The Meadowbrook Farm's Mack's Dream had a slight advantage as the field of six streaked out of the chute, but three others quickly joined her with only Manamaid and Jeanne d'Arc really out of it as they went down the backstretch.

The four went side by side until approaching the half-mile pole when Dark Imp forged ahead slightly. Going through the far turn Jockey W. L. Taylor sent Wise Moss up and so easily overtook Dark Imp.

Bowling League Adds 2 Teams For Total of 18

Meeting for the last time before the opening of the season on September 10, the Men's District Bowling League voted in two additional teams and the loop now has contenders for the rich prize fund, the largest in its long history. This is an increase of 6 teams over the 12 of last season.

At the moment league officials are hard at work on the schedule so that team captains may have a line-up within the next 10 days as to where opening matches are to be held. The Ladies' District League has increased to 14 teams from 10 of last year and the scheduling of the 2 loops presents a problem so that matches may be spread throughout the area rather than doubling at several alleys.

Heurich Wins Over St. Elizabeth's, 3-0

Murnane Limits Saints to 4 Hits; Victors Near City Title; Play Airmen Today

Four-hit pitching by Johnny Murmane sparked the Heurich Brewers' victory over St. Elizabeth's, 3—0, in an Amateur Federation city series game yesterday on the East Ellipse. The loss eliminated the Saints from the tourney.

The championship of the series may be decided today when Heurich meets the Naval Air Station nine on the same diamond at 4:30 o'clock. If the Brewers win, the title will be theirs, but a triumph by the Airmen will necessitate another game.

Murmane struck out 14 men. The four hits he allowed were singles.

Mt. St. Mary's Grid Practice Starts Monday

By the Associated Press

Emmitsburg, Md., Aug. 28.—Coach James (Bull) Draper announced today that Mount St. Mary's College varsity and freshman football candidates would report Monday for preseason practice, but he declined to discuss the season's prospects.

One reason Draper was reluctant to talk about the outlook for his third year as head coach at the Mount was that he has not yet determined what effect the draft and defense work will have on his squad.

"We will be hit," he said, "but how badly is a matter of luck."

Draper said he had heard that Joe Asip, all-Maryland quarterback, was in the Army; that Joe Boyle, back, and Tony Celeste, center, also were in the service, and that Bill Toner, giant tackle, has about decided to stay in defense work.

"None of this is going to help any, but you have to remember that the other teams are up against the same thing," he said.

"I expect a couple of last year's freshmen be good enough to take over some of the positions. They looked good in spring practice and while I like to go slowly with them for their sophomore year, we'll have to push them a bit."

Draper said "we'll have to do the best we can and if the worst comes we can suspend the freshman rule until the emergency is over."

The schedule:

October 11, Western Maryland, here; 19, La Salle College, at Philadelphia; 25, Elon College, at Elon College, N. C.

November 1, Delaware, at Newark, Del.; 8, Upsala College, here; 15, Washington College, at Chestertown.

Mrs. Davy Bows, 4 and 2, In Golf Play

By the Associated Press

Providence, R. I., Aug. 28.—Mrs. Myron Davy, of Chevy Chase, Md., was eliminated by Glenna Collett Vare, 4 and 2, in a semifinal round match of the Point Judith Country Club invitation that packed a stronger competitive punch than the score would indicate.

Mrs. Davy appeared victory bound when leading, 1 up, at the eighth, but her short game, which featured a burst of par golf she fired from the fifth through the eighth, failed her thereafter and she gradually lost ground on the back line.

The match was still square at the eleventh and what probably was the turning point occurred at the twelfth, which Mrs. Vare won with a conceded birdie three.

Mrs. Vare planted a No. 4 wood from the rough to within 10 feet of the pin, and when Mrs. Davy was unable to recover from the woods to where she had pushed her drive she conceded the hole.

Mrs. Vare, who the day before upset National Champion Betty Jameson, then took three of the next four holes to run out the match at the sixteenth. Mrs. Davy tossed away her final chance by banging her tee shot into the water on this 150-yard hole.

Three short putts missed, were costly to Mrs. Davy and helped turn the tide against her. She missed 2-footers for wins at the tenth and eleventh and a 1-footer for a halve at the fourteenth.

Mrs. Davy, who is headed for Brookline to prepare for the national championship, played fine golf to gain the semifinal. Mrs. Vare meets Mrs. Frederick Davis, of Rhode Island C. C., in the final tomorrow. Mrs. Davis defeated Jane Cothran, of Columbia, S. C., 2 up in the other semifinal.

Antonio, Mross Meet in Finals Of Southpaw Golf

Kovac, winner of 11 consecutive tournaments including the Pennsylvania Amateur championship, moved in against Ward by eliminating Harry Haverstick, jr., Lancaster, Pa., 1 up. He made it tough for Ward for nine holes, turning into the second nine only 1 down.

McCormick entered the quarter-finals by defeating Skee Riegel, Glendale, Calif., 3 and 2 and Billows moved in by eliminating another former professionel, Neil White, of Port Chester, N. Y.

Boxing Commission Suspends Eddie Blunt for Four Months

By Tony Neri

Poland knocked out Blunt in the fourth round of the scheduled 25-round match. He will be suspended until January 1, 1942.

The National Boxing Association has been notified of the action and Blunt will not be allowed to fight in any States affiliated with the N. B. A.

Abe Kettler, manager of Blunt, stated last night that he was going to appeal to the commission today for a hearing. Kettler asserted, "Blunt was hurt at the beginning of the third round after taking a Poland punch under the heart. After that my boy was through. Poland is a heluva belter . . . I tried to talk to Blunt between rounds but he didn't seem to be right . . . he was hurt bad. After the fight Blunt was down in the mouth. He wouldn't talk . . . just wanted to be alone."

Kettler said Blunt's share of the gate was $1040 net. The manager was surprised at the small payoff.

Comiskey Suspended

Pat Comiskey, who was supposed to meet Claudio Villar, was also suspended for 30 days for failure to put in an appearance for his engagement here.

The commission met yesterday morning in the insurance office of a member, Thomas P. Morgan, jr. Present at the meeting were Morgan, Claude W. Owen, chairman; John J. Agnew, junior member of the ring body; Dick O'Brien, secretary, and Charlie Reynolds, who refereed the Blunt-Poland match.

The commission also announced that (a) no main event fighter will be paid off until noon of the day following a bout; (b) all contracts of preliminary fighters must be filed with the commission before they will be allowed to appear here.

Promoter Joe Turner stated yesterday that he took an $800 beating on the show. Co-promoter Kearns dropped about $600.

Turner added, "the only thing that looked fishy to me was Blunt going down without being hit."

Poland Disconsolate

Bill Poland was feeling disconsolate about the whole business. The Jewish heavyweight said, "I'm sorry the fight finished the way it did. It made me look bad. The guy just wasn't willing."

Poland is scheduled to make his next appearance in a return match against Harry Bobo in Pittsburgh, September 15. Bobo was knocked out in the eighth round of the first meeting.

Pirates' Rally In Ninth Beats Phils, 3 to 2

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 28.—For eight innings today, Ike Pearson, Phillies righthander, had a shutout victory, but the Pittsburgh Pirates exploded in the ninth to score three runs with two out for a 3 to 2 victory.

Elbie Fletcher poked out a single to open the ninth but when Pearson fanned Vince Di Maggio and retired Stu Martin on an infield grounder, a ladies' day crowd of more than 5000 breathed easier. Their belief was short-lived, however. Debs Garms batted for Al Lopez and singled to score Fletcher. Maurice Van Robays, pinch-hitting for Pitcher Lloyd Dietz, doubled, Garms pulling up at third, and Jeep Handley doubled for his fourth hit of the day to score both runners.

Yanks Rally To Defeat Browns, 8 to 5

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 28.—The New York Yankees gave good proof today that they have been holding something in reserve while coasting along at the head of the American League.

After the St. Louis Browns had tied the score in the ninth inning the bombers exploded three runs in the tenth and won 8 to 5.

The Yanks pumped two runs across in the first inning with three hits, one a double by Joe Gordon. Then in the third Tom Henrich hit his twenty-sixth home run with one on and singles by Gordon and Frenchy Bordagaray added another.

This appeared to be all the Yankees needed, and they took things easy while Atley Donald set out to pitch himself a good game.

George McQuinn doubled a run across in the first and St. Louis collected another in the sixth on a single, a walk and a couple of outs. No one was disturbed, but when the Browns put together three singles and a walk for two runs in the eighth, Norman Branch was sent to the mound to hold onto the victory.

Then McQuinn came through with another double after Harlond Clift walked in the ninth to bring in the tying run.

This awakened the Yanks to action in the tenth, when Fritz Ostermueller took the mound for the Browns. Bordagaray walked, Phil Rizzuto sacrificed and both runners were safe as Ostermueller fumbled the ball. Branch fouled out, but Pinch-hitter Gerry Priddy singled, to load the bases. When Red Rolfe also fouled out, Bordagaray raced home after the catch and Rizzuto went to third. Priddy stole second and both runners scored on a single by Henrich.

Tigers Win on Homer By 'Crippled' York

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 28.—Rudy York, whose recent batting slump was attributed to a broken wrist about which he kept silent, slammed a home run into the leftfield stands with the bases filled in the seventh inning today to give the Detroit Tigers an 8-to-7 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

The four-bagger, York's twenty-first of the season, came off Relief Pitcher Mike Ryan and enabled the Tigers to overcome a three-run margin in the box, aided by homers of Ted Williams and Manager Joe Cronin, had built up over the first six innings off Starter Al Benton.

Ryba had relieved Joe Dobson with none out and two aboard as a result of a double by Charley Gehringer, his second of the game, and successive singles by Rip Radcliff and Barney McCosky, which scored a run. He whiffed Bruce Campbell, then filled the sacks with a walk to Pinky Higgins, to bring up York.

Siebert's Hit Beats Indians For A's, 5-3

By International News Service

Cleveland, Aug. 28.—Pitcher Al Milnar weakened in the seventh inning, issued three straight passes and saw Dick Siebert single home a trio of runs today that gave the Philadelphia Athletics a 5-to-3 triumph over Cleveland's Indians.

The A's collected their other runs in the first heat when Sam Chapman singled with the bases loaded.

John Babich, Philadelphia's starter, was replaced by Bill Beckman in the opening inning when the Tribe shoved over all of its tallies on four hits that included Boudreau's triple.

Milnar was removed from action in the seventh and Bill Brown held the A's hitless the rest of the route.

Earley Allows 2 Hits; Cubs Bow to Braves

By the Associated Press

Boston, Aug. 28—Tom Early's two-hit pitching gave him a slight edge in a stirring hurling duel with Vallie Eaves of the Chicago Cubs today, enabling the Boston Braves to cop a 2—1 verdict and the rubber tilt of their three-game series.

Bill Nicholson singled sharply to right in the fourth and that was the only blow off the Boston boy until the ninth when, with two away, Phil Cavarretta slammed a 2—2 pitch over the right field fence to save the Cubs from a whitewashing.

Eaves, who was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the eighth was almost as effective. The Braves scored one in the first as the big Indian loaded the bases and then forced in a tally by walking Gene Moore. In the fourth the Braves collected their second when Max West lifted his tenth homer into the right field bleachers.

Vincent Richards Bows Out

New York, Aug. 28.—The active sports career of one of the finest competitors and best guys in the muscle business, Vincent Richards, will formally close here next Monday. Richards finally has yielded to the pressure of business and the increased barking of his valiant dogs. He's giving up the competitive side of the game after a quarter of a century of playing, though he is still on the sunnier side of 40.

CONSIDINE

Richards won the doubles championship of the United States with Bill Tilden, when he was only 15. That was during or just after the World War. Next Monday, fittingly enough, the perennial Tilden will be his opponent in a three-out-of-three professional singles match, and they will team up against Karel Kozeluh and Fred Perry, who Tilden says is the greatest player in the world today.

Age Hasn't Bothered His Game

"I've seen them all, Tilden told us, "and I say that Richards was the greatest instinctive volleyer who ever lived, and just about the greatest strategist the game ever saw. And the remarkable thing about Vinny is that his game is still excellent today," enthused the man whose own unending skill is one of the wonders of the sports world. "After his auto accident in Florida a few years ago they practically had to rake him out of the wreckage, yet he came back to play fine tennis, and confounded some of the greatest doctors in the country, including Dr. Henry Reimann, who worked with that great Viennese, Dr. Lorenz."

For the writer's dough, Richards would have been an outstanding ball player, football backfield man or end, boxer, or anything else he tried. He had (and retires with) a sports savvy that few men have. He was born with semisupernatural coordination, quick strength, eagle eyes and all the other things spiritual and physical that go to make a first class athlete. As it turned out, he chose tennis. He was unlucky enough to come along at a time when the greatest crop of players in the history of the game were playmen like Tilden, Bill Johnston, Dick Williams, Manuel Alonso, Rene Lacoste, Jean Borotra, and Henri Cochet. He never won the national singles championship, but he beat them all at one time or another, with little except his incredible volleying. He won more titles than he can remember, all over the world, including Wimbledon and the first and last Olympic Tennis championship at Paris in 1924. He won four straight 5-set matches to cop that one.

Richards had Ty Cobb's lust for battle. He went out there to win, His style wasn't orthodox, any more than Cobb's was, and like Cobb he had no patience with the niceties.

Once when he was playing Tilden—whom he beat more often than anyone beat Tilden as an amateur—Vinnie made a spectacular dive through the air and volleyed back one of Tilden's masterful 'cross-court shots. But he lost his balance and plunged face first into the dirt. Tilden loped over to get Richards' return and hit a high lob, as was his wont, to give Richards time to pick himself up and get in position. Fiercely resentful of Tilden's gesture, Richards got up off the ground and belted the lob for a placement.

The Novices Loved Him

When he was an amateur, battling against the most finished craftsmen of their day, Richards was always the darling of the dubs. That is to say, audiences usually pulled for him because they saw in his game a reflection of their own—lack of the standard strokes and the verve which all vicarious experts ascribe to themselves. "He had me 5—1 and 40—15 in the fifth set of a match in Philadelphia 20 years ago," Tilden remembered. "I got lucky and won the thing. That night I went to hear a John McCormack concert. John was a tennis nut, you know. He had been at the match. Well, anyway, the audience at the concert was yelling for an encore, but John wouldn't come back. He looked genuinely upset, backstage, so much so that his manager was worried. But nobody knew what was bothering him until he suddenly turned on me resentfully and said, 'You know, Bill, I guess you're the better player but Richards should have beaten the hell out of you today'."

Mildred Burke Keeps Title At Turner's

Blondes and redheads just don't get along together. This old axiom was proved for the umpteenth time at Turner's Arena last night when golden-tressed Mildred Burke retained her ladies' rassle crown by soundly thumping Mae Young, the Oklahoma cowgirl.

Almost 2,000 fans howled with glee when Mildred, a trim 130-pounder, spotted the robust Moe 50 pounds and then put her down for the count with a back drop after 14½ minutes of blood-curdling action.

The chief offensive threat of both ladies were the molars, and Miss Young led in this department, scoring once with a good solid bite to the Burke calf, and later with a fair-grade nip of the wrist. The "champ" had to content herself with a solitary wee nibble of the wrist.

Referee Casey Berger was worked overtime in seeing that the mythical rules of wrestling were upheld, and several times he looked as frantic as a motorist needing gas at 6:55 p. m. as the ladies darted over, under and around his bulk to continue the war.

The end came with startling suddenness. Miss Burke had a gruelling body scissors on her opponent and was turning on the pressure after some 13 minutes of battle. Miss Young escaped this with the finesse of an eel and countered with a body slam and an airplane spin. With her world's title on the line, Mildred concentrated hard and when she came out of the spin she managed to flop across Mae, pinning her for the count.

In the semi final Ernie Dusek laid the Green Hornet low with a pair of crotch holds and body slams after 34 minutes. Dusek, amazed at being the hero after all these years, beamed with scant comprehension as he retired from the ring. Mr. Hornet was mad through and through about the whole thing, and averred that he had been cheated. It seems that Ernie did all his crying after he had pulled the Hornet's mask out of kilter and blinded him.

Maurice LaChappelle teamed with Frank Judson to trounce Angelo Leone and Freddy Grobmier in the two-man team affair. LaChappelle had to pick up a substitute as Ace Freeman, his regular partner recently made the mistake of putting his arm in a wrestler's mouth. It got bitten and is now infected.

7 Top 3-Year-Olds Entered In Warrenton Horse Show

Seven of the Old Dominion's best 3-year-olds are already entered for the juvenile championship of the Warrenton Horse Show, beginning tomorrow at the Warrenton (Va.) show grounds, and any other colts that win blue ribbons during the progress of the opening session will be added to the eligible list.

Already qualified are Springsbury Farm's trio, Looter, Traumertan and Port o' War; Betty Couzens' Spanish Oak, J. North Fletcher's Pappy, Mr. and Mrs. C. Lynch Christian, jr's Scotch Yarn, Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggin Perry's Magic Luck and Ruth O'Keefe's O'Doc, who might not be able to show because of a slight injury he received last week.

Otherwise the show will be principally a "battle of champions," as every tricolor winner on the Virginia circuit this year will compete in the conformation or working hunter divisions.

Heading the list is Mr. and Mrs. Perry's most brilliant star, Cornish Hills, who has won enough titles this season to furnish an entire tack room. His No. 1 adversary in Old Dominion shows, Mrs. M. E. Whitney's The Bear, will continue the pursuit, along with Mr. and Mrs. George Watts Hill's Inky and Balkonian, the Greenhalghs' Big Boy and Billy Do, Mrs. D. N. Lee's Glamour Man, and other top conformation mounts.

In the open jumping division, Virginia railhangers will tell you that the final session of the show on Labor Day may mark the shattering of local high-jumping records.

Ten mounts, most of them veterans at jumping 6 feet or higher, will turn out en masse for the featured skyscraper event, including Lieut. Fred J. Hughes, jr.'s Black Caddy, who went 6 feet 6½ inches at the recent Columbus show; Margaret Cotter's Rocksie, victor at just one-half an inch less at the Rappahannock (Va.) show; Peggy Sampson's Hi Ho Silver, Black Boy and Hellzapoppin; Capt. David Wagstaff's Enterprise, and other high-minded leapers.

Tomorrow's program, beginning at 9 a. m. daylight saving time, includes classes for ponies under saddle and over fences, foals, yearlings, 2-year-olds, junior hunters, 3-year-olds, novice hunters, working hunters, hunter hacks, halfbred hunters, junior jumpers, junior hunter hacks, maiden hunters, 5-year-olds and under, $200 jumper stake, working hunters with amateurs up, modified Olympic, and junior championship.

Three Big Name Pros Shoot Sub-Par 70s; Dick Chapman Heads Amateurs With 75

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

Hershey, Pa., Aug. 28.—The little man with the big winning streak, Beltin' Benny Hogan, and Clayton Heafner, the blond bomber from North Carolina, shared the first round lead at 69 with two lesser lights in the $5,000 Hershey Open championship here today.

Both out in one over par 37s, Hogan, the host pro and Heafner, among the leading money winners of the year, each roared home in 32 strokes, five under par to share pace-setting laurels with George Fazio, Philadelphia, and Harry T. Nettlebladt, of Framingham, Mass.

Three "Names" Shoot 70s

The three-under-par 70 bracket also was marked by a four-way tie between a quartet of big name professionals: Denny Shute, the two-time P. G. A. champ, and Horton Smith, the perfection putter, each with a pair of 35s; Lloyd Mangrum, the California stylist, and Terl Johnson, of Norristown, Pa., who was out in 32 and back in 38 for his 70.

The two-under-par 71 bracket contained Felix Serafin, defending champion; Thomas Harman, Moniclair, N. J., and W. A. Stackhouse, of Sequin, Tex.

Worsham and his co-72 shooters followed, a shot ahead of the regulation 73 scorers, which included Joe Kirkwood, jr., who was half of the winning team in the Grosner pro-amateur at Manor last year; Gene Kunes and Mike Turnesa.

Dick Chapman, who until Saturday will still be the National Amateur champion, flew here from Omaha with Washington's Leo Walper and was easily the best of the amateur delegation with a 75. Chapman had putter trouble out, but was four under par at one time on the back nine. Johnny Bulla was also among the 75 shooters, while slow poke Ralph Guldahl, Worsham's playing partner; Johnny Bass, Baltimore, and Chandler Harper were among those at 74.

Heafner's erratic coleading effort included nine 3s over the Hershey Country Club course, one of the longest layouts in the country. He finished the first nine with three in a row, and then with a performance which stood out like a sore thumb on the score board, he finished the back nine with five threes in a row.

Worsham Sinks 15-Footers

Worsham was the star of the eight-man Washington delegation by four shots. Al Houghton with 15 pars and three bogeys was a 76 shooter with Cliff Spencer and Walper at 77. Spencer was one under par for seven holes with a ball out of bounds, but he three-putted the eighth green and was off on a parade of bogeys. Walper, Chapman's tutor, played with an extra set of the amateur champion's clubs and pulled himself to a 77.

Bob Garnett, Chevy Chase, and Al Treder, Manor, both hit the ball well, but had trouble on the carpets and finished with 79s, while Young Freddie Bolton, playing in his first big tournament, was two over par five times and had 81. Burning Tree Amateur John Brooks was 88.

Worsham, winner of the Baltimore Open and three one-day tournaments in the last two months, dropped two 15-foot putts for birdies and knocked iron shots dead to the pin for his other two. The putt he was most proud of, however, was a 15-footer for a big six on the par 5 tenth after he visited a trap, woods and hedge en route to the green.

Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 28.—Mrs. E McCuan's Wise Moss, a candidate for Saturday's $10,000 New England Oaks, qualified handsomely for that stake today, winning Narragansett Park's featured Cranston Purse of 6 furlongs by four lengths over the Wheatley Stable's Dark Imp

The latter is also a candidate for the Oaks and running third to these two 3-year-old fillies was J. R. Neville's One Witch.

Wise Moss finished the three-quarters of a mile in 1:11 2/5 and went on to complete a mile and eighth, the distance of the Oaks, in 1:53 3/5.

The Meadowbrook Farm's Mack's Dream had a slight advantage as the field of six streaked out of the chute, but three others quickly joined her with only Manamaid and Jeanne d'Arc really out of it as they went down the backstretch.

The four went side by side until approaching the half-mile pole when Dark Imp forged ahead slightly. Going through the far turn Jockey W. L. Taylor sent Wise Moss up and se easily overtook Dark Imp.

Bowling League Adds 2 Teams For Total of 18

Meeting for the last time before the opening of the season on September 10, the Men's District Bowling League voted in two additional teams and the loop now has contenders for the rich prize fund, the largest in its long history. This is an increase of 6 teams over the 12 of last season.

At the moment league officials are hard at work on the schedule so that team captains may have a line-up within the next 10 days as to where opening matches are to be held. The Ladies' District League has increased to 14 teams from 10 of last year and the scheduling of the 2 loops presents a problem so that matches may be spread throughout the area rather than doubling at several alleys.

New teams added this year are: Hi-Skor, Del Ray, Arlington, Spillway, Bethesda Bowling Alleys and Bethesda Bowling Center. The old teams include: Lucky Strike, Ice Palace, Clarendon, King Pin, Lafayette, Georgetown, Hyattsville, Brookland, Penn, Arcadia, Convention Hall and Rosslyn.

Murnane Limits Saints to 4 Hits; Victors Near City Title; Play Airmen Today

Four-hit pitching by Johnny Murmane sparked the Heurich Brewers' victory over St. Elizabeth's, 3—0, in an Amateur Federation city series game yesterday on the East Ellipse. The loss eliminated the Saints from the tourney.

The championship of the series may be decided today when Heurich meets the Naval Air Station nine on the same diamond at 4:30 o'clock. If the Brewers win, the title will be theirs, but a triumph by the Airmen will necessitate another game.

Heurich opened well in the first inning as Kidwell doubled to center and Posnak drove him in with a single to right field. Then Stahl forced Posnak and Knight was safe on a grounder to first. Miller singled to right to send in the second run.

In the fourth inning, two errors by Gagnon, Saints' second baseman, and Shortstop Surgrue, combined to allow Posnak to drive in a run with a fly to right field.

Murmane struck out 14 men. The four hits he allowed were singles.

Mt. St. Mary's Grid Practice Starts Monday

By the Associated Press

Emmitsburg, Md., Aug. 28.—Coach James (Bull) Draper announced today that Mount St. Mary's College varsity and freshman football candidates would report Monday for preseason practice, but he declined to discuss the season's prospects.

One reason Draper was reluctant to talk about the outlook for his third year as head coach at the Mount was that he has not yet determined what effect the draft and defense work will have on his squad.

"We will be hit," he said, "but how badly is a matter of luck."

Draper said he had heard that Joe Asip, all-Maryland quarterback, was in the Army; that Joe Boyle, back, and Tony Celeste, center, also were in the service, and that Bill Toner, giant tackle, has about decided to stay in defense work.

"None of this is going to help any, but you have to remember that the other teams are up against the same thing," he said.

"I expect a couple of last year's freshmen be good enough to take over some of the positions. They looked good in spring practice and while I like to go slowly with them for their sophomore year, we'll have to push them a bit."

Draper said "we'll have to do the best we can and if the worst comes we can suspend the freshman rule until the emergency is over."

In addition to those lost through the draft and defense work, five members of the varsity squad were graduated.

The schedule:

October 11, Western Maryland, here; 18, La Salle College, at Philadelphia; 25, Elon College, at Elon College, N. C.

November 1, Delaware, at Newark, Del.; 8, Upsala College, here; 15, Washington College, at Chestertown.

Mrs. Davy Bows, 4 and 2, In Golf Play

By the Associated Press

Providence, R. I., Aug. 28.—Mrs. Myron Davy, of Chevy Chase, Md., was eliminated by Glenna Collett Vare, 4 and 2, in a semifinal round match of the Point Judith Country Club invitation that packed a stronger competitive punch than the score would indicate.

Mrs. Davy appeared victory bound when leading 1 up, at the eighth, but her short game, which featured a burst of par golf she fired from the fifth through the eighth, failed her thereafter and she gradually lost ground on the back line.

The match was still square at the eleventh and what probably was the turning point occurred at the twelfth, which Mrs. Vare won with a conceded birdie three.

Mrs. Vare planted a No. 4 wood from the rough to within 10 feet of the pin, and when Mrs. Davy was unable to recover from the woods to where she had pushed her drive she conceded the hole.

Mrs. Vare, who the day before upset National Champion Betty Jameson, then took three of the next four holes to run out the match at the sixteenth. Mrs. Davy tossed away her final chance by banging her tee shot into the water on this 150-yard hole.

Three short putts missed, were costly to Mrs. Davy and helped turn the tide against her. She missed 2-footers for wins at the tenth and eleventh and a 1-footer for a halve at the fourteenth.

Mrs. Davy, who is headed for Brookline to prepare for the national championship, played fine golf to gain the semifinal. Mrs. Vare meets Mrs. Frederick Davis, of Rhode Island C. C., in the final tomorrow. Mrs. Davis defeated Jane Cothran, of Columbia, S. C., 2 up in the other semifinal.

Antonio, Mross Meet in Finals Of Southpaw Golf

Mross provided the major upset of the tournament with a 1-up victory over Alvin Everett, defending champion and medalist from Rome, Ga. Mross is Wisconsin State public links champion.

Mross and Antonio meet tomorrow in the 36-hole finals.

Kovac, winner of 11 consecutive tournaments including the Pennsylvania Amateur championship, moved in against Ward by eliminating Harry Haverstick, jr., Lancaster, Pa., 1 up. He made it tough for Ward for nine holes, turning into the second nine only 1 down.

McCormick entered the quarter-finals by defeating Skee Riegel, Glendale, Calif., 3 and 2 and Billows moved in by eliminating another former professionel, Neil White, of Port Chester, N. Y.

Glitter Girl Scores in Marlboro Feature by Nose Margin

Marandan Is Second; Gayle F. 3d

Place Horse Bears Out; Victor Pays $5.80; Miss Hildur Wins First Race

By Clocker Mike

Marlboro, Md., Aug. 28.—J. B. Royston's Glitter Girl, after being unable to reach the winner's circle in her last six starts, ran one of the best races of the meeting to win the National Horsemen's Guild Purse, fifth and feature event on today's card. The 3-year-old daughter of Lucillite, got up in the final stride to score by a nose over Marandan before a crowd of 5000. Gayle F, after holding as much as a three-length lead at one stage of the race, lasted to save the show award.

Racing down the backstretch, the leader had stretched his margin to three lengths. Marandan moved up with a rush and collared him on the stretch turn. Glitter Girl, in the meantime, had to be taken up sharply and Root was seen taking her to the outside.

Entering the stretch, Marandan went back to her old habits of bearing out. Glitter Girl had moved up with her and was naturally forced to go wider through the stretch. In the final sixteenth they raced head and head.

Glitter Girl, claimed out of the race by Mrs. M. McNey, completed the 5½-furlong course in 1:08 3-5 and returned a $5.80 mutuel.

Miss Hildur Wins

G. Sommers' Miss Hildur showed her liking for the track when she broke on top and led throughout the 6½ furlongs of the opening race to score by three lengths over B. W. Dulaney's Pushkin. Flick, after forcing the winner's pace for nearly the whole trip, lasted to save the third money. The winner paid $10.90. Directly after the race, My Dottie, which had broken a leg during the running, was destroyed.

Mrs. A. S. Bowman's Brainchild, beaten in her previous start by Way Out, one of her competitors today, came back in the second race and just breezed to a six-length victory over Osofree and Way Out. Under the guidance of Jockey Butsey Hernandez, Brainchild was second choice to Way Ont and returned the price of $7.90. Those coupling her with Miss Hildur, the 2 and 5 combination, were rewarded with $38.90.

Selections at Marlboro

Dear Al:

They tell me the best thing to do when you have a correction to make is to take care of it early and get it over with, so here goes. Willie Kelly, who gets back into action this coming Monday, will not go to Wheeling, as previously stated, but will remain in Maryland and take in the Timonium meeting. Pete Peterson, agent for Kelly, caught me up on this mistake. Glad to be corrected as long as it isn't too often. I am pleased to announce that A. F. Martinez, injured here earlier in the week, is getting along fine and expects to resume his saddle activities Monday at Timonium. I guess a lot of folks thought it was a mistake when they saw W. Kirk on the board Wednesday as the rider of Curves. It was no mistake, it was really Woody. He is still working for Dick Johnson and is awaiting the Havre de Grace meeting. During the first seven days of the meeting there were four different trainers who had scored a triple here. This list includes Charlie Feltner, Vernon Arthur, Joe Booker and Stumpy Cranford. Race Secretary Eddie Brennan received a wire from Trainer Jack Howard, from Saratoga, to notify him that Apprentice J. W. Carroll, under contract to E. D. Shaffer, had left his employer without permission. Howard asked trainers at the local plant not to harbor the lad. Condition books for the 10-day meeting at Timonium were distributed among the horsemen by Race Secretary Brennan. As might be expected, Monday's feature will be the Labor Day Handicap. This is a race of 6½ furlongs and has a purse of $1000. The steeplechase fans will also be in their glory again, for Monday will also be the running of the Robert M. Taylor Memorial Steeplechase, at 2 miles. Tiger Finkelstein has arranged with Len Carver, the van man, to ship his "bug" over to Timonium after Saturday's races.—BILL.

First race—DASHING DOE is second on the also eligible list but if able to break in it looks like she has a lock and key on this heat. BARACA is outclassed by the top one but so is everything else in the race. GENE MCCARTHY is speedy and may take a share.

Second race—SCOUT ABOUT was shipped down from New York and looks like the right one in this field. BLOCKADER has been training well and may surprise. PARADISE GIRL has a good race over this track and may go well.

Third race—LITTLE SUZANNE is a speedy youngster and I'm going to try to make her beat FAIR FLAME. It's a tough job but she will have Danny Scocca to help her out. CARMADA should be no worse than third.

Fourth race—DEODO was five lengths in front last out over a distance and before that ran a corking race to be second to LENA GIRL. Must be given the call on races over this strip. CUT EMERALD was off last and had little chance in that last start. FLYING CHARGER is an invader from New York that may take it all.

Fifth race—It seems like ELTONHEAD is entered every day but I will still have to string along. LAST BET has two seconds here, one behind HAPPY LARK, and may improve enough to take top money. CARTEL would appreciate more distance but must be given a chance.

Sixth race—I'm trying to come up with a real good thing and take SECOND BEST to beat this cheap field. Last race was bad but ran with the best here. MY EXIT will be picking horses up in last quarter. LADY MOWLEE should improve.

Seventh race—TONIANNA appeared a winner last out but was a trifle short. Seems the best and is worth a wager. CURVES could take it all if able to find racing room on the rail. MAETAKE is a consistent sort.

Eighth race—It looks like BROOKE HEROD has reached top form and I believe this is the right choice and will be hard to beat. CREDENCE could threaten if able to start.

Best bet—Dashing Doe.

Capital Store Sales Up 33% In Latest Week

Department store sales in Washington in the week ended August 23 were 33 per cent heavier than in the same week last year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported last night. In the four weeks ended August 23, store volume here was 39 per cent heavier than last year.

The sustained upsurge in retail sales this year has been one of the brightest spots in a glowing Washington business picture.

Department store registers rang merrily throughout the fifth Federal Reserve district during the week ended August 23. The area gain for the week was 36 per cent and for the four-week period was 40 per cent as compared with last year.

Food Prices Spurt in Week

Wholesale prices of foods again increased sharply during the latest weekly period. After holding fairly level throughout most of the month, the wholesale food price index compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., recorded a rise of 1.6 per cent between August 19 and August 26. At $3.26, the latest index was 97c or 12.4 per cent above its level a year ago, and represented a new high in wholesale food prices since October, 1929.

Increases in individual foods outnumbered decreases during the week four to one. Foods showing higher prices included wheat, rye, bacon, lard, butter, cheese, oats, cottonseed oil, cocoa, peas, eggs, potatoes, prunes, hogs, and sheep. Lower prices were recorded for flour, corn, rice and lambs.

Index represents the sum total of the price per pound of 31 foods in general use.

Snag Seen in Home Building

Wilfred H. Blanz secretary of The American Building Association said yesterday that the Administration's priority policy is curtailing home construction in the Washington area. Defense headquarters centered here, he said, are constantly augmenting their staffs and the problem of housing defense workers is growing more acute.

Mr. Blanz believes the Government should release materials needed for home building so Washington's dwelling construction may be kept apace of the growing population.

Mr. Blanz concluded by saying that one could build the exterior of a house but the policy of priorities prevented builders from finishing the interiors because of the shortage of materials.

July Indices Soar

Mirroring the growing defense boom and a rush for many kinds of consumer goods, the monthly industrial indices of the National Industrial Conference Board soared in July, with the index of new orders reaching a record.

The board, a private statistical organization, bases all its indices on the average of 1935-'39 as 100. On this basis new orders last month were 157, up 12 per cent from the previous month, and 71 per cent higher than a year ago.

Manufacturers' inventories stood at 119.9 on the index, 3.5 per cent above the previous month and 21.4 per cent over last year.

Capital Transit Dividend

Directors of Capital Transit Co., at the regular monthly meeting yesterday declared a dividend of 25 cents a share, amounting to $60,000, on the 240,000 shares of capital stock, payable October 1, to stockholders of record at the close of business on September 15. A similar amount was paid in the previous quarter.

Five-Fold Increase In Plane Engines Output Mapped

East Hartford, Conn., Aug. 28 (AP). The United Aircraft Corporation announced today that its expansion program was designed to raise the output of Pratt & Whitney airplane engines here and in licensed plants elsewhere to a total of about 8,250,000 horsepower per month—more than five times the present production—by July, 1943.

Added facilities and plans for more subcontracting to raise production here and the licensing of four other manufacturers—Ford, Buick, Chevrolet and Jacobs Aircraft of Pottstown, Pa.—have been announced from time to time but figures for the program as a whole were first revealed today.

The plant here, now producing 1,600,000 horsepower monthly, expects to hit 1,800,000 by New Year's, 2,000,000 by July, 1942, and 2,830,000 by July, 1943.

Engineering Awards Leap 55% in Week

New York, Aug. 28 (AP).—Heavy engineering awards rose sharply this week to $124,233,000, a gain of 55 per cent from the previous week and 116 per cent greater than the corresponding week of 1940, Engineering News-Record reported today.

Public construction was responsible for the rise, gaining 71 per cent over the previous week and 187 per cent over the same week a year ago. Private contracts were 5 per cent and 12 per cent lower, respectively, than the week before and a year ago.

U. S. Public Spends One Hour Out of Eight to Build Defense

How will the war affect your pocketbook?

Leon Henderson, head of the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply, writing in the October issue of the American Magazine, says "Your pockets will be full, but don't worry—you won't have such a fat pocketbook long."

"In fact," he adds, "that pocketbook has already developed leaks, and in the future is going to have to buy much more than your daily needs. Your pocketbook and mine will be buying defense."

And the drain on the old purse, Henderson intimates, is going to be terrific.

Price for Freedom

"We'll buy it through taxes, and those taxes are going to seem very high, indeed, when we compare them with the taxes we paid last year," he writes. "A price is high, however, only in relation to what it buys. And could any man's son of you name a price that would be too high to pay for freedom from the Nazi straitjacket?

"There'll be two kinds of taxes; income and excise taxes, that is, taxes on particular products like radios, cosmetics, movies, automobiles. These taxes, however, are only two of seven demands these times are making on that pocketbook of yours."

Taking a look at defense buying, Henderson says that this past year we spent seven billion dollars for defense and the spending will soon be around one billion dollars a month. He explains that this means that out of eight hours of the production day, one hour is spent on building defense. In Germany, he adds, they spend five out of eight hours building military goods.

Spending to Lead

"In this next year we'll spend between 20 and 30 billions," he writes. "That means that next spring we shall be spending two out of our eight hours on military production and before we're really going strong we shall have to be spending three or three and one-half hours out of the eight. We've got to outproduce Hitler, and one hour a day won't do it."

Henderson warns that "you are going to have to save more money and you'd better decide for yourself to save money for your own good and for the good of the Nation, because, if you don't decide to, your own Congressmen will decide for you, and then we'll go in for forced saving."

Warns of Inflation

"There is one thing about those rising prices that I am sure I know. One thing so deadly to what we are building now, to what we hope for in the future, that I am shouting 'beware'."

He refers to inflation.

"Inflation is disaster," he writes, "bankruptcy. Depression. Ruin. Idleness. Revolt. It can lose both the war and the peace for us. It can sink our standards of living below misery levels. It can corrode our values in living into a jazz age of tinsel and irresponsibility."

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 28 (AP).—Wheat, oats and soybeans prices hit new peaks since 1937 today before reacting due to profit taking. Wheat later lost all its advance of almost a cent, but oats and beans, as well as other gains, held net gains.

Buying which was active in all pits at times came from processors including mills, feed makers and bean crushers, and professional interests. Some of the purchases apparently were for removal of hedges against sales of processed commodities, including flour, but brokers attributed the bulk of the buying to bullishness in view of increased industrial activity and Government price supporting activities.

Early gains of as much as ¾ cent in the wheat pit, which lifted May, 1942, contracts to $1.21⅞, were wiped out and ½-cent losses substituted at one stage. However, wheat closed unchanged to ⅝ lower compared with yesterday; September, 1.13⅜@1.13⅝; December, 1.17⅛@1.17⅜; May, 1.20¾@1.20⅝. Corn closed ⅛ to ¾ higher; September, 77½; December, 81⅝@81½. New York Cotton

Gains running to more than $1 a bale were quickly eliminated and final prices were 4 to 8 points net lower. Commission brokers attributed the reversal to a weakened speculative structure, pointing out that the market had shot up about $4 a bale in the last few days. Trade and mill interests withdrew some of their support on the morning advance.

Until the market turned a dominant influence had been reported heavy boll damage and unwanted rains overnight in portions of the Central and Eastern belts.

$170,000,000 Soybean Crop Set for Harvest

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 28.—The highest soybean prices in four years, with Chicago quotations more than double those of a year ago, were regarded by market experts today as a virtual guarantee that farmers would attempt to harvest the largest crop on record when cutting begins next month.

They estimated that if prices did not recede and farmers harvested about 109,000,000 bushels, as forecast in the latest Government report, the new bean crop might have a market value close to $170,000,000, or almost $100,000,000 above last year.

Bean prices have risen more than 75 per cent since the first of the year. At $1.67 a bushel for old No. 2 yellow beans yesterday, the price was 85 cents higher than a year ago. In the active Board of Trade future pit prices ranged from $1.54⅞ to $1.61⅝, depending on delivery, compared with around 73 to 76 a year ago.

The bean pit was enlarged for the third time today to accommodate a rapidly growing volume of business. The latest carpentry work on the trading floor has almost doubled the working capacity. Volume of trade last week involved almost 18,000,000 bushels of beans compared with only 353,000 bushels a year ago.

Trade experts said the current attractive prices, which they attributed largely to war-induced demand for oil, now the most valuable product derived from bean crushing, probably would encourage producers to harvest a larger percentage of the soybean acreage for beans rather than hay. The Government has modified restrictions so that this can be done without farmers incurring additional deductions in benefit payments.

Reserve Margin Of Power Placed At 10 Million K.W.

New York, Aug. 28 (AP).—The electric light and power industry will have an installed generating capacity of 45,000,000 kilowatts by the end of 1941 to meet a peak load estimated at 35,000,000 kilowats, Col. H. S. Bennion, vice president and managing director of the Edison Electric Institute, said today in an Institute bulletin.

While the statistics indicated an adequate supply of power in the large power consuming areas, Col. Bennion said there was no guaranty against shortages of some weeks duration in water power areas in the event of extreme drought.

Present figures also do not insure against some local shortages, he added, particularly if in a certain area the Government places a munition plant requiring power far in excess of what that region previously has been called on to supply.

"It is true that margins of reserve are not quite so wide as they were two years ago," he said, "but this is reasonably to be expected in an emergency period."

Freight Loadings Up 1.1% in Week

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday that 899,750 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ending last Saturday.

This was an increase of 9376 cars, or 1.1 per cent, compared with the preceding week; an increase of 138,642 cars, or 18.2 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 215,844 cars, or 31.6 per cent, compared with 1939.

Miscellaneous freight, coal and livestock led the rise in total carloadings. The increase, however, was slightly less than seasonal.

First Half Steel Nets Hit by Higher Costs

New York, Aug. 28 (AP).—The American Iron & Steel Institute today reported that total net earnings of steel companies in the first half of 1941 were 1 per cent above the last half of 1940 while production increased 9 per cent to near-capacity volume.

Higher operating costs, said the institute, accounted for the small gain in profits in relation to the expansion in output.

Covered by the survey were 80 companies representing over 90 per cent of the industry's steel making capacity with total first half earnings of $174,105,000 after all charges but before dividends. These earnings were at the annual rate of less than 8.9 per cent on investment.

The agreement was made in order to make Thai currency available in Japan.

Domestic futures after a period of steadiness turned downward to close 1 to 6 lower. Sales, 4050 tons.

Bank Idle Cash Continues Dip To New Depths

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board announced yesterday that lendable excess reserves of banks fell below five billion dollars last week for the first time in recent years.

Continuing a trend which has whittled idle money down from the record seven billion dollar level, excess reserves declined 70 million dollars to a total of $4,990,000,000 in the week ended August 27.

Last week's decrease was due mostly to a seasonal increase in money in circulation. The largest recent decreases, however, have been due to Government borrowing, and sale of tax anticipation notes.

Westinghouse El. To Seek 60 Million In New Capital

New York, Aug. 28 (AP).—Stockholders of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. were told today by A. W. Robertson, chairman, that unprecedented expansion in business, due largely to national defense program, has created a need for approximately 60 million dollars in new capital.

The Westinghouse expansion program, under way for two years, involves the investment of 75 million dollars in buildings and manufacturing equipment, Robertson said, in addition to 52 million dollars worth of plants being constructed for and at the expense of the Federal Government.

The new capital would be used to repay existing bank loans, to provide further plant construction and to supply enlarged working capital requirements. A special meeting of stockholders has been called for Wednesday, October 29, at East Pittsburgh, Pa., to consider authorizing an increase in the company's indebtedness, a necessary step in the financing program, it was explained.

Boston, Aug. 28 (AP).—Directors of Brown & Sharpe Manufacturing Co., machine tools, declared an extra dividend of $3 and the regular quarterly dividend of $1.50, both payable September 10 to holders of record August 30.

Including these disbursements dividend payments thus far in 1941 total $16.50 a share. In 1940 the company paid $21 a share.

Abbott Votes Extra

Chicago, Aug. 28 (AP).—Directors of Abbott Laboratories declares today an extra dividend of 10 cents a share in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of 40 cents on the common stock, both payable September 30 to stockholders of record September 11.

Aircrafts Buoyant in Irregular Stock List; Japanese Bonds Spurt on Reported Peace Move

New York, Aug. 28.—Aircrafts and a number of "blue chips" performed on the recovery stage in today's stock market but many so-called leaders remained in the background.

The list showed an inclination to extend the late August comeback at the start in fairly active dealings. There was a later slipup and volume slackened. Aviation revived after midday and advances predominated at the close. While there were a few gainers of a point or so, most advances were in fractions and losers were plentiful.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks held a net gain of .2 of a point at 43.7. Since August 21 this composite has not finished with a minus mark. Of 680 issues traded, 312 were up, 185 down and 183 held at Wednesday's final levels. Transfers of 401,000 shares compared with 432,410 the day before.

Lack of urgent offerings in the past week or so rather than any outstanding news situation, brokers said, accounted for most of the modest bidding that appeared. Business items were moderately favorable but even here there were exceptions. Last week's freight loadings, for instance, were up less than seasonal. Continuing handicaps included broadening Federal industrial restraints, shortages of materials in many lines, lack of a definite tax program and skepticism over international developments notwithstanding the apparent easing of Japanese tension.

Boeing and Consolidated aircraft went into new high ground for the year. In front also were Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Air Reduction, American Can, Westinghouse, Eastman Kodak, Union Carbide, Sears Roebuck, Kennecott, United States Rubber, Standard Oil (N. J.), Great Northern, American Telephone and du Pont.

Richfield Oil and Pepsi-Cola, fast climbers in recent sessions, weakened on profit selling. United States Steel, Bethlehem and General Motors registered no variation at all while Chrysler, Republic Steel and Youngstown Sheet were up ⅛ each. Declines were shown for Santa Fe, New York Central, Southern Pacific, Western Union and Woolworth.

Edging forward in the curb were Bell Aircraft, Brewster Aero, American Cyanamid "B", American Gas, Pantepec and Venezuelan Petroleum. Turnover here was around 101,000 shares versus 93,000 yesterday.

The bond market was liberally sprinkled with gains of a point or more in special issues today as the main corporate list hovered in a narrow range with the trend steady.

Japanese issues rallied vigorously late in the day on reports in financial circles that strong moves were afoot to iron out that country's differences with other world powers.

Japan 5½ closed up 6½ points at 43½, Yokohoma 6s gained 6 at 38 and Tokyo Electric Light 6s advanced 3 to 34. Others in the group improving 1 to around 3 including Oriental Development 6s and

98,200 Fans See Chicago Bears Win

Franck, however, was the spark of the All-Americans. When he left the game with a torn shoulder late in the third quarter, the 98,200 gave him a noisy acclaim. They had seen him carry a kickoff 40 yards, break up a dozen running plays of the Bears with smashing tackles, and lead the interference.

Little Charley O'Rourke authored the finest pass of the ball game and Robinson made it stick for the Collegians' fourth-quarter touchdown. It was a superbly-timed 40-yard lob by the skinny O'Rourke far down field and Robinson made the catch over his shoulder to step off eight more yards to the goal.

But just as the Redskins were befuddled by the Bears' T-formation and the variety of plays that spring from it, the All-Americans were helpless tonight to stem the assault of the hard-hitting pros. With Sid Luckman handling the ball from center, and the Bears seemingly running in all directions at once, the College boys were discomboberated. Wide end runs that evolved as passes, fake spinners and reverses, men in motion suddenly popping up with or without the ball, the Bears rolled up 21 first downs, eleven by rushing.

So the Bears Are Moving

Save when Harmon was cutting loose on his cut-back plays, the All-Americans were making little headway against the burly line of the Bears. They made 11 first downs, only five by rushing.

The Bears sort of rubbed it in, in the last period. The second of their three touchdowns of the quarter was executed by no less than the hoary "sleeper" play. George McAfee, aimlessly wandering toward the sidelines as if going to the bench suddenly found himself in naked territory. Luckman stepped up the beat of the snap-back for this play, did nothing fancy with the ball except slam it to the uncovered McAfee and it was another touchdown. Not a collegian was within ten yards of McAfee as he crossed the goal line.

The second time they gained possession of the ball in the first quarter, the Bears came up with a touchdown. Gaining the ball when Harmon was smeared on the fourth down by Dick Plasman for a nine-yard loss while attempting a pass, the Bears marched 52 yards for the score. Luckman threw two passes in the advance, one to Osmanski for a five-yard gain and the second to Kavanaugh for the touchdown. Kavanaugh took the ball far down the middle, out-maneuvering defenders Harmon and Franck, and ran ten yards farther for the touchdown. The play covered 38 yards.

Frank Returns 40 Yards

Franck and Harmon rallied the College boys immediately and they tied the score. Franck set the touchdown in motion with a scintillating 40-yard return of the kickoff before he was tackled on his own 46 by Forte. Harmon and Franck tore off moderate gains at the end and Harmon then passed for 15 yards to his old Michigan teammate, Ed Frutig, to put the ball on the Bears' 24. Two plays later he got off his touchdown passes to Franck. The Collegians failed to take the lead when Ruffa's placement kick was partially blocked.

The Bears staged a potent exhibition of their power to move back into the lead in the second quarter. They marched 75 yards in 15 plays with Luckman handling the ball around to McAfee, Clark and Famlegletti on the trick stuff that made the play difficult to follow. Eventually Clark plunged over from the 1-foot line on a shot at left guard that carried him far beyond the goal. The Collegians were never in Bear territory in that second quarter.

Artoe Makes the Dropkick

Big Joe Maniaci bulled the ball into the All-Americans' territory at the outset of the third quarter and when the Collegians finally stopped him on their own 37-yard line. Artoe got the field-goal call. With Luckman holding the ball on the 47-yard line, the big tackle slammed it end over end through the post for the longest field-goal in the history of the series.

Harmon tore off his finest running gains in this period, with one sprint of 12 yards and another of 13 creating a dither in the darkness that held the crowd, but eventually the Bears held on their own 10-yard line, and marched the ball back to the Collegians' 10 before they were stopped by a fumble.

The Collegians suddenly found themselves back in the ball game at the start of the fourth quarter when O'Rourke and Robinson engineered their touchdown pass that cut the Bears lead to 16-13. Augie Lio, of Georgetown, place-kicked the extra point.

Bears Surge Back

But the Bears surged back quickly. Luckman put 'em in motion with a jaunt of 45 yards on the kickoff and McAfee picked up 12 more.

With McAfee, not Luckman, passing, the Bears got a break from the referee when interference was ruled against Standlee, of Stanford, on a pass to Kavanaugh in the end zone. The Bears got the ball on the 1-yard line and Clark moved it over.

The sleeper play was the Bears' next touchdown offering, and then two of their rookies launched another touchdown. Young Bussey, of L. S. U., in at quarterback, flung a long pass to Ray McLean, of St. Anselm, for a gain that netted 69 yards before McLean was run outside on the Collegians' 3-yard line. On the fourth down the Bears scored when Bussey's pass bounced out of the hands of Whitlow, of the Collegians, into the arms of George Washington University's Bob Nowasky, of the Bears, who was standing by in the end zone. That happened 15 seconds before the game ended.

Central Boys Club Downs Hearst A.C., 6-1, in Play-Off

In the city-wide playoff of the Boys Club of Washington Insect League, the Central Branch Browns turned back the Hearst A. C., 6 to 1, behind the three-hit pitching of Pete Chipouras.

Previously Central Branch won the central division and Hearst triumphed in the western division.

Play will continue Tuesday when the Central Branch champions meet the eastern division winners at Fairlawn.

creased from 200 to 300 men in two years. Natives and near-natives bemoan the fact that the city is growing so fast.

I met Stewart Lake, the man who wrote the story and movie, "Wells Fargo," the other night at the ball game—San Diego vs. Portland, Pacific Coast League. He said he wandered out here in 1923 and forgot to leave. By the way, old Herman Pilette, who used to pitch in the big leagues, is still hurling for San Diego and he's 45 years old. The local fans call him "Old Folks."

This is a fishing and running paradise around here. They are catching swordfish from 100 to 300 pounds every day. Somebody presented one to the Redskins and it was the main dish last Friday. I put some away, myself, along with other groceries, and it tasted fine. The hardy sportsmen go over to Mexico. There's 800 miles of coast below the border that hasn't a population of more than 800 persons.

There's a big rivalry between San Diego and Los Angeles on the subject of weather. The locals tell me that San Diego has summer temperature 10 degrees cooler than L. A.

Didn't I tell you this was a boom town, Boss? You know that movie sing I referred to earlier. Well, instead of "All Seats 20 Cents" that sign now reads "All Seats 27 Cents!" Sounds like a gag, but I'll take an oath on a stack of Bibles.

Always your ace,
POUNDS HAIGHT.

P. S.—Coach Ray Flaherty looked at me this afternoon and asked, "Say Haight, did you ever play football?" All I could say was, "Shucks, Coach, this is so sudden."

Morris' Pigeon Wins First Race

Dark Angel, young homing pigeon, from Morris Brothers' loft, took first honors in the opening race of the current young bird series held by the Capital City Racing Pigeon Club from Cumberland, Md., 110 miles airline.

Dark Angel averaged approximately 39 miles per hour or 1127 yards per minute against a handicapping headwind. Liberation was at 8 a. m., and the winner was timed at 10:50 a. m.

ly after getting in a hole, and with the bases filled Appling sliced a single to right that got two runs home and upped Chicago's lead to 3 to 0.

In the fifth, Kolloway beat out an infield tap to Bloodworth and inspired another Chicago run. Kuhel forced him at second and then promptly stole second, not against Catcher Al Evans, but against Sundra. Taffy Wright slugged him home with a single to right.

Bill Zuber and Walter Masterson shut the Sox out thereafter, but it was in a vain cause, what with Lee out there rendering the Nats helpless. The Nats muffed their best scoring chance in the first inning when Case hit the first pitch for a single to center and was abandoned on base by Cramer, Lewis and Travis.

Travis' batting average took something of a sock when he grounded out twice and fanned once in three times at bat. . . . Jimmy Bloodworth overrated himself when he tried to stretch a single to a double in the second inning and Ben Chapman threw him out. Two were out and it was worth the gamble. . . . Travis was wonderful when he speared Lodigiani's line drive in the second inning with a one-hand lunge toward left field. . . . The Nats wound up their Western trip with seven victories against five defeats, their best showing of the year on the road. . . . They entrained for Washington last night encountering an open date tomorrow and the Yankees Saturday at Griffith Stadium. . . . Manager Bucky Harris stayed in Chicago for tonight's football game and will fly to Washington in the morning.

OH, I'M SORRY, MR. BIBBS!
HEREAFTER, I WANT YOU TO WRITE EVERYTHING I SAY!
YES, SIR!
ONE HOUR LATER
HERE'S THAT LETTER TO MR. BUNKLE EXACTLY AS YOU DICTATED IT—
FINE! LET ME READ IT!
Dear Mr. Bunkle—
Let's see, what'll I tell the old Jackass? In reply to yours of the 23rd, we were surprised to learn that the last ship-ment of our new-styled rolling-pins were unsatisfactory. We had to sell 'em asick before they fell apart.
Our pins are all inspected thoroughly before they leave the factory and—that's a nice dress you have on. New, isn't it?
We never get any complaints on this item. I hope the wife leaves for the weekend today. I've invited the boys in for poker tonight. Return the shipment and we will make some adjustment.
Sincerely yours,
Just sign it yourself!

A GREAT DEAL, NOW I CAN TELL YOU MY PLAN.
I HAVE HYPNOTIZED SUPERMAN INTO A STATE IN WHICH HE WILL DO EVERY-THING EXACTLY THE OPPOSITE OF WHAT HE INTENDS. A FUNDAMENTAL LAW OF MAN IS THAT OF SELF-PRESERVATION. MY THEORY IS, THAT WHILE DOING THE OPPOSITE OF WHAT HE INTENDS, HE WILL DESTROY HIMSELF!
IF WHAT YOU SAY IS TRUE, GREAT! BUT I FIND IT HARD TO BELIEVE!
YOU DOUBT ME? THEN I'LL OFFER PROOF! AND THE GIRL WILL BE MY HYPNOTIC SUBJECT!

If you're inclined to think—as who isn't—that you have some long-lost relative who's made a pile and who hasn't left it to you simply because he didn't know where you were, you should buy James Waters' new book, "The Court of Missing Heirs."

It lists about 2000 unclaimed estates lying around fallow, so to speak, in surrogates' offices throughout the country. The book is based on the program, "Are You A Missing Heir?" which is heard over WJSV and the Columbia network every Tuesday night at 7 and it does the same thing the program does, calling attention to the estates, announcing who the heirs are and so forth, except that the book can list them in larger doses than the radio program.

Waters was studying law nights at De Paul University in Chicago and working on the Herald-Examiner as a reporter when he got the idea for his book in 1932. His work had taken him into surrogates' courts and he'd thought it was a shame to see all that nice money lying around unclaimed. So he listed some hundreds of the cases, wrote them up as dramatically as he could and tried to sell the book, but no publisher would take it. Then about four years ago he conceived the idea of making a radio program out of the thing.

It's a token of the show's success that heirs to practically two million dollars have been discovered by it.
